"The chief of the operative," the Sun said, "known as 'K-4' in reports and telephone conversations, according to a former associate, is Harold C. Keyes, a retired agent of the United States secret service.

"It was K-4 who led a party of investigators to the Bronx to get letters to the shores of Centre pond, near Bechet, Mass., on April 1." The Sun said, two days before Bruno Richard Hauptmann was executed for the slaying of the Lindbergh baby.

The object of the search, the Sun said, was "a little black bag" which a resident said was carried by Dr. John F. Condon, "father of the Lindbergh case, when he stayed at a cottage at the pond for some time in May, 1932.

Flax Crop Heavy

Approximately 6,300 acres of flax were grown for fibre purposes in Canada during 1935. From this area the production was: seed 87,300 bushels, 10,000 pounds of straw and 5,950 tons. The total value of the production of seed, fibre and tow in 1935 is estimated by the Dominion Experimental Farms at $221,350.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MAY 31

THE LAST SUPPER

Golden text: This do in remembrance of me. Luke 22:19.

Lesson: Luke 22:1-38.

Devotional reading: I. Corinthians 11:23-29.

Explanations And Comments.

The Paschal Feast was a family feast, at which the head of the family presided. Here was a new kinship. Away back in his ministry he had said one day, "Who is my mother, who are my brethren, and my sisters?" They that do the will of God.' Here they were, that little group with him, the new family." (G. Campbell Morgan).

When Jesus and his disciples were seated for the meal, Jesus spoke to them with great intensity of feeling, saying: "With desire I have desired to eat this Paasover with you before I suffer." We can readily understand his special wish to partake of that meal with his disciples. The occasion pointed back to a most memorable event which reminded them of the beginning of their life as the people of God, and in the institution of the Lord's Supper he would link old and new together.

And he received a cup and gave thanks. "During the Passover feast the cup was circulated four times, each time having a symbolic value. The last cup was always the cup of joy. That is why our Lord said, Luke refers."

For I say unto you, I shall not eat it, until it is fulfilled in the Kingdom of God. "Probably what was meant was that although this was his last meal in the body with his disciples, after the resurrection he would be present with them in spirit every time they ate and drank in remembrance."

The Institution of the New Feast

the Lord's Supper, Luke 22:19, 20. Then Jesus took bread, and when he had given thanks he brake it, and gave to them, saying: This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. By this we recall me to mind, even as the partaking of the Paschal feast revelled to the Jews their deliverance from Egyptian bondage.

And the cup in like manner after supper, saying, This cup is the new covenant in my blood, even that which is poured out for you. A sacrificial cup was usually offered in ratification of a covenant. "In the contrast of the two cups," Dr. Bruce says, "is clearly a reference to Jeremiah 31:31 as well as to Exodus 24:8." (A. B. Carvle).

Vimy Pilgrimage

Canadian Legionnaires To Be Guests Of French Government

Several hundred Canadian legionnaires, planning to make a pilgrimage of Vimy Ridge in July for the unveiling of the Canadian national memorial, were convinced there's no such thing as 50,000,000 Frenchmen can't be wrong.

Their conviction followed the invitation of the French Government to attend the ceremonies, which will open the vegetables going through a dry spell that year, a few pails of water or an hour or two with the hose at the time they're planted, he said. Where the supply of water is not as convenient as might be it is a good plan, in laying out the garden, to plant those things most in need of extra moisture, such as radish, lettuce and celery, closest to the pump. Fertilizer is another way of burrying growth and, therefore, assisting vegetables of the highest quality

"I wish I hadn't bought that CHEAP MUSTARD!"

"I am surprised at you. You know KEEN'S is the best."

"Well, I thought when I was pushing up my profits that I could serve some money by buying cheap mustard. But never again! Cheap mustard has not the flavour, the strength or the keeping quality. I've learnt my lesson. I'm going to buy the best — KEEN'S D.S.F. MUSTARD."

Made from seed grown in the Fens of England. Shells or hulls are removed and only the inner part of the seed is used. Superfine grinding ensures the full mustard flavour.

25,000 COPIES NEW ALBERTA TOUR BOOKLETS

Making a strong appeal to tourists to the province to spend a month or more of vacationing and are used and attractively illustrated, a new booklet has just been issued by the publicity bureau of the Department of Trade and Industry.

More than 25,000 copies of the booklet have been printed for distribution in Canada and the United States. Highlights of the booklet are being sent to the old country, France and other countries. It has been printed by officials of the Alberta House immigration interest to tourists.

Page after page of the booklet is devoted to the province's recreational facilities, while other sections contain general information for the use of visitors make the booklet something that will be treasured by its recipients.

Copies have been sent to points in Canada and the United States so as to [illegible] meet the needs of organizations such as encouraging the tourist traffic.

A busy highway map of Alberta, issued by the department of trade and industry, is also being distributed with the booklet. It shows the province's main highways, and also the scenic routes of interest. Also shown on the map are the provincial parks, and the location of the various forest reserves. The booklet is profusely illustrated with pictures of scenes in the province, and the map is also illustrated with pictures of scenes in the Rockies and the most appeal of the districts being well blended. On the other side is a picture of His Majesty King Edward VIII and a view of his ranch farm at Pekisko. Also mentioning which should prove of rare interest to tourists.

A handy guide for the motorist, the booklet also contains sectional maps of Alberta highways. It also is made up so as to be mailed conveniently.

Making a strong bid for a record tourist movement to Alberta, this booklet was printed by the [illegible] Printing Co. Edmonton

OUR OLD FASHIONED GIRLS

People who have been bewailing the passing of the old fashioned girl, will probably rub their eyes in wonderment at the latest hobby of the town are girls in Vermilion These girls have taken to knitting and fancy work with a vengeance. Lately there has been a series of afternoon knitting teas at which the young ladies gather and knit. The articles turned out from their nimble needles certainly rival those made by grandmother. They belong to the line of domestic art has shown a decided increase during the past year

PROMPT ACTION IMPERATIVE

Prompt action is necessary if the Vermilion children's contest summer asset is to be saved for this season. This is the old swimming pool, now nearly filled the sand pit. Water seeping its way through the C.N.R. dam below the swimming pool and as a result the river has lowered greatly and will continue to do so. C.N.R. officials have been notified of the break and it is to be hoped they will see fit to repair it immediately.

FARM DEBT SETTLEMENTS

Some 11,611 Canadian farmers with total debts of $24,000,000 have had this indebtedness reduced through application to the Farmers' Creditors' Arrangement Act by the end of 1935, $11,120. The aggregate annual interest saving to these farmers is $1,228,718

CANADIAN RAILWAYS DEPEND ON THE WEST

While the railway situation has improved in Canada it is patent that substantial recovery is dependent on improved agricultural conditions and better crops in Western Canada. The receipts from the movement of farm products in the west are the largest level since 1914 in the experience of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

But those with long experience in this country realize the many perils crops can encounter before harvest time. There is possibility of a good crop being produced, but that will take a lot of doing. Many factors, some of which interrelate are needed in the southern areas where subsoil moisture is lacking. If the weather proves to be a rainy one the central and northern areas will experience the wish of crops that will be added to by the latest of the season.

Western school districts plan to send a Canadian area to school which will be considerably larger than last year. The late season may have interrupted this progress but the chances are that in any event school acreage will be larger than last year.

We have the greatest confidence in growing wheat crops in Western Canada and drouths. The bulk of the wheat acreage lies in areas where the annual average rainfall is comparatively small. Ample moisture during the month of June is necessary to make a bountiful crop. There are other features of course which play an important part in crop yields Tax prospects. Some are from and rust. Serious rust infestation is an exception, but last season saw an excellent crop in Saskatchewan and Manitoba ruined by a rust plague Alberta has not yet had serious rust damage on a wide scale due to the fact that the prevalent winds are from the west and southwest. Many of Western Canada rust epidemic lies in the south being carried by southerly winds

WILDMERE WINKS

A large number of Wildmere-ites attended the show, "The Country Doctor" last week end and most of them enjoyed it very much. While there were some sad places there were also some good laughs. The writer of Wilma was born only a few miles from where that picture was made so the scenery looked home-like, and hospitals are no source there as was pictured too.

Jimmie Wallington received the sad news last week of the death of his sister (Lena) Mrs. Jim Ackley, at Ponoka Alta. He regretted very much that they did not send him a telegram so he could have attended the funeral.

On Sunday Eric Madill took the Basswood ball team over to play with Tofield team, he also had a number of sight-seers, twenty seven passengers all told. Triangle and Tofield played first, the score being 26 8 in favor of Tofield, then Basswood played the winners with the score 22-10 in favor of Basswood. A dainty lunch was laid by the Basswood and Wildmere ladies who semt along and a 24th of May picnic supper was enjoyed. After this a mixed ball game was played in which mostly everyone joined, some game eh folks! Oh, we must not to forget to mention Mr Jack Lyons, supported the two former games with satisfaction to all Next Sunday Tofield comes to Basswood

A real old time prairie fire raged in our district on Sunday last Mrs were called out to fight it to no avail hay and hay stacks on an open section. It started from a straw stack burned weeks ago and which had been lying smouldering all that time, till fanned by a breeze and renewed to action once more

Marjorie Crothers was a town visitor last week end staying in for the week-end with Mrs. Smith

J. L. Wallington and Scotty Macintosh were visitors at the H. Smith home in Wildmere on Sunday, he and Mrs Smith are well pleased with their new home among us

Miss Marion Gibbons Basswood spent the week end at the Scuffert home in Wildmere, visiting with her sister Mrs. F. Madill

Some funniest things seen and heard were—Reinnie taking in all bachelors to see "The Country Doctor" and the new name given Mr J Lyons's little car, "The Toonsville Trolley."

Don't forget the Club meeting on Saturday evening folks

WOOL
Will you help build a favourable market for Canadian wool by selling your wool to the trade as a graded product—all shipments to the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, limited, and graded by the Dominion Live Stock Branch. Car lots of graded wools are then sold by grades so that any buyer can obtain the grade of wool required. This is the only way to build lasting satisfactory markets.

ARE WE CHANGING?

"Is England—are we—changing." And if so, in what direction? Are we nicer or meaner than our fathers and mothers, our grandfathers and grandmothers. Are we better-mannered, more cultured, more capable; or are we more spoiled, more precocious, less respectful, less honest among ourselves? Are we growing up, and easier to live with? Or are we, as a nation, on the slopes of an infantile regression, lurking the character of those trained in a sterner age? The Economist.

An increase of nearly a million acres in the area sown to grain in Canada in 1936 is to be expected if the intentions of the farmers on May 1 are carried out, states the first statistical report of the present season.

ALBERTA WOOL : GRADING AND MARKETING

Sheep raising is an important phase of livestock production in Alberta, where the annual wool clip now exceeds some 2,000,000 pounds. There are two distinct groups: First—foundation or farm clips, mainly of lines produced by the old-fashioned method on the remote side. The wool from this group is largely of the Low Medium grade and Medium quality type. Second—the larger Range clips of Southern and Eastern Alberta where in Hampshire blood predominates and the wool runs to Fine and Fine Medium staple quality

Since 1912 a great deal of attention has been given to improving the quality and marketing methods of Canadian wool and today practically all Alberta wool sold commercially is handled in the grease with the fleeces rolled and tied intact as they are shorn. The use of binder twine for tying wool has been consistently discouraged with the result that practically all clips are now tied with the approved paper fleece twine Better Boosting accumulation and greater care in feeding has resulted in clips much more free from chaff and seeds though there is still room for further improvement in that direction.

Coincident with this development of a desire on the part of Canadian farmers to put up a better wool clip there has been a steady urge for improved methods in marketing The Dominion Department of Agriculture initiated its wool grading policy in 1913 and this policy has provided Alberta sheep raisers with first hand information on the selling advantages of improved wool production, as well as the value of selling wool according to grade.

In 1918 the various Wool Growers Associations throughout Canada were encouraged by both Dominion and Provincial Governments to organize a producers organization for the sale of graded wool. Accordingly these provincial organizations, represented by conference, brought into being the Canadian Co-Operative Wool Growers Limited, under the Dominion Companies Act Since 1918 the organization, operating in every province of the Dominion has handled something better than 70,000,000 pounds of Canadian wool for the proud growers of Canada and no small portion of that amount has originated each year from the Province of Alberta, where the growers are served by the following local collecting stations

Southern Alberta Sheep Breeders Association, Lethbridge Alta
Central Alberta Wool Growers Association Lacombe Alta
Alberta Provincial Sheep Breeders Association, Ltd., Edmonton Alta
Vermilion Wool Growers Associa-tion, Vermilion Alta
Eastern Alberta Wool Growers Association Hanna Alta.

WEDDING BELLS

A quiet wedding took place at Knox Church Manse, Lloydminster, on May 13th, when Miss Alice Eileen Willits, of Vermilion became the bride of Mr Edward Martin, also of Vermilion. Rev. Andrew Walker, minister of Knox Church, performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by Mr. Blair Wyatts and Mrs. A. Walker. — Lloydminster Times

ISLAND HILL

Major General Sir Robert McCarroll speaking before the Royal Society of Arts England gave the result of a scientific experiment with rats—two groups of rats were selected, they were equal in size, strength and health one group was fed on good wholesome food. The other group was fed the same kind of a diet that the average British settler in Alberta can afford namely white bread and unsweetened tea, a little milk, boiled cabbage, potatoes, cattle-1 foods, meats and jam This diet was given to the second group of rats. The first, as we said were given good balanced meals. At the end of a month the first group had grown sleek, fat and contented The other group had become restless timid and nervous and snapped at the attendants. At the end of the 30 days the first group had become playful and tame and seemed to be quite contented the other group had become very much inclined to eat cannibals and had begun to eat one another

She had now reached her ambition she is a school teacher and the expense of school and college was borne by her hard working parents who denied themselves many things so that their girl would successfully attain her objective When she began earning money her mother requested a share but what could the poor girl do. This is her reply to her mother's request—She was compelled to use all her spare cash to purchase clothes and boots for her pupils other wise she would have no one to teach' We do not know the location of this particular school district but we have no doubt that it contains a proportion of British settlers

The two items above will give you two very good reasons why the British Settlers of Alberta met on that unday at the Village hall Vermilion to request from the British Government repatriation or rehabilitation A great proportion of these settlers left the land on we should say established—but not the wherewithal to properly timber their children to be sent to school are forced to live in a class of food as Major General McCarroon proves will lead to rickets Infantile Mortality rate of these settlers risked their lives on the battlefields of Europe and practically all they received was the interest from Lloyd George that they could begin homes fit for heroes to live in In any sensible Government this could deeply are driven to revolutionary methods in a vain attempt to remedy matters. Poverty in the midst of plenty, all for want of a system as Major Douglas says of proper social ising the distribution of [illegible] which are enormous, billions of dollars.

FARMING IN A BIG WAY . . . Farmers like Imperial Oil products. One Alberta farmer, who for years has used only Marvelube Oil in his tractor, decided that the eight-year-old machine would need new pistons and cylinder sleeves, but when the machine was taken down it needed only new piston rings. "I honestly think your Marvelube has had a great deal to do with the life and performance of this tractor," he wrote.

TREASURE HUNTERS . . . When prospectors and miners took to the air, mining in Northern Canada began its greatest development. If you need tires or batteries the Atlas Brand will save you money.

MELBERTA MINUTES

Council at the M. D. of Melberta No. 166 met in the regular meeting in the municipal office Alsask, Sask., on Monday May 11th, 1936. All the councillors present with Alex Allanach, Reeve, in the chair.

Minutes of the proceeding meeting were read and approved.

Correspondence was received as follows: [illegible] Alberta Land & Cattle Co., accepting our offer of $12.00 per acre taken off the N.E. 23-37-1 for roadway according the Council built a proper fence around the diversion. This was ordered paid, $11.52; Manitoba sanatorium, asking for a payment on the arrears of requisitions. See instructed to reply that it is the intention of the council to press collection of taxes in the fall and close to able to pay something; George Allen, living on the N.E. 23-37-1, saying he had notice from the Supervisor of the Scottish immigrant Aide Society to move off the place. See instructed to write the Supervisor asking it it were possible for Allen to remain on the land for at least another year. Martin Challman, Manager, asking for more rushes for his family, council refused as he had already been given considerable clothing, the Old Age Pension Board, intervening on that Mr. Wm. Dunseith had asked for an increase to his pension, he is now getting $16.00 per month and the Board asked the opinion of the council in the matter. This was that Mr. Dunseith should get a full pension. Dept. of Immigration, Winnipeg, asking if the council had any objection to Jack Nix and his family coming from the States to live on his father's farm the E ½ 25-51-5-4. The council had no objections.

Messrs Allanach and McCallum were appointed a committee to investigate the Mrs. M. Ruttner case. This family is on relief and living in M.D. of Lakeview.

The secretary was instructed to write the Dept. as to what our authority is in the collection of taxes on school land under contract or lease and especially if the contract holder is in the Rural Credit Society. J.J. Hope was appointed a committee of one to take care of the Geo. Allan case should he not be allowed to remain on his land. It was decided to refund the $c per bushel charged farmers who bought Banner seed oats.

R.C. Southoff was given 150 bushels of seed wheat on a special application to the council. For, McCallum, Scott, Meakin and Steele Against Allanach and Hope.

A motion to have office hours from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. was lost as also was an amendment where 9 a.m. was substituted for 10 a.m. Wild Land tax of $16.56 for the year 1932 on the S.E. ¼ 24-51-4-4 was refused as this land was under lease at the time.

It was decided to spend 55% of the [illegible] levy on public works but, when it came to allocating this among the divisions, the council could not agree. A motion that each division be allowed to spend 55% of its current levy was lost as also one where the appointment would be divided equally among the divisions. Come quently nothing further was done in the matter.

During to the delay in procuring the Tax notices, over which the council had no control, the period allowed for the 10% discount was extended to June 30th.

KELWORTH KRACKLINGS

Several of the folks from this district were seen at the play staged by the Kitscoty young people in Islay on May 1. The play was entitled, "Here Comes Charlie" and was one of the best amateur productions seen here in years. The following Friday a concert was held in town when the Islay high school pupils and teachers were the artists with several adults helping. Several of the younger generation attended from this district and Lyle Anson was the winner of the prize for the lucky ticket, lucky boy, Lyle.

Quite a number of the boys went over in a dance at Lavoie school, east of here on Friday night. They reported a good time and the usual big crowd. Yours truly also saw the show at Vermilion last week end, entitled The Country Doctor. It was a deeply interesting story. Amusing at times, pathetic at others. The real stars were the Dionne Quints. They certainly are cute little girls and their survival is a wonderful tribute to medical science.

Service was held in the school at Kelworth last Sunday when the Rev. Mr. MacPherson preached an excellent temperance sermon to a congregation of 27. The hymns were accompanied by Miss Rowena Anson. At the close of the service Mr. MacPherson remarked on the singing and wished that he had some of the good singers to help out in his other church.

It was arranged to hold an Institute meeting at Mrs. Simmons home on Wednesday May 27. All the ladies of the district caring to join will be welcome.

The Kelworth boys softball team played Islay in the town on Saturday evening last and were trimmed by a score of 24-1. Practice makes perfect, boys.

As this seems to be quite a busiest this week we will have to leave out the "no wonder" until next time.

Most of the seed is in the ground now and gardens are well on the way to being finished. We hope those terrible winds of last week didn't come back and that we will get some nice warm growing weather. As space will not permit much more, cheerio until next time.

NEW YORK, May 26.—Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight boxing champion, and Rita Jay, show girl, were married on Thursday "somewhere in New Jersey."

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALL HOUSEHOLDERS

The town had its general clean up day—all streets and lanes and private property have been cleared of garbage and refuse and it now devolves upon householders and others to observe the By Law which prohibits the dumping of slops, garbage and ashes on any lane or street. Observance from a sanitary standpoint alone need not be emphasized, as it is generally known that the indiscriminate dumping of refuse is a prolific source of possible contagion when infested with flies.

[illegible] and water be thrown on said ground and ashes and garbage dumped into cans. A small corner of the lot will take care of this.

The lanes and streets must be kept clear as short ups will be made and infractions of the By-Law dealt with by the law.

Protection Of Wild Life

Not any too soon, an awakened interest in conservation of wild life and particularly game birds and animals, fur-bearing animals and fish is noted on both sides of the international boundary. This renaissance, if it can be called such, is most timely in view of the probable early extinction of many important and indeed valuable animals and birds if present wasteful methods are to be allowed to continue very much longer

It is true that governments on both sides of the line have entered into agreements for the protection of some of the best known game birds and a good many regulations have been adopted by state and provincial governments for internal protection of a much wider range of both birds and animals of economic value to mankind, but that alone is not sufficient to ensure perpetuation of a great heritage

True conservation cannot be attained until the great majority of the farmers in the country and sportsmen in the cities, towns and villages constitute themselves unofficial game wardens and use their utmost endeavors to protect harmless wild life both by example and precept.

Many thousands of men in the prairie provinces are already doing this, but maximum results cannot be achieved until practically everybody is imbued with the necessity of conserving one of the greatest gifts of Nature to humanity.

Both in the United States and Canada lovers of the great outdoors have become thoroughly alarmed at the decimation which has taken place in recent years in the flocks of game birds, both those that inhabit the uplands and those which migrate twice a year from the one country to the other. A similar apprehension at the rapid diminution of herds and flocks of wild game animals is being frequently voiced, and not without justification, as magazines and newspaper articles both north and south of the 49th parallel.

In the United States, where organized governmental activities have resulted in large scale destruction of valuable timber and natural manufacturies under the name of rehabilitation, sportsmen and conservationists are mooting the advisability of linking up all societies interested in the preservation of wild life in general to protest to the President and to demand more rigid regulations and restrictions in the interest of fur, feather and hide, not alone for economic reasons but also from the viewpoint of the necessity for preserving the aesthetic features of the countryside.

It is good to note that this movement is not confined to the game birds and animals is being extended to include the song birds, for their importance in the balance of Nature is becoming more and more recognized. There was a time when the destruction of song birds was passed over as a matter of little or no moment, except by a few bird lovers.

This apathy towards the wilful destruction of the feathered songsters of woodland and open prairie is fortunately passing and to-day they are generally regarded as friends of man which should be protected. The majority of them it is now more widely recognized are the foes of insect pests which, if left to multiply without let or hindrance, would in a very short space of time render the world uninhabitable

To-day not only are people generally refraining from killing song birds and are encouraging youth from giving way to a lust to kill, but are taking more active steps to protect their feathered friends from such natural foes as the crow and the magpie

In all these provinces bounties are clubs in operation, formed with the destruction of the crow as the objective of the membership. While differences of opinion as to the menace of the crow have been voiced from time to time, the weight of evidence is in favor of the belief that the bird as an adversary of the insectivorous song birds is overwhelming. One witness for the prosecution, Dr M G. Carson of Saskatoon found that 53 per cent. of the crow examined by him and his staff for the Fish and Game League last year had been fed eggs or young birds taken from their nests and that examination of more than 200 crows shot during the season by members of the league showed that 38 per cent. of the adult crows had eaten birds or eggs in the height of the nesting season.

In the light of this evidence the recently announced sweepstakes competition by the Saskatchewan Government aimed at the destruction of crows and magpies is regarded as a distinct forward movement in the program of preservation of songsters and game birds, and apart from the bounties already offered for killing banded crows will doubtless be heralded with general approval by Nature lovers.

Mining In Northern Area

Large Development Program For Northwest Territories This Year

As a result of the geological field program carried out by the Department of Mines last year, great activity in prospecting and mining development will be seen in the Northwest Territories during 1936. The Mining Recorders of the Department of the Interior at Cameron Bay, on Great Bear Lake, and Fort Smith which lies just north of the Alberta-Northwest Territories boundary, report that while development work has continued on the older or main properties, preparations are being made by numerous interests for the carrying out of an extensive prospecting program this summer

Prospecting activities will be chiefly centred in the Yellowknife area, also on the north and south shores of the east arm of Great Slave Lake including the islands. At least five major mining companies will have prospecting parties in the field and indications are that many individual parties will also prospect the area. As part of last year's geological field program 10,000 square miles were examined north of the Northwest coal areas of Great Slave Lake, and the geological formation of approximately one-third of this area, formed the southern part of the yellowknife Game Preserve, was found to be favourable prospecting ground for precious metals.

Prefers Life In Alberta

93-Year-Old Woman Does Not Like California

Although Mrs. M. M. Olsen is 93 years old, she would rather live on her wheat farm near High River in Alberta, operated by one of her sons, than live in the fruit-growing lands of Arizona where she once resided, or with her two sons now living in California.

"Grandma" Olsen showed little patience for people living in fruit-growing districts. "I like to see it," she said. "It comes and goes. It doesn't last "It is wheat that is lasting. Wheat is the staff of life and I like utmost endeavors to protect harmless wild life both by example and precept.

Many thousands of men in the prairie provinces are already doing this, but maximum results cannot be achieved until practically everybody is imbued with the necessity of conserving one of the greatest gifts of Nature to humanity.

Both in the United States and Canada lovers of the great outdoors have become thoroughly alarmed at the decimation which has taken place in recent years in the flocks of game birds, both those that inhabit the uplands and those which migrate twice a year from the one country to the other. Value Of Advertising

A Greater Force In Business To-Day Than Ever Before

Advertising to-day is a greater force in business than ever before. Those who have made a study of it, who have used it regularly, regard it as important as the product itself. The finest article will remain on a merchant's shelves unless potential buyers are also sold it.

In a foreword to the 1936 edition of the McGim Directory of Canadian Manufactures, the agency whose names it bears makes some interesting observations on the value of advertising. These are the fruit of its long experience in this field of commercial activity. Commenting on the fact that an "easy-spending era" is not likely to return for many years, the foreword continues:

Actually, advertising to-day has a greater opportunity than it ever had. The continued emphasis on distribution, together with curtailment of unfair practices which served as short cuts to distribution—the growing insistence on standards in every class of merchandise—the public demand for evidence of value—the appearance of products embodying major scientific advances—the necessity for exposition — the importance to many industries of a more sympathetic and understanding public opinion are some phases of the opportunity that awaits advertising to-day.

But to influence effectively the consumer in 1936, advertising must be soundly conceived and seriously planned. People won't buy simply because the form of the advertising intrigues or entertains. There must be the sincerity which produces conviction, as well as the emotional presentation that arouses desire.

Above all, advertising is not a "now and then" affair. It has to be constant and it must be done well. Nothing is to create a demand and quite another to sustain that demand. This is where consistency in advertising pays large dividends. Consistent, persevering advertising requires that the purchaser be given his money's worth. Honesty, sincerity, quality—these advertising requires that the purchaser be given his money's worth. Honesty, sincerity, quality—these advertising terms are the buyer's patchwork.—Edmonton Journal.

May Visit Vimy

King Edward Expected To Attend Unveiling Of Canada's Memorial

The Havas News Agency said it was authoritatively informed King Edward would visit Vimy on July 26 to attend the unveiling at Vimy of the giant memorial to Canada's war dead.

The Agency said His Majesty would travel by aeroplane and that his coming would constitute it only a significant gesture of Anglo-French friendship.

King Edward is expected to land at Vimy from London on the morning of July 26 and to return home on the same day, according to these reports. President Albert Lebrun, Marshal Henri Petain, commander of the French armies in the war, the western front, and the new French premier will greet the King's party, the Agency said.

The possibility the king would attend the unveiling of the Vimy Ridge war memorial, July 26, was reported in the several quarters in London, although no official announcement has yet been made.

Should the reports prove correct, give him an opportunity of greeting nearly 10,000 of his Canadian subjects, many of them ex-service men, who have served in France. It would also constitute his first journey abroad since his accession.

Tribute To Famous Poem

English Earl Showed His Appreciation Of Spooner's Work

When Spenser had completed his most famous poem, "Faerie Queene," he took it to the Earl of Southampton, great patron of the poets of that day. The Earl received the manuscript, read a few pages, and then ordered a servant to deliver 230 to the needy author.

Reading on, he cried in rapture, "Carry the man another £50."

Presuming still further into the fascinating work, he ordered still another £30 be delivered.

But as he began to sit patience and exclaimed: "Go turn that fellow out of the house If I read further I shall be robbed!"—Christian Science Monitor.

Mayor Has Third Car

An English motorist who owns one of the newest cars which everybody makes jokes about was recounting as a experience to a friend.

"I had a bit of bad luck coming up from Brighton the other day," he said. "I run into a trap."

"Is that so?" said his friend "Any chance in it?"

New Lifeboat Invented

Can Be Sealed And Has Device For Recovering Air Supply

Victims of future marine catastrophes will find themselves comfortably waved within a sealed, non-sinkable lifeboat, if the invention of a reputable Catalan engineer proves practical.

The new lifeboat that cannot sink is capable of seating 40 to 50 persons. It can be launched from a sinking ship under the worst conditions and in less time than that required to remove the canvas from an ordinary lifeboat.

The inventor is Comte Salomo Vila, the engineer who originated submerging buoys for rescuers of submarines. This invention was demonstrated in Madrid before a group of experts, including officials of the Spanish ministry of marine. It is said that naval experts consider adopting the submarine buoy as part of the general equipment of a submarine.

Salomo Vila's latest invention, the non-sinkable lifeboat, is a launch 25 to 50 feet in length and capable of being classed as perfectly that neither air nor water can enter. The hull is equipped with a motor and a special device for removing the supply of fresh air.

The machinery for lowering the lifeboat after it has been occupied has been perfected by the same inventor. According to Salomo Vila and to witnesses who have seen tests made off the coast and near the town of Mataro, the lifeboat can be lowered in all kinds of weather and it is absolutely non-sinkable. These reports say that the occupants of the vessel remained perfectly dry during violent storms and that the air was renewed without admitting any water.

Thieves Return Stolen Goods

To Keep Police Of Roumanian Town From Losing Jobs

The threat of the Roumanian government to fire the whole police force of the town of Buzau, Roumania, if stolen goods were not returned by the hearts of a dangerous gang of burglars. They sent by post to the chief of police a big parcel with stolen goods, accompanied by a letter stating that "We, the thieves of Buzau, do not want the poor police to lose their jobs and shall consequently transfer our activities to other parts of the country. Our principle is 'live and let live'."

The complaint of a member of parliament, M. Mossaen, whose elegant fur coat was stolen in Buzau, caused the ministry of interior to announce that if the coat was not found within 24 hours, the whole police force, including the chief, would be dismissed. Next morning, the fur coat was found among other things, the fur coat of the member of parliament arrived at police headquarters.

Union Proposal

U.S. Representative Suggests Union Between Canada And States

Washington. — A union between the United States and Canada was proposed by Representative Sirovich (D., N.Y.), in a resolution providing for a joint senate and house of representatives committee of 10 to hold hearings on the plan with a similar Canadian group.

Sirovich contended both countries would derive great benefits from the union, naming among others abolition of the unemployment problem, mutual use of ports and highways, elimination of tariffs, availability of United States capital for Canadian development, and greater strength in defence against any common enemy.

The committee Sirovich proposed would seek to determine the wisdom of the union, under which Newfoundland would enter the union under the same status as the States and Canada and Newfoundland citizens would become "American citizens with all the privileges of citizens of the United States of America."

Sirovich said the two countries together "would become the greatest English speaking nation in the world, covering the greatest amount of contiguous territory, with vast areas waiting for development." His resolution would authorize $25,000 for the congressional committee.

He said that any dealings with Canada, her dominion status must be borne in mind, but explained that the 1931 statute of Westminster provided "that the parliament of a dominion has full power to make laws having extra-territorial operation."

Cut Bank Interest Rates

Canadian Bankers' Association Announces Change Effective June 1

Toronto. — S. H. Logan, general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, has announced on behalf of the association a reduction of one-half of one per cent. in the rate of interest paid by chartered banks on savings deposits and on deposit receipts. The change, effective June 1, reduces the rate from two to 1½ per cent. The statement follows:

"The chartered banks announce that owing to the present low interest yields on Dominion treasury bills and other investments in addition, to the continued lack of demand for commercial loans, and to the increasing cost to the banks of production of one-half of one per cent. is necessary in the rate of interest paid on savings deposits and deposit receipts, and that the change will become effective June 1 next.

Ashore Planned For Allenby

Body Of Warrior's Chapel At Westminster Abbey

London.—Ashes of Viscount Allenby, of Megiddo and Felixstowe, were placed with due ceremony in the warrior's chapel at Westminster Abbey. The body of the famous field marshal, who led British troops in a spectacular and victorious campaign against the Turks in Palestine during the Great War, was cremated at Golders Green

In accordance with Allenby's own retiring nature, there was no splendid ceremonial procession through London's streets to the abbey. Instead the casket containing the ashes was taken to His final resting-place in a simple hearse.

The funeral was represented by Field-Marshal Sir Philip Chetwode, and by his brothers, the Duke of York, Gloucester and Kent and the Duke of Connaught, great-uncle of the king and a former Governor-General of Canada, also was represented.

The funeral service was conducted by Dr. Foxley Norris, Dean of Westminster. At the close, the "Last Post" and the "Reveille" were sounded by buglers in the dean's yard

Illicit Drug Traffic

League Is Advised That Japan Is Shipping Drugs To Canada, U.S.

Geneva.—Morphine, heroin and cocaine manufactured "by permission of the Japanese ministry of interior" are being offered in unlimited quantities to dope rings in the United States and Canada by Japanese manufacturers, the League of Nations' advisory committee on traffic in opium was informed.

Reports from the United States and Canadian governments prove the existence in those countries of organized rings importing narcotics from Japan, the committee was told The reports included the name and address of the principal Japanese source of supply and the methods by which the Japanese merchant allegedly informed his American and Canadian customers how to smuggle the narcotics into their countries.

The Tokyo government has been supplied with complete details of the illicit traffic, the reports said

The Canadian government report indicated the quantities of illicit narcotics seized in Canada during 1935 were slightly less than in the previous years. A total of 163 persons were convicted on narcotic charges last year compared to 226 in 1934, the report said. Of the persons convicted, 69 were deported as undesirable aliens after serving prison sentences

TARIFF BOARD TO KEEP WATCH ON THE PRICE OF GAS

Ottawa.—The tariff board will be instructed to maintain a watching brief over the gasoline industry in the light of tariff changes announced in the budget, and particularly to keep track of price changes Finance Minister C. A. Dunning told the House of Commons.

"I propose to ask the tariff board," he said, "to keep in touch with developments which follow the changes in duty proposed in the petroleum schedules and particularly to be informed as to the price situation and as to the performance of the major companies in the refining and uneconomic conditions of distribution and to study the relation of railway and other transportation to the petroleum industry.

"The changes proposed in the present tariff schedules have been the call for prices adjustments in all parts of Canada excepting possibly the Canadian parts of Ontario and Ontario. If the results which we anticipate do not follow then we will be able, on the information supplied by the tariff board, to come to proper conclusions as to the course which should be pursued."

The minister made his announcement as a climax to a short but interesting discussion of motor duties and the gasoline industry as a whole He said the unapacity of skimming plants in the west had been guilty of defrauding the government of revenue duties in the past and already had paid over $50,000 in penalties With the exception of a few owned by farmers, the skimming plants of the west were a "racket" and, judge left from profits. A financial gold mine

Canada is dominated by a gasoline monopoly Gordon Graydon (Conservative, Peel) said when he started the discussion United States companies in the Canadian field charged higher prices than in American markets.

Prompted by a change in gasoline duties, the Saskatchewan member predicted the big refineries would attempt to raise freight rates on high-grade crude and put small skimming plants out of business

Mr Ross said he had no particular objection to the budget change in the petroleum tariffs. It placed a three-and-a-half cent duty on high-grade crude and was aimed at crude or gasoline which was "spiked" by the addition or centage of crude oil

Small skimming plants used the high grade crude and could be put out of business by freight increase applicable to the railway board Graydon said. He asked if the duty or some other person will go to the board and ask for a reduction in freight rates on all petroleum products in order to assist western Canada's industries?

Mr. Ross pointed figures to show gasoline is the unpaid of Hal. fax or Vancouver as duties and Windsor and Montreal pay half a cent more than the tariff change was the result of negotiations with the United States government for the purpose of increasing the revenue of the dominion

Mr. Dunning said he would be glad to have the board investigate the matter. He would also ordered all attached Canada's between 21 and 45 years of age to submit requests Vocation in the Blackshirt militia to immigrate to their "spiritual home" with the Duce's warlike spirit.

WANT LEGATION GUARDS OUT OF ADDIS ABABA

London.—An authoritative source said the British and French governments have been in consultation following Italian "hints" that their legation guards in Addis Ababa should be withdrawn. The two governments, it was said, are seeking to determine what course they should

The impression was gained that the Italians considered themselves in control of the situation in the Ethiopian capital and able to maintain safety for foreigners Legation guards were considered superfluous.

The British and French have been studying whether the conditions in Addis Ababa can be considered safe. The British have made it clear that, even should they withdraw their legation, they would consider the step to be taken without political implications as regards the recognition of Italian sovereignty over Ethiopia.

Meanwhile, the British have ordered searching inquiries into the mysterious disappearance of L. J. Bonner, a nursing orderly attached to the British ambulance unit in Ethiopia.

France refused to withdraw her sturdy colonial troops from Djibouti, key point on the Italian-occupied Franco-Ethiopian railroad

Official French sources said the 150 colonials would continue to guard the Dire Dawa section on the French-owned railroad, despite a request from Italy that they withdraw.

Official Italian sources declared an Italian request that they permit the shipment of 840 tons of provisions piled at Djibouti French Somaliland, to the Fascist troops in Addis Ababa. The request was turned down on the ground the road's war-time neutrality still is in force.

Empire Air Service

Move Is Made By British Government To Speed Up Schedules

London The House of Commons passed a financial resolution dealing with long-term subsidies for the empire's air routes. The vote was 250 to 122.

"If our proposals mature," said Sir Philip Sassoon, under-secretary for air, "the time of the journey from London to Karachi, India, will be reduced from seven days to four days, and to Singapore from seven days to five days and a half."

Imperial Airways, Sir Philip told the house, was aiming at a 24-day schedule to West Africa, 4½ days to South Africa, six or seven days to India and 10 days to Australia and 4½ to Singapore. He said the South African and Singapore services already had been duplicated.

IS MILK FATTENING?
HERE IS THE ANSWER

A study of milk consumption recently conducted in a metropolitan centre on this continent reveals the fact that diversity of opinion exists regarding the "fattening" qualities of milk. Of the two thousand adults interviewed sixty-one per cent of whom were women and thirty-nine per cent men, over two-thirds expressed the belief that milk is a fattening food, and the remainder, that it helped to reduce weight. In both cases the percentage was about the same for milk drinkers and non-milk drinkers.

It may seem strange to say that both opinions are correct, but such is the case. When milk is taken either at or between meals, in addition to the amount of foods which keeps an individual at constant weight, it is natural that it will have a tendency to increase weight. On the other hand, because milk has a low calorie value compared with many foods, it is an important factor in the diet for reducing abnormal weight. The first requisite in every diet, whether it be one for reducing, increasing or maintaining normal weight, is the inclusion of foods which will furnish body building and regulating material. Milk supplies more nutrients to the body than any other single food, and should be given a prominent place in meals planned to "safely" reduce body weight. For the same reason milk is an excellent food for those underweight to use generously, since it adds, not only calories, but essential minerals and vitamines to the diet. It is easier to use extra amounts of milk than most foods as it can replace beverages lacking in nutritive value, and can be taken between meals and at bed-time without interfering with the regular meals. Then, too, milk is palatable and blends well with other foods.

Milk is a food which everyone needs whether young or old, short or tall, fat or thin. Used as the foundation of the daily meals, the Milk Pails Allen Service, Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture points out, this healthful food contributes to the rest or energy requirements of the body. What is more important, milk furnishes bone, tooth and tissue building material, together with those indispensable factors vitamines—all of which are essential to the attainment of health growth and strength.

THREE-YEAR SENTENCE IS GIVEN BY MAGISTRATE
J. L. Murray Faced Five Charges In Police Court Wednesday

Three years in Prince Albert was the sentence meted out to James L. Murray of Moosa, Sask., on Wednesday by Magistrate J. D. Adam. There were five charges preferred against Murray by the R.C.M. police of Lloydminster, varying from violations of the veterinary surgeon's act to theft of cars. Murray has been passing himself off for several years past as a veterinary surgeon and lately he has been particularly active in the line, several complaints having been received by the police against him. Murray already has a good record, including a term at Prince Albert. Another charge laid against him was issuing a cheque with no visible assets.

The Magistrate felt that the short terms already served by Murray have apparently had no effect in making him mend his ways and in the interest of justice and for the protection of the public, decided to give him the maximum sentence of three years. This will also give Murray, who is only a young man of 26 years, a chance to learn a trade and so become a useful member of society.

This was stipendiary Magistrate Adam's first case since being elevated to the bench on June 1.

Political Patronage

University Professor Advocates Change In Civil Service Methods

Prof. R. MacGregor Dawson, of the University of Saskatchewan told the Canadian Political Science Association the two enemies of civil service efficiency in the Dominion were political patronage and the organization of the service itself.

To improve the service he suggested in a paper to the association's annual meeting an examination system that would debar poor candidates and select the best, a scheme of gradation which would induce the highest type of intelligence to try to enter a plan of promotion which would allow exceptionally brilliant men to rause to the top and a range of salaries providing a comfortable living.

Of about 62,000 positions in the government, today only 33,000 or 53 per cent are filled by the civil service commission, he said Many parts of the service which could be brought easily in conformity with the merit system, such as the income tax branch and the survey service and the radio commission, did not come under the Civil Service Act.

Proves His Claim

Pioneer Resident Says Alberta's First Oil Found 57 Years Ago

Proof that the first crude oil was found in Alberta in November, 1879, 57 years ago, is held by William McCardell, well known pioneer resident of Banff.

Mr McCardell produced a letter from Joseph Lake, now residing at Invermere B.C. This letter stated that in November, 1879, he was managing the Carlin and Lake store in Anthracite, near Exshaw. "Billy McCardell and Lafayette French," he states, "brought in crude oil from the mountains. It was sent to Ottawa to be assayed. It consisted of 95 per cent. lubricating oil and five per cent. vegetable matter."

Mr McCardell also received a letter from Howard Sibbald of Banff, now in California, who stated he was in charge of the Scott and Lesson ranch, 10 miles south of Morley, in 1879 Mr McCardell and the late Lafayette French brought in samples of crude oil to him and it was tested in a lamp

Mr McCardell stated the oil was found on Waterton Lakes. A company known as the Homestake Oil Company was formed with a capitalization of $1,000,000 at Great Falls Unfortunately a salt water, instead of a crude oil, gusher was drilled in and from a prize fire burst down the derrick and the venture came to an end.

Shortly after the opening of the present century, the Rocky Mountain Development Company drilled a well at Waterton Lakes and the discovery of a considerable quantity of oil was claimed. At the present time a well is being drilled by Oil City Royalties Limited, in the Waterton district.

Returning A War Relic

Canal City Sends Bush An Exquisitely Carved Font Cover

Responding to a request for return of all relics removed from historic St. Martin's cathedral, Ypres, Belgium, during the 1915 by Canadian guards, Victoria has forwarded an intricately carved font cover which stood for several years in Christ Church cathedral in Victoria, B.C.

The Belgian church, noted for some exquisite carvings, was almost destroyed during the war, and many of its most valuable treasures disappeared. After citizens of Ypres decided to rebuild the structure, an appeal was sent to all Canadian central powers for return of any pieces carried away by opposing troops Officials report hundreds have already been returned.

The oak font cover, five feet in height, appears to be very old and is elaborately carved by hand. How it found its way to the coast city is not definitely known.

The last war was to end war. The next war will end everything.

New Theory For Longevity

Egyptian Thinks Keeping Brain Well Supplied is Key

Learning shortens your life. That is the conviction of a 112 years old man in Cairo, Egypt, Aem Mohomed, a milkman, claims to have just completed 112 years and still milks his goats, and delivers the milk from door to door, as usual, often climbing several flights of stairs.

His recipe for life is: Don't drink, don't smoke, don't indulge in pleasure, and, above all, don't tire your brain with learning. Mohomed enjoys three hearty meals daily. Two of these consist of bread, cheese and bits of meat and vegetables. He has married only once. His wife is still alive. Her "baby," their youngest son, is aged 60.

JESUS IS ARRESTED

Golden text: Not my will, but thine, be done.—Luke 22:42.

Lesson: Luke 22:39-71.

Devotional reading: Isaiah 53:1-6.

Explanations And Comments

The Agony in the Garden. Luke 22:39-46. Last week our scene was in that Upper Room at Jerusalem where Jesus and his disciples held their last supper together. After a long farewell talk, and final intercessory prayer, told only in the Fourth Gospel, the scene changes to the sorrowful walk across the Brook Kidron to the Garden of Gethsemane. "There is an awful silence in a stepping long road, but never did the silence speak to a heart so still in its agony as to the One that was then seeking in Gethsemane a place of seclusion and prayer." To his disciples that tortured One said, "Pray that ye enter not into temptation," as he went apart from them a stone's cast. "Pathetic beyond the power of language to utter is the fact that even in Gethsemane, where our Lord had his own bitter cup to drink, his thought was of the temptations to which, in this hour of excitement and confusion, his own beloved disciples would be exposed" (Reuen Thomas). Read the fuller account about the Agony in the 26th chapter of Matthew.

Jesus' prayer, let this cup pass from me." Jesus prayed, and then he added, "Nevertheless, not my will but thine be done." "It has always seemed to me," writes Dr. Charles Evan Slatter, "that for more than two prayers, there was even to the Perfect Son a new knowledge of the Father. Love a moment before answered—for love is the key to the prayer—to be exacting a sacrifice then, in a moment, love seemed to be transformed into the exultation of the Father's will for his Son's immortal ministry to the world. And God revealed a new phase of his love to and being in agony to those more earnestly; and his sweet benediction to every agonizing drop of blood falling down upon the ground after giving a long list of possible reasons for the prayer and the agony of Gethsemane, the sacrifice of the world, Papini adds these words to which all will subscribe "But no one will ever know the full meaning of the words cried out by the Son to the Father, in the black loneliness of the olives. A great French Christian poet, a little before the end of the world, and when death was already at the door of meat and vegetables. He had married only once. His wife is still alive. Her "baby," their youngest son, is aged 60.

Cannot Be Tamed

Sea-Gulls Always Wild Unless Captured Right After Hatching

A sea-gull captured three or four days after hatching can never be tamed because its mother or other grown birds have taught it fear, Dr. John Tait, of McGill University, Montreal, told the biological section of the Royal Society of Canada in Ottawa. Dr. Tait said the parent or other adult gull communicates to the young by a "roundabout mode of conditioning" a four-complex which it never loses.

A gull taken just after hatching, he said, may grow up without fear of man, but "the cry" which is the call of the adult produces and maintains in the young bird an instinctive channel here the fear of apprehension, in which state it is ready on one single experience to become permanently afraid of man or to any animal recognised as strange."

London Zoo Is Lucky

Has Received Four Sacred Cave Cobras From Malaya

Four Sacred Cave snakes have arrived at the London zoo from Malaya. Their kind has never been shown in captivity before, and their capture was an astonishing adventure.

"The snakes are five feet long, and marked by two white stripes head to tail. They came from the Batu caves in Selangor. The caves are long, subterranean passages, the entrance to which is guarded by many hundreds of cobras, however never allow strangers to enter the caves.

YOUR GARDEN

General garden insect enemies are divided into two groups—those that eat holes in the foliage and those that suck out the juice Por the first-named, poison is usually applied, while the suckers are attacked with a burning spray which penetrates. Often both are present, a combination of poison and something that burns, such as lime sulphur is ultimate, giving the best results. The damage from the biting insects is usually quite apparent but the presence of the other kind is only shown at first by a wilting and withering of the foliage. For sucking insects, chief of which are the aphis or plant lice, spray with whale oil soap, a quarter pound of soap to a gallon and a half gallon of lime sulphuric or "Black Leaf 40", or any other reputable prepared from a reliable seed store. When fungus attacks the plants, the remedy usually turns yellow or brown, or white spots like mildew appear on the leaves. This is most common in warm, murky weather. Spraying with Bordeaux Mixture or dusting with specially finely ground sulphur is advised. Bulbous plants, such as peonies, daffodils and phlox from rust, if sprinkled with flowers of sulphur flower itself. An ordinary tin can with the top perforated by a nail will do nicely makes a good duster. Cut worms which eat through newly set out plants at the base, can be killed by poisoned by spreading sweetened bran mash, which has arsenic or special mixtures about the plants.

The best defence for all vegetables are beans, tomato plants, squash, cucumbers and melons. They will not start to grow until the weather and soil really become warm. All other warm weather vegetables prefer rich, open soil and any members of the mustard family have special delight in hot, sandy soil, though it must be rich, too. There is still plenty of time to make second and third crops of many of the all standard vegetables such as beets, carrots, corn, beans, etc.; first celery is set out now.

Wins Efficiency Trophy

Captain Hosken Awarded Shield For The Fourth Time

Signal honour was paid Captain A. J. Hosken, R.N.R., commander of R.M.S. Empress of Canada, when, at a ceremony on board his ship, at Vancouver, B.C., he and his crew were presented with the Chairman's shield. This is emblematic of superiority on company ships on the Pacific in all matters pertaining to lifesaving, including discipline, upkeep and maintenance of life-saving gear, organization with regard to control of passengers, operation of lifeboats, fire drill, and other similar matters.

The shield is awarded yearly, and has been the trophy of efficiency on ships of the fleet since it was first presented in 1929 by Sir Edward W. Beatty. Captain Hosken has now won it four times, namely, also in 1929, when he was commander of R.M.S Empress of Russia, and held it for two years. Mr. D. Douglas of R.M.S Empress of Japan for three years, and Captain Hosken has won it back. It is the first time it has gone to R.M.S Empress of Canada, of which Captain Hosken has been in command for the past year

The presentation was made by K. J. Burns, port manager, during the course of a luncheon on board the ship

Old Custom Affected

Because Chinese are losing their faith in the efficacy of eggs to prevent a new birth, the poultry industries are seeking a government mandate to proclaim the festival of Lih Chun, or "beginning of summer" as "national egg eating day" Eggs have been a special food of the festival for centuries Disappearance of old beliefs, however, is affecting the custom.

Want To Fight Like Men

Turkey's young girls, ranging in age from 16 to 30, are ready to fight —and they want to fight like men. In a petition to the Ministry of Education, they asked that military education be given them and that they be treated the same as the boy recruits fulfilling their compulsory military service.

HOW TO BUILD UP A TOWN

Talk about it.
Write about it.
Speak well of it.
Help to improve it.
Beautify the streets.
Patronize its merchants.
Advertise in its newspaper.
Speak well of its enterprising public spirited citizens.
If you are rich, invest in something, employ somebody, be a "booster." In no case think of any good word to say, don't say anything bad about town.
Remember every dollar you invest in a permanent improvement is that much added to your wealth.
Be courteous to strangers that come amongst us so that they go away with good impressions.
Always cheer up the men who are trying to improve your town. Your portion of the real will only be what is lost.
There will never spend a dollar out of town that you can use or the same purpose in town.—Ex.

CANADA WILL NOT TOLERATE DICTATORSHIP

Cannot Be Made Plaything of Experimentation Bennett Says

LINDSAY, Ont., May 28.—Dictatorship will never be tolerated in Canada, conservative leader R. B. Bennett told members of the Ontario Medical Association in a speech here night.

"You cannot in a country such as Canada with as much at stake to human liberty, make your government the plaything of experimentation," the former Prime Minister said. "For behind the nostrum which heals every social disease, there usually is hidden the design for grasp or individual power."

The most disquieting feature of dictatorship today was that it arose on an assumption of popular approval and then the first use it made of its power was to dismember the framework of popular government.

"Dictation is often in some indefinable matter for power and prestige," Mr. Bennett said. "It prospers itself across educational aspirations with its own code of ethics. Its own pronouncements of morality, even its own manmade religion or national aggrandizement. It takes possession of the state on its own terms.

Mr. Bennett reminded his listeners that man was somewhat of an unmanageable creature.

"He may submit for the moment to management based on a supposedly better conception of society than he has so far experienced," the Conservative leader said. "But the hunger for liberty is engrossed in the race evident will be his awakening and when he awakes he will wreak his vengeance on those who deprived him of his liberty."

Last week a total of 1,467,107 bushels or wheat was shipped from Canadian ports while Australian shipments totalled 1,475,000 bushels, Argentine shipments 1,214,000 bushels and South Russia shipments 44,000 bushels.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE VERMILION CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

By The Alberta British Settlers Association

Gentlemen:—

The Alberta British Settlers Association takes this opportunity of publicly returning you our sincere thanking for Hornby settlement scheme, so suitable for this district.

Why the Chamber of Commerce should have the only voice in this matter, is not at all clear.

It appears that you only desire more settlers here because they will bring with them a few hundred dollars in cash which would be a good thing for this town and district—as a member of your Chamber so aptly put it at a recent debate on the Hornby scheme. In your desire to relieve the settlers of their money as expeditiously as possible, you clearly show that you have no thought for the settlers welfare.

This point is conclusively proved to the satisfaction of the most sceptical critic, with the settlers now here under the C.P.R. H. S. Co., etc. Those settlers practically bankrupted by their pioneering companies at the start of the depression to the tender mercies of the municipalities, the Sunshine fund and the Chamber of Commerce via the tradesmen, have suffered untold want, misery, sickness and death. But it said that the "sunshine" meted out to the settlers is conspicuous by its absence. You, as tradesmen, are not prepared to extend credit to the settler after you have emptied his pockets; it is impossible for him to make a living under the prevailing conditions yet you begrudge him relief despite the fact that you eventually get the relief money — from whom you extract it.

Old timers, a la councillors, tell us that they cannot make it go and pay taxes. This is true. In order to relieve the settlers relief, despite the fact that relief comes mostly from dominion funds in which everyone pays, not only old timers.

Yet the Chamber of Commerce in its personal wisdom, and after debating the subject at some length, with many allusions to the settlers already here—not one of which was kindly—and after hearing the settlers plight solemnly endorse the Hornby scheme.

While not wishing to blame tradesmen as individuals, we are begrudged relief hospitalization, medical aid, etc., because of your attitude in no one way which, all things considered, is not our fault. You can't take blood from a stone.

In your endorsement of the Hornby scheme you propose to bring settlers from:—

1. National Health Insurance and all it implies:

2 Unemployment Insurance and the eight hour day:

3. National Housing and civilization to the miserable conditions obtaining here.

You stand utterly condemned: Christ, on the Cross, said, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." You, members of the Chamber of Commerce know what you do. Gently the padres gave will appear to you as a barbed wire one.

A suggestion, gentlemen—why not use each power as you have to help assist the settlers who are already here an asset to the country, instead of what they are now, a liability.

The Alberta British Settlers Association.

WILDSIDE WEEK

First of all we wish to congratulate the following parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Harrison, Cunningham, on the birth of a daughter, May 24th, also Mr. and Mrs. Eric Medill, Wildmere, on the birth of a son, and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Marchuk, Vermilion, also a son." Best of health to all the members and babies.

On Thursday May 28 Mrs. A. Smith, invited her neighbor ladies to spend a pleasant afternoon with her, the occasion being her birthday. Those attending were Mrs. Hoite, Mrs. Carlson and daughter Sylvia, Mrs. Ishbel, Mrs. T. Cruthers, Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Olaf Cruthers, Mable Young and Mrs. A. Whitmore. While those left behind heard the broadcast of the Queens who's birthday it was too. A very dainty lunch was served which every one enjoyed very much. Mrs. Smith received many nice gifts. Mr. Anderson our church supply sent walked in to also wish the hostess a happy birthday, as he was expecting every one invited Mrs Smith many more happy birthdays.

Thursday evening 14 young folks and older ones also, gathered at the school to the first league meeting of the season. First a softball game was enjoyed, then every one departed to the school where business was conducted. Alex Smith who was president of the league, Charles Gordon, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Hoite, Lunch convenor, Mrs. Cruthers, Sport convenor, Albert Smith, Social convenor. Meetings will be held until further notice on Thursday evenings of each week.

On Saturday evening the Wildmere Community Club held their meeting at the school with a fair attendance. A few down from Beaumont. It was decided to hold their annual June dance on June 12th as he school ice cream and refreshments will be sold. Music to be kindly needed after those hot dry days. The cut courses are very bad in the gardens and the many other wholegardens having to be reseeded.

FORMER MAYOR OF VEGREVILLE, C. GORDON, DIES

Pioneer Manufacturer in West; in District for 30 Years

Vegreville, May 28.—Pioneer manufacturer in the west, Charles Gordon, 55, resident of the Vegreville district for the past 30 years, died in an Edmonton hospital at 2.00 a.m. Friday May 29 from a complication of ailments. He was admitted to hospital May 15.

The late Mr. Gordon was mayor of Vegreville on several occasions, prominent Liberal candidate in the federal election in 1926 and ran under similar colors in the provincial elections of 1935. He had large interests in the Vegreville district and was primarily interested in the lumber business.

Surviving are his wife, a daughter, Mrs. Neil Primrose; two sons, Douglas and Lorne; his mother at Alix, Ont.; five brothers and four sisters.

GREENLAWN and RIVERTON

The Greenlawn baseball team has commenced its season's activities and we are looking forward to some interesting games.

A baseball tournament has been arranged to be held at Holman's on June 20.

Alderman and Mrs. E. East of Edmonton were brief visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Jones.

Miss Caroline Green has been a visitor to the district.

Mrs. A.J. Hockin and baby Arets have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. R.K. Walker during conference session Mr. and Mrs. C. Haskell jr. and are spending the summer in the district

We hear that Rev. Arthur Thorpe is to be married shortly.

Mrs Varya Br. is slowly recovering from her recent accident. She was struck by a falling tree.

J. A. Jones is building a new house on his farm. The house will be a very new addition to the community as it is to be built of stone.

It is expected that work will begin on North Home school shortly.

Mrs Oliver McMullen is opening a beauty parlor in Marwayne about the middle of June.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Green and family are leaving by car for a visit with relatives in the States Mr. and Mrs. Green will also attend the 25th anniversary of their college commencement at Adrian Michigan.

Saturday, May 30, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Green gave a party at Holman's for their daughter Caroline, in spite of bad roads more than a hundred guests arrived and a very pleasant afternoon was had by all. On behalf of the guests Mrs. East presented Caroline with a purse, and she thanked us all with a very witty speech, giving us some small description of her future home and plans.

Mr. Nels Timmerman plans to no home to visit his mother in Sweden shortly. He will also travel through France and Germany.

On June 1st a shower was held for Miss Caroline Green at the home of Mrs. F Madden. Many of the ladies took old and young turned out to wish the bride-to-be well. She received many pretty gifts. Mrs. Jones made the presentation, and Caroline then thanked the guests.

Mens last year took the chair, when officers were elected, Alex Leland to be retained this year owing to not being in the best of health, as he was named Hon. Pres., Miss Perkins, Pres. Nellie Hoite, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Hoite, Lunch convenor; Russell Cruthers, Sport convenor; Albert Smith, Social convenor. Meetings will be held until further notice on Thursday evenings of each week.

On Saturday evening the Wildmere Community Club held their meeting at the school with a fair attendance. A few down from Beaumont. A Moral Renaissance

In a world riven with fear and mistrust, with greed, hatred and suspicion rampant between individuals, between economic, political and social groups and between nations, there must be much inward searching of souls, much communing of hearts in an effort to find the cause of all this strife in the hope that thereby a remedy may be found and once again nations may live in peace and people may pursue the paths of progress with hope and confidence in the future.

That there is much travail, seething and unrest at home and abroad no one can gainsay, and until some key has been found which will unlock the gate to peace and prosperity, there can be no assurance of widespread happiness and contentment.

What is this key, millions of people are asking themselves and asking one another as they view with dismay the ruffled waters of a troubled humanity?

Perhaps the answer is to be found in the statement made in the British House of Lords on March 15, 1926 by the Marquess of Salisbury, scion of the famous prime minister of the same name in the late Victorian era, when he said:

"The cause of the world's state is not economic; the cause is moral. . . if I may use a phrase which is common in a great movement which is taking place in this country and elsewhere (The Oxford Group) what you want is God-guided personalities, which make God-guided nationalities, to make a new world. All the other items of economic adjustments are too small really to touch the centre of the evil."

If such a statement were made from the pulpit it would probably be regarded by many as more or less of a commonplace, something to be expected from such a source, but when it is made by a peer of the realm in such an institution as the House of Lords of Great Britain, it has more arresting and significant effect and serves to emphasize what might be considered a platitude if uttered by others elsewhere

The minds of many great leaders are being directed in this channel as is evident from recent utterances of other great men whose words, whether their political or economic creeds are accepted, inspire serious thought and considerative

A similar idea was expressed about the same time by President Roosevelt of the United States when he said:

"No greater thing could come today to our land than a revival of the spirit of religion—a revival that would sweep through the homes of the nation and stir the hearts of men and women of all faiths to a reassertion of their belief in God and their dedication to His will for themselves and for their world. I deem it there is any problem—social, political or economic—that would not melt away before the fire of such a spiritual awakening."

Further testimony in support of this sentiment comes from Roger Babson, founder of the Babson Statistical organization, whose prophecies of future trends based on statistical data are regarded as authoritative over the entire continent. Mr Babson recently said "I expect a business revival. But only a spiritual awakening among the people can make it enduring."

These and other authorities and leaders in many countries of the world are unanimous in their opinion that before there can be a change in the national and international outlook it is essential that the viewpoint be changed and that, in effect, a moral renaissance is necessary for the national viewpoint can be none other than that of the individuals which constitute it.

It might perhaps be said: What is the use of Canadians adopting an unselfish or a lofty moral viewpoint as long as the peoples of other countries exemplify a diametrically opposed outlook? Such a restricted conception of purpose and duty could only serve to delay the consummation of the peace coveted and prosperity which the great majority desire to see. Reform and improvement must first come from within and spread outwards like the ripples on the water when the cast stone is thrown.

Whether one agrees or not with the doctrines of the Oxford Group movement, one cannot but recognize that when they draw attention to the fact that there must first be a change in the individual before there can be a changed national viewpoint, they are hitting the bullseye.

Not Given Much Credit

But Wives Of Early Western Settlers Did Their Part

First white woman to the plains of Western Canada was Marie Gaboury, who journeyed to the Red River in 1807 and later as far west as Edmonton, said E. A. Corbett, local historian, in an address at Saskatoon.

Talking on "Early Women of Western Canada," the speaker remarked early fur traders were notably reticent in giving credit to the women who accompanied them into new lands.

Mr Corbett referred to the wife of David Thompson, one of the west's earliest explorers, Mrs. Thompson, he said, was a half-breed girl born at Ile a la Crosse in 1788, daughter of Patrick Small, one of the first white traders on the Churchill River.

David Thompson married the girl when she was 14 years of age, and from then on she was his constant companion.

The speaker regretted Alexander Mackenzie had left little record of the part his wife played in his northern explorations.

"It is unfortunate," he continued, "that we know so little of the women of the Selkirk Settlers, of such white women as the wife of Factor Rowland, who with her husband made old Fort Edmonton famous for its hospitality during the early years of the last century."

Asphalt in Petroleum

New Process May Make It Available For Paving Material

Oil wells which supply the gasoline to move vehicles were pointed to as the new source of paving material over which to move them.

All petroleum contains asphalt, but not enough to be used profitably for paving because of impurities. By a new vacuum process of extraction, demonstrated at the International Petroleum Exposition, pure asphalt falls like rain out of a heated oil, it was announced. What is still in which this is done was invented by Dr. Sidney Boen, director of the petroleum research of the University of Tulsa. The stills are towers made of heavy steel, 40 to 60 feet high and five to 22 feet in diameter.

In the interior of the towers are installed perforated vacuums. Into them is run petroleum from which gasoline and kerosene have been extracted. The heat is shot into the vacuum towers at 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit, a temperature at which it instantly explodes into a cloud of steam. The asphalt which is left behind falls completely pure in a coal black rain.

Collars Replace Ribband

Holders Of Certain Decoration Must Change When Ordered

Holders of certain orders must have their "collars" when the King held his second review of the year in St. James' Palace. That was because the levee coincided with the birthday of Queen Victoria, and nothing, St. Michael and St. George, the Royal Victorian Order, and certain other orders is replaced by the collar of the order.

It is laid down in court regulations that collars must not be worn after sunset, except by the King's special command", so that they are rarely seen. The ribband is worn by everybody. The collar with the badge of the order suspended from it is worn under the shoulder straps or epaulets of uniforms, fastened with a white satin bows, 1½ inches wide, at either side.

New Northern Sea Route

Navigators Of Soviet Have Made Mariners' Dreams Come True

A new sea route has been opened by Soviet navigators after three years' preparatory work in which Russian cargo vessels have succeeded in establishing a route to the Far East through the northern coasts of Europe and Asia. Such a way has been the dream of mariners for centuries, but only in recent years has science developed the idea to be impossible. An icebreaker fleet placed along the route has kept the channels open. More than 300 ships of the Soviet mercantile marine have this winter sailed along the roof of the world without a single mishap. Five radio stations keep vessels informed of weather and ice conditions.

Got Practical Training

High School In Jacksonville, Florida, Has Splendid Plan

In Jacksonville, Florida, high school boys and girls are getting training for future jobs in the community at the same time they attend school. They go to school part of the day and the other part they spend in the department store, advertising office, bank, real estate, theatre, hotel, tearoom, telephone office, learning practical work right on the job. Since the inauguration of the "Jacksonville Plan" about two years ago, 86 per cent. of the vocational pupils have secured jobs upon graduation, and the plan is spreading to other cities of the south and west. The majority of the boys and girls leaving high school today cannot go to college, yet their training is directed toward that goal. When they apply for a job, the employer says: "What can you do?" The answer is, "I don't know, but I can try anything." The Jacksonville graduate says: "I have had two years' experience in a bank," or in an automechanic's shop, or any other of the 43 different types of training positions in the community.—Christian Science Monitor.

Admiral Of Yacht Squadron

King Edward Has Office First Held By Edward VII.

The King has become Admiral of the Royal Yacht Squadron, perhaps the most exclusive club in the world.

Edward VII. was the first holder of the office of admiral, inaugurated at his accession in 1901. The club itself was established in 1812.

A story circulated that the royal racing cutter Britannia is to be sunk to spare her the indignity of the ship-breakers yard. However, enquiries showed, on any other score. The King has given instructions that the sails and rigging of the craft be preserved. The remainder of the equipment is to be stored and no instructions have been given regarding the hull. Britannia was built in 1893 for Edward VII. when he was Prince of Wales. The famous cutter won 231 first prizes and 139 other awards in 625 races in the course of 43 years of racing.

Future Of Quintuplets

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe Hopes They Will Become Normal Young Women

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's hopes the Dionne quintuplets will become just as normal young women as girls born snugly rest largely now on the doctor. He is worried with the education of the famous babies who are now two years old. Admitting he had few facts left about the babies' health, Dr. Dafoe said he and the other guardians will shape the babies' lives until they are 18.

Phones In Canada

Canadians Do More Phoning Than Any Other People

Canadians do more telephoning than any other people in the world.

Statistics released at Montreal show every man, woman and child in Canada held an average of 218.6 telephone conversations last year. The United States with 193.4, Denmark and Sweden were next in order. In Canada there are 11 phones for every 100 persons.

Mended Large Shoes

A pair of size 30 shoes, costing $65 was made in Findlay, Ohio, for Robert Wadsworth, 18-year-old giant of Alton, Ill. The shoes, probably the largest ever made, were returned, however, because, Wadsworth said, they "pinched" his feet.

Need More Scholarships

More Opportunity Required For Bright Students Without Means

Dr. R. C. Wallace, newly-appointed principal of Queen's University, stated at Ottawa that Canada needed more scholarships for her students. Dr. Wallace, president of the University of Alberta, succeeds Dr. W. Hamilton Fyffe, who accepted principalship of Aberdeen University.

It should be possible for a student, irrespective of means, if he has the mental ability, to go right through school and college, Dr. Wallace said.

Regarding positions for university graduates, Dr. Wallace said: "Provide to-day are realizing more and more the importance of trying to help the trained person and many businessmen are recognizing this and doing all that lies in their power to prevent the trained person from going to waste."

"Sports have a real value in their correct place," he said. "We must remember that students do not go to the university for sports. That is not why universities were founded."

Known As Electric Man

English Farmer Can Take 150 Volts Without Feeling It

Invalided out of the British army as a hopeless cripple after an attack of rheumatic fever, T. Lintott, a farmer of Twyford, England, has become known as "the electric man." When making repairs he never bothers to turn the current off. He can take 150 volts without noticing it. After leaving the army he threw away his crutch, mounted a motorcycle and learned to ride unaided. Since then he has not needed the crutch.

World's Only Dwarf Elephant

Hardly Five Feet Tall But Weighs 1,700 Pounds

The smallest adult elephant in the world arrived at St. Nazaire, France, to make his debut in a French circus. He is nine years old, his name is Auguste, he is slightly under five feet tall, and he weighs the trifling total of 1,760 pounds. Auguste was born a normal elephant, but suddenly stopped growing, and is a dwarf to this day. He arrived in a crate labelled: "Fragile; don't turn upside down."

Mr. Whitney had sympathy for the Jacksonville grad. uate says: "I have had two years' experience in a bank," or in an automechanic's shop, or any other of the 43 different types of training positions in the community.—Christian Science Monitor.

Admiral Of Yacht Squadron

King Edward Has Office First Held By Edward VII.

The King has become Admiral of the Royal Yacht Squadron, perhaps the most exclusive club in the world.

Edward VII. was the first holder of the office of admiral, inaugurated at his accession in 1901. The club itself was established in 1812.

A story circulated that the royal racing cutter Britannia is to be sunk to spare her the indignity of the ship-breakers yard. However, enquiries showed, on any other score. The King has given instructions that the sails and rigging of the craft be preserved. The remainder of the equipment is to be stored and no instructions have been given regarding the hull. Britannia was built in 1893 for Edward VII. when he was Prince of Wales. The famous cutter won 231 first prizes and 139 other awards in 625 races in the course of 43 years of racing.

Future Of Quintuplets

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe Hopes They Will Become Normal Young Women

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's hopes the Dionne quintuplets will become just as normal young women as girls born snugly rest largely now on the doctor. He is worried with the education of the famous babies who are now two years old. Admitting he had few facts left about the babies' health, Dr. Dafoe said he and the other guardians will shape the babies' lives until they are 18.

MECCA OINTMENT

Not So Cheering

Mr and Mrs. Newlywed were silent as the train bore them homeward after their honeymoon. Mr. Newlywed was hard up. He had spent every penny on the honeymoon and his next pay-day was a fortnight off.

As they neared home the young wife gave a merry laugh. "I'm going to tell you a secret that will cheer you up, Billy," she said. "Before we went away I hid ten pounds in the larder."

"Yes," said her husband, "I know, I found it."

TRANS-CANADA AIR ROUTE TO BE ORGANIZED SOON

Ottawa.—Hon. Ian MacKenzie, defence minister, disclosed the government will start consideration in a month or two of the trans-Canada air route declaring whether public-by-owned or private aircraft will be used on it.

He made the announcement during a heated house discussion of Canada's militia in which one member said Canada had a "ridiculous" army and it was disclosed the nation does not own 10 modern fighting planes in good order.

The minister gave his opinion that six months notice to possible aircraft contractors was necessary in order to permit them to train pilots and purchase machines.

The trans-Canada route will be used to fly mail and passengers across the country. Airports and emergency fields have been built in recent years, some of them by men in relief camps. Many of the fields have radio direction-finding equipment.

Grant MacNeil (C.C.F., Vancouver North) said too much money was being spent on defence generally and particularly military flying, rather than civil aviation.

Canada had a "bow-and-arrow army and tin-pot navy" and it was useless to keep spending millions of dollars on them. Young men could not obtain technical aviation schooling in Canada because not enough money was being spent on civil aviation by the government.

Although there were many fine flying clubs in Canada, officials at Ottawa were handicapped by "antiquated equipment" on them. Civil aviation was being sacrificed for military aviation.

Mr. MacKenzie said it did not help Canada to poke fun at Canada's army, navy and air force. Observations were being cart repeatedly but this resulted on the country as a whole thinking it was a joke. It was not a joke. Canada's defence forces did not reflect the millions of dollars spent on them.

The Canadian army was one of the best equipped for its strength, continued the minister. All technical changes and improvements were known to Canadian officers but were not adopted for one simple reason—there was not the money.

Hon. Grote Stirling, opposition minister of national defence, said when Mr. MacNeil suggested Canada had not got value for its money, he was not speaking in accordance with facts. Mr. MacNeil: "I have delivered a certain opinion in some military circles, but in the face of difficult conditions the department has kept abreast of the times and maintained its properties and services. He agreed fully with the policy outlined by Mr. MacKenzie and with his defence of the department.

In answer to a question from Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative leader, Mr. MacKenzie said Brigadier Clyde Caldwell of Ottawa had been appointed inspector-general of the permanent force and that office assumed importance. His duties were to survey the industrial and economic resources of Canada with a view to mobilization in the event of trouble.

Similar officers were appointed in all British dominions and it was thought desirable to get a fully qualified officer such as Brigadier Caldwell. The proposed survey had been started and was well under way. It might some day be necessary to consult the results of the information and equipment needed by Canadian forces in Canada and by public agencies. The survey was intended to be prepared for such a contingency.

Ottawa.—No steps will be taken this session to introduce proportional representation or the single transferable vote into Canadian federal elections, the House of Commons committee investigating the Election Act, has decided.

B.N.A. Act

Proposed Amendment To Go To Committee

Ottawa.—The senate decided without a division to refer to its banking and commerce committee the proposed joint parliamentary resolution to Westminster for amendment to the British North America Act.

Senator Raoul Dandurand, Liberal leader, moved the resolution, proposed by Senator J. J. Donnelly (Cons., Bruce), and said he had no objection to representatives of provincial governments going before the committee to give their views on constitutional change.

He said attorneys-general of the provinces had approved the resolution in precise terms but that representatives of public bodies and individuals also would be heard by the committee.

The form and procedure being followed in the present instance was the same pursued in every amendment to the constitution since confederation, Senator Dandurand declared. There was no danger confederation would be disrupted by the proposed amendment.

Provincial delegates to the Dominion-provincial conference last fall had agreed on the proposed change "Can we question the authority of the duly accredited representatives of the provinces?" Senator Dandurand asked. In 1907, 1925 and 1929 when important changes were made in the constitution there had been no suggestion the expressed consent of the different provincial legislatures should be part of the request to Westminster for changing the act.

To Visit Scotland

King Edward Plans Far Summer Vacation At Balmoral

London.—King Edward is planning to spend several weeks managing the late summer in Balmoral in Scotland, as his father did before him.

It was announced that His Majesty will probably remain there for two or three weeks in September. On such visits the sovereign and the nearest kinsmen always wear the kilt.

Balmoral, like Sandringham, is not crown property. It was bought by the Prince-Consort, Queen Victoria's husband, and during the latter's long widowhood was equal to her affections with Osborne on the Isle of Wight.

The castle was entirely rebuilt when it became a royal possession.

The Duke and Duchess of York probably will be there in August, with the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester staying nearby.

Resigns His Position

Thomas' Son Gives Up Job In Stockbroker's Office

London.—Mr. Shapurjee Thomas, son of former colonial secretary, J. H. Thomas, resigned his position in a stockbroker's office here.

The younger Thomas, whose father resigned from the cabinet, was a frequent witness during the special inquiry into the budget leaks scandal and admitted several friends had taken out insurance policies against an increase in the tax tax shortly before the budget was first publicly revealed.

Coronation Date Set

Centuries-Old Ceremony Will Take Place May 12, 1937

London Prime Minister Baldwin has set May 12, 1937, as the day on which King Edward VIII. will be formally invested with the authority of the British throne in a centuries-old coronation ceremony.

The announcement was made in a special issue of the official gazette. The date was officially proclaimed on May 29 at colorful ceremonies in the heart of London.

Livestock Industry

Co-operation From Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Board

Medicine Hat, Alta.—With the object of sponsoring development of the livestock industry in the short grass area of the west, the Short Grass Stockgrowers' Association, representing 30,000 square miles of territory, was organized here.

John Wallace, of Regina, chairman of the prairie farm rehabilitation board, attended the organizing meeting and promised whole-hearted co-operation.

The new association will co-operate with other livestock organizations for the general welfare of ranchers.

BANDS OF ARABS CONTINUE SNIPING IN HOLY LAND

Jerusalem—Authorities hastily enrolled special police and volunteers to protect outlying Jewish districts from Arab bands keeping up an intermittent sniping throughout the troubled holy land.

Jaffa, Mount Ebal, Mount Canaan, Hadirah, Beersheba, Ezdraelon and Acre were all scenes of considerable firing. Bombs were thrown at Jaffa.

Official denial of previous reports British families were evacuated from Jaffa aboard a warship. Earlier, official sources reported a number of British families were moved to the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv under protection.

The official casualty list showed: 48 persons, including one European, killed since April 29; 231 persons injured, including 17 Europeans. In addition, 969 Arabs and 275 Jews have been arrested, some of whom were subsequently released.

More than five weeks of disorders and terrorism, inaugurated when Arabs initiated a general strike and civil disobedience campaign, assumed the aspect of open rebellion in many districts of Palestine.

Nationalistic Arabs have demanded that British authorities stop both Jewish immigration and the sale of land to Jews.

Although the British armed forces here are the largest since the World War, further reinforcements are expected shortly. A portion of the troops is advancing in a mountain sortie against Arabs accused of plundering Jewish property.

China Protests

Refuses To Accept Explanations From Japan

Nanking China refused to accept Japan's explanation of the recent poured thousands of additional troops into North China

The protest, received from the Nationalist government, Tokyo explained the increasing numbers of Japanese soldiers in North China were "absolutely for the purpose of augmenting the strength of her Tientsin garrison."

The government's protest was delivered to Shigeru Yoshida, Japanese ambassador to China, by Foreign Minister Chang Chun.

The Japanese envoy handed to the Chinese minister a statement declaring it has instructed its ambassadors at the various capitals to inform the governments to which they are accredited that China is unable to accept the reasons Japan has given for augmenting the troops.

In addition, the government was understood to have forwarded a new protest to Tokyo.

HOLD FUNERAL RITES FOR J. SUTHERLAND

Solicito HATLEBERG June 8. Funeral services for John D. Sutherland (pioneer resident) were held from the late home on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Thomas Upton officiated at the church service and members of the Masonic lodge, of which the deceased was a member, officiating at the cemetery.

The chief mourners were the widow, a son Kenneth, and two brothers and a sister.

Pallbearers were Mr. Swick, F. Dobson, A.F. MacDonald, J. Caulfield, Mack Wheaton and J.D. Stapley. Frank Burbidge was heard in a beautiful solo rendering of "The Last to My Shepherd." Among the many floral tributes presented was J. F. Mitchell, Prince Albert, master mechanic of the Prince Albert division.

Born in Mariposa county, Ontario, 68 years ago Mr. Sutherland's paternal grandfather came to Canada in 1811 with Lord Selkirk and was his first officer.

The deceased was a familiar figure on the streets of Vermilion for several years, who he had left his farm home in South Battleford. He will long be remembered for his many acts of kindness especially among the poor.

FARM WOMEN'S WEEK AND ALUMNI RE-UNION

Applications are already coming in to the School of Agriculture, Vermilion for Farm Women's Week, which will be held at the school from July 7th to July 10th. A very interesting and varied programme has been arranged for the Short Course and those who attend will not only have a profitable but a very enjoyable and pleasant few days at the school. A nominal fee of $1.00 per day is being charged and we are looking forward to a real enrolment this year.

We are appealing to all students of the S.A. to make every effort to bring their mothers in for this course, so that they may enjoy attending classes in the same old class rooms. The course however, is for all and all are cordially invited to attend.

Don't forget the date—July 7th to 10th inclusive.

A general reunion of the S.A. Alumni Association will be held on July 10th, 11th and 12th. Last year 250 ex-students attended this meeting. At that time it was felt by many of the students that there was not enough for class reunions and consequently the time has been extended to three full days.

Sir Allen R. Aylesworth, Liberal member of the senate for North York, held the upper house if Canada were given the right to amend its own constitution confederation "would not last."

The Canadian Jewish congress resolved "to support all measures designed to intensify the boycott of German goods". The resolution was adopted at the final session of the third annual meeting.

The Union of Canadian Municipalities will meet in Vancouver August 19-20 instead of July 27-29 as previously planned so that the meeting will coincide with the visit of Sir Percy Vincent, Lord Mayor of London.

Vancouver Harbor Master

Performing Of Automobile Gave Commander Head His Job

For more than a quarter of a century Commander A. H. Pease, has been harbor-master of Vancouver, and oddly enough, it was the performing the automobile that landed Commander Reed in the position he has held for so long. He retired as ship's master in 1908 and came ashore with the intention of going into the horse-breeding business. It didn't take him long, however, to discover what every boatsman already knew that the day of the horse was passing, to be returned to the seafaring profession, did some marine surveying for the Dominion Government, and eventually was appointed port warden of Vancouver. Though well over 60 years of age Commander Reed is still a sheer amateur boxer.

Will Be Well Represented

Premiers of Commonwealth Going To Coronation Next Year

Canada, as to the case of previous coronations, will be well represented at Westminster when King Edward is crowned May 12, 1937. Prime Minister MacKenzie King and a large section of the Dominion privy council will attend as will probably opposition leader R. B. Bennett and many other leaders and members in the House of Commons and Senate.

Confidence In League

But Hertzog Thinks Versailles Treaty Should Be Overhauled

Prime Minister J. B. M. Hertzog at Cape Town termed the post-war Versailles treaty "the world's greatest source of friction" and declared failure of the League of Nations would lead to destruction of civilization.

General Hertzog, also minister for external affairs in the Union of South Africa, was speaking in the senate in a debate on the league.

He urged the necessity of revising the treaty, adding: "If war comes, this cursed treaty will be responsible."

The debate was on a motion by Dr Thomas Visser, vice-president of the senate, that activities of the league be extended to the interests of world peace and the application of pacific measures. Dr. Visser charged the league, as constituted at present, with "hypocrisy and subservience" to Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia.

Dr D F. Malan, leader of the National party, moved an unsuccessful amendment to Dr Visser's motion, that the league should convene a world conference and should itself be revised in the light of its own experiences and that a plebiscite in any country in the world would result in a vote for peace.

General Hertzog expressed confidence the league would yet attain its high ideals. Its failure would lead to the destruction of civilization.

Concluding, Hertzog said no one could condemn Great Britain for not disarming because she was the one country which has done her best in this respect

Business Was Brisk

Operators On R.M.S. Queen Mary Had Busy To Do

Radio, wireless and telephone communications handled aboard R.M.S. Queen Mary from the time of departure from Southampton until the arrival at New York, included more than 90,000 words of press dispatches sent and received, constituted an unprecedented volume aboard a merchant ship.

Although 14 operators worked at one time for a period of 36 hours without sleep, it was impossible for them to keep up with the demand for service.

There were 1 177 radio messages sent, totalling 62,501 words, and 975 messages received, totaling 18,826 words. In addition, about 10 000 words were received from the Canadian Press and other sources for the ship's newspaper, "The Ocean Times."

There were 43 incoming Atlantic telephone calls completed for a total of 341 minutes and 33 outgoing calls for a total of 213 minutes.

The ship established a record for Atlantic telephone service, probably because she is equipped with a mercury device preventing other persons from listening in.

The longest calls from the ship were to South Africa, approximately 8,000 miles. Also there were two radiophone calls simultaneously to London and New York.

She sailed with stamps sufficient for what was expected to be an extraordinary demand. Before she was well out, the library was selling and demanding stamps at a time. She had 25,000 picture postcards aboard All were gone by the end of the trip.

Shatterproof Glasses

Now Lenses Protect Eyes Of Workmen And Children

Among the recent developments in spectacle lenses is the new English lens known as Moldrx. These lenses cannot be told from the ordinary lenses which shatter to fragments when broken. They can be ground to any strength either in white or colored, single vision or double. Besides correcting any optical defect the same as any regular lenses, they have the added advantage of protecting the eyes from the danger of having the glasses broken on the face. This is particularly valuable in the case of children, and those engaged in work where there is a possibility of pieces of iron, steel or stone flying in the face To those interested in such sports as tennis, badminton, golf etc., they are an absolute guarantee against injury to the eyes through breakage.

Airmen Are Honored

Recognition Of Achievements In Flight Across Antarctic

Honorary rank of air commodore has been conferred on H. Hollick-Kenyon, that of honorary group captain on J. H. Lymburner, it was announced by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie. These distinctions have been awarded in recognition of the achievement of the two recipients in connection with their aeroplane flight across the Antarctic continent.

These Canadian aviators, both of whom have had years of experience in Arctic flying on hazardous Canada, were selected by Sir Hubert Wilkins to act as pilots for the Lincoln Ellsworth trans-Antarctic expedition. Hollick-Kenyon was chosen for his special qualifications as an air navigator and Lymburner as an air engineer. Hollick-Kenyon acted as pilot on the flight hailed in aviation circles as an achievement without parallel in the history of flying. Upon Mr. Lymburner's ability depended the airworthiness of the plane for this test.

Hollick-Kenyon and Lymburner joined the air force on being residence in Canada. The former served as a pilot with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and later with the Royal Air Force, in which he remained on active service.

The achievement of these two Canadian aviators was the fruit of unique experience gained in Canada. It is recognized as a pioneer exploit, equivalent in its way to those of Alcock and Brown, Lindbergh and Kingsford-Smith," said Mr. Mackenzie, in making the announcement.

"It is the desire of the Canadian government to express in this way proof of honorary rank the congratulations of the whole people of Canada to Hollick-Kenyon, on the splendid honor that they have brought to their country."

Lloyd George Building Shop To Enter Slack Season

Lloyd George, remarkably successful as a cabinet minister, has announced he will enter the retail business. He was once prime minister and he now has a $1,000,000 shop built near his estate at Churt, Surrey, which will stock fresh fruit, vegetables, milk, cream, butter and pan. It is hoped the produce will appeal especially to the passing stream of motorists.

Luxury Travel in Russia

Soviet Boudoir Train Said To Be Modern Version

A Soviet boudoir train which makes the luxury trains of other European countries look like stage coaches was on an experimental run recently to Bochi, summer resort in the Crimea.

The least of its appointments is a barber shop — capitalistic trains have those. It also carries a nursery car with toys, complete bath compartments, individual radios and a piano, all of which are contained in hotel doormen.

Passengers may rent pyjamas and slippers aboard the train in order to travel in all the comfort of their own boudoirs. Each of the chairs can be separated from the others by curtains, providing perfect solitude for those who like it.

Women may obtain needles, thread, and yarns with which to while away the time, merely for the asking.

Explanations And Comments

The Crucifixion, Luke 23:33-38. On Golgotha, the place which is called the Skull, outside the walls of Jerusalem, they crucified Jesus. On either side of him was hung a malefactor.

"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do"—that is humanity at its greatest. Men have their conceptions of human nature and of what things make for greatness therein. These conceptions are very many and very varied. I submit that humanity has never been seen greater than in the Man Jesus when he said this. In the coal of fiercest pain and bitterest torment, no anger, no lurking desire for punishment upon the men who were then treating him." (G. Campbell Morgan).

The people stood beholding, and the rulers scoffed at him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if this is the Christ of God, the chosen. This was their test of Messiahship. "It did not enter into their minds for a moment that the meaning of Messiahship was not the saving of the world, but the saving of others." And the soldiers also mocked him, saying, If thou art the King of the Jews, save thyself. This was their test of kingship. They also would not conceive of a king who would do nothing to save himself. Pilate wrote a title and put it over him. This is the King of the Jews." "Art thou the King of Jews?" Pilate had asked him, and Jesus had replied, "Thou sayest" (Luke 23:3). Let us recall here the words in the first chapter of Luke: Thou shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

The place of this superscription the eyes of faith soon recognized, "Behold, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world !" (A. E. Garvie).

The Death of Jesus, Luke 23:44-46. Three hours of darkness and silence followed. The sun was hid, the sun hidden but the curtain between the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies in the temple was torn in two, Jesus' self-committal to the Father in Psalm 31:5 was heard, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit," and then his spirit passed on to God.

A Remarkable Discovery

Enables Blind To Read From Ordinary Printed Page

Discovery of an apparatus which enables blind persons to read from ordinary printed page through a series of minute electric shocks was announced in London by the Royal Western University psychology student at Evanston, Ill.

The apparatus employs a photo-electric cell which converts light reflected from the printed page into the electrical energy necessary to produce the shocks.

The "reader" places his hand in a specially constructed wooden device and reads by moving the cell in a series of nine bands. Through the holes in these bands project the ends of small coils of wire.

Light reflected from the printed page and converted into electrical energy regards these wires in many different order according to the shape of the particular letter. As the wires coils expand they are felt by the hand of the "reader". After long training, the reader may learn to interpret each different series of shocks into the correct letter

His inspiration for developing this type of apparatus came from Helen Keller, famed teacher of the blind.

Once Did Flourishing Trade

Career Of Mercyhorn Pipes Is Dead In Vienna

Carving of meerschaum pipes once a flourishing trade of which Vienna held a virtual monopoly, is dying.

Simon Schlid, whose name was famous among the pipe smokers of the world for his artistic work, died there at the age of 66, almost in oblivion. Few of his pipes seem to survive, but none of them ever attained the fame of Schlid, for whose pipes and cigar holders, faced with artistically carved lions, dogs, or bearded philosophers, enormous prices were paid.

Great Change Made In Barracks Of Scottish Guards

For the 400 men of the second battalion Cameronians (Scottish Rifles) at Quebec Barracks, London, "Come to the Cookhouse Door Boys" has now been translated into "Gentlemen, please take your places."

Snow-white tablecloths cover neatly arranged tables, on which knives, forks, spoons and glasses, and even napkins, are laid out. Vases of flowers from barrack gardens complete the scene.

Food is served up more invitingly and every mess offers alternative menus.

Soldier waiters in white jackets—cut on the lines of ship's stewards—hover round, replenishing water jugs and clearing away plates.

No longer is there a noise like an air raid; plates are taken away quietly and deftly.

Men are allowed to wander in for their meals when they please, without a bugle. Many wear any clothes they choose, provided they are clean, from "full parade" to "civvies" and dressing gown.

Although the old Scottish custom of pipers walking round the room and playing at meal times has not been introduced as a final touch, there is discreet music from loudspeakers.

Major D. A. H. Graham, second in command of the battalion, who has had much to do with bringing about these changes, said:

"We believe this will result in a considerable saving over the old system of "First come, first served" and "Grab all you can, because you will not get any more."

Science Set New Record

Wirephoto Gave Newspapers Quick Service On Auto Race

While grimy-faced speed aces were smashing records recently in the annual 500-mile auto race at the Indianapolis' famous speedway, science, with a camera and a network of wires, was setting records, too.

Just 16 minutes after the wave of a checkered flag signalled Lou Meyer's victory, an electrical print picture of the race finish started moving over a portable wirephoto machine to newspapers from coast to coast.

Never before had any picture been transmitted by radio so soon after the event.

While fans were still leaving the speedway, the picture was in newspaper offices on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, catching late afternoon papers in the home and early morning

Division Of Ethiopia

Frontier Of New Roman Empire Names Are Given

All Ethiopia has been divided into five parts by Benito Mussolini, creation of the new Roman empire in Africa.

His cabinet approved a project by which each part become an administrative division. They are:

Eritrea capital, Asmara;
Amhara capital, Gondar;
Galla and Sidamo capital Jimma;
Harar capital, Harar;
Amhara capital, Mogadiscio.

The cabinet announced each division represented a homogeneous organism "ethnically, geographically, historically, and politically"

Addis Ababa was named the capital for the new administrative organization of Ethiopia with a viceroy in charge, aided by a vice-governor-general and the chief of the general staff, the latter handling military matters.

One in the World War caused 181,-065 known British casualties, which include more than 9,000 deaths.

Still when you see a car so old you feel it must be paid for.

Mother was disappointed! She thought she had taken such care to leave her mustard pickles just right. It was all the fault of that clumsy steward she had used, thinking to save a few cents.

It is the pure mustard made from grain in pure pants pocket—left side—and hand out that cash. Quick now!"

His obeyed as slowly as possible. But the man with the wavy hair, the beady eyes above the mask that stared down the shining barrels. He took the wallet containing nearly eight thousand dollars, and slowly, reluctantly extended it.

The man on the ground snatched it. Inspected bags that had been thrown in the truck, visible here and there, were trail enough to the gangsters—the full swag. Hastily the cavalcade pressed on in silence, as fast as the trail allowed.

They rode hard, for hours, making a long arc. "Say, we've gettin' near town!" Waco pointed to distant lights.

Link glanced at him. "Maybe that's the best place he could hide." Art Laverty, one of the punchers, scratched his head. "Reckon I'll have to find a guy holed up in town, Stephen ain't there to get help from. He's with the 'Wagonin', and he said he had important business on. Reckon he's still making his investigation. Say, Link, you gonna pull a Dollar Job with Helen Hamilton. Shore takes Amos a long time."

"Maybe," Link said slowly, his words dropping with crisp earnestness, "I reckon you all know what that word means to—dirty." Nobody to Helen Hamilton, most of it is mine. Or rather, it belong to you chaps and the rest at the dam. Without that cash the 'dirty wrench' in Helen's might get sore and wreck all they've done.

"Somehow," he stated in a low tone of iron determination, "we've got to get that cash back!"

"Yeah, but how?" Byrne's face wore a hopeless look. "This hombre we trailed has got a place to hide, shore!"

Fleming nodded. "That's where you fellows come in. If you'll back me up, I'll go in and get the guy, maybe—we'll get that cash back. I don't know how, but we will!" His face was cold and with eyes that were mere slits he stared from one to another of the punchers.

"I'm with you," Laverty said, and Byrne nodded. Link's head in silence. "Guys, you don't cut in on with me!" Link's command. "I'll go in alone. Walk your rigs toward Main Street. Finally you'll see me. I'll be waving my hat—that means I'm coming out. Then you can ride in and help me. Now, let's get going!"

Fleming drew. The two-gun man jerked both triggers, but his shots wailed harmlessly into the hard. Link's gun rose, and fire licked from its muzzle. Then another shot that sent the gunman's weapon flying from his hand. It hit and sailed away—gently. With a grasp the man clutched and fell.

Again the twin Colts roared—and this time Link felt a knife-like sensation along his ribs. He reeled, then drew his own weapon, aware with savagely he shot again.

The bullet went hurtling to its fateful target. The "Wagonin" man swirled in mid-air, throwing beams of mirrored sunlight. At the same time Link's gun spoke once more, over the flank of his frightened mount to strike the road with a thud that was a gasp of death.

Fleming spun his mustang around and went rushing after the fellow who had wrecked his career. He plunged, recklessly disregardful of branches that gouged at his face and eyes. There was no sight, no sign of his man.

Then, as he emerged at the roadside at another point, he spied a figure in the distance. The man had a fast nag! Already he had almost a half mile lead, had gained while he threw himself on his own gun; play

AUSTRALIA'S POPULATION PROBLEM

Australia has a relatively small population in a widely scattered continent. Its settlement is not proceeding at a fast pace. Only 146 681 acres of crown lands were taken up for settlement last year. At the present time, in progress Australian population will not reach 10,000,000 people until the year 2000. Settlements is proceeding at about a quarter pace.

All this brings interest to Australian people as much as to anyone else. Though the continent will be settled from the white to the brown people of the tropics, the land saved for the white race will not be new land, but will be new to settlers as much as to the native.

LAND OWNERSHIP IN ARGENTINA

The ownership of wheat land in Argentina is a great credit to the country. Individuals, corporations or all the grain farmed being on a rental basis at the present time, and the proportion of the acreage cultivated by tenants estimated at 85 per cent in the province of Cordoba alone there are fifty separate estates

Lack Of Purchasing Power

One often hears the comment that the prosperity of the cities and towns is dependent upon the prosperity of the farmers, but little is heard of its corollary, namely that the well being of the farmer hinges upon the prosperity of the urban centres, though the one is unquestionably as true as the other

Possibly the latter has not been heard so frequently in Western Canada as the former because, until very recent times, the farmers' income has been largely derived from an exportable surplus of grain. Under such circumstances the consumer of the bulk of Western Canadian farm products was geographically remote and the fact that the affluence or otherwise of the consumer was of considerable import was but dimly perceived, if recognized at all

However, this relationship between the Western Canadian producer and the consumer of his products has undergone a change in the past few years and indications are not lacking that the change may be even more accentuated in the next few years

In the first place during the past half dozen or so of depression years a substantial percentage of Western Canadian farmers have had little or no income to boast about Because of a succession of dry years many of them had no crop to sell and others who reaped some wheat or other grains have not received sufficient prices to render their work remunerative, partly because of the closing of former markets and partly because of the existence of a big carryover which could not be liquidated, except at tremendous loss.

As a result of their predicament many farmers, even with conditions somewhat more promising, have reduced their acreages needed to bread grains and are endeavoring to increase their output of other products, including livestock, some of which are finding an outlet to a limited degree in overseas markets and others which, on account of their nature or because of lack of processing facilities, must necessarily be disposed of in local centres

In the case of those products which are exportable, it is necessary to find new markets or expand existing markets. In the case of products which must be disposed of in local markets, consumption capacity must be increased if the farmer is to be able to dispose of such commodities at a price to yield him a profitable return

Too frequently, in the past two or three years, farmers have had the experience of hauling or shipping produce to local centres only to find themselves faced with the choice of disposing of them at ruinously low prices or of taking them home again, unsold.

The irony of the situation is that in many cases, perhaps in all of them, the produce would have been welcome in the home of the potential local consumers but, because of conditions which made it necessary for the farmer to raise such produce, these people were unable to buy it, or only at such prices as to render the transaction unprofitable to the producer. In other words, the trouble was lack of purchasing power.

There is no question that local markets are capable of consuming a great deal more local produce if the consumer had the necessary purchasing power and this brings us back to the original statement that the well being of the farmer is dependent upon the prosperity of the urban centres and, so far as Western Canada is concerned, this is much more true than it was a few years ago.

If new local markets can be opened up and the purchasing power of the residents of existing local markets can be increased the problem of the farmer will be at least partially solved.

Fortunately there is every reason to hope that the next few years will see the development of new local markets with the discovery of mineral wealth in the northern areas and its development, a process which is being greatly accelerated at the present time

This, coupled with an increasing influx of tourists from other provinces and the United States give ground for belief that new markets for local products are in the making That the latter has real potentialities, at present principally enjoyed by Eastern Canada and British Columbia, is evidenced in the recent publication of statistics showing that more money was spent in Canada by tourists last year than was realized by the sale of Canadian export wheat

As for the expansion of existing local markets that is, as already stated, largely a question of purchasing power and how this purchasing power is to be increased is a question which is giving rise to a great deal of thought. Can it be done by some overt action or can it only be brought about by the ordinary evolution of economic processes?

One quiet student of affairs, whose name has never appeared in print and who never will, suggested to the writer recently that it could be brought about almost overnight if up or a dozen of the big industrial leaders of the nation would gather around a table and agree to increase salaries and wages all "throughout." he said, "give much thought to the purchase and display and sale of their commodities, but little or none to the other half of their business—the ability of the consumers to buy."

Maintain National Credit

By Meeting Obligations To The Full Extent Of Capacity

Members of Canadian Manufacturers' Association meeting at Quebec, best appreciation to the suggestion by their president, W. S. Morden of Toronto, that Canada, by application of "common sense and some old-fashioned methods, should anticipate the coming years with confidence and satisfaction."

The president, in a comprehensive annual review of world economic conditions presented at the annual convention, noted improvement throughout the world generally during the past year.

He was optimistic of the future but with his optimism came a note of warning against too ready spending and loose borrowings by governments.

"One feature in connection with the increase of public debt that is giving concern to many individuals and business men," he said, "is the increasing proportion of government obligations that is being acquired by banking institutions. It is, of course, a sound banking theory that when the liquid assets of chartered banks and banking funds are abundant, government securities form an ideal investment.

"This theory assumes that when industry and business revive and there is a greater demand on the banks for loans, the government securities can be readily disposed of to the investing public. It is a necessary implication that the amount of security so held should be greatly in excess of the capacity of the investing public to absorb. It also is widely felt that if the various governments had to look to insurance, loan and trust companies and private investors as the chief purchasers of their securities the banks could not create bank loans would operate as a curb on borrowing."

Mr. Morden said the aim of Canada should be to maintain national credit "by meeting obligations to the full extent of capacity, refunding the debt at lower rates of interest when ever opportunities occur, and reducing it gradually."

Steady improvement in conditions made it appear "reasonable to hope that Canada, as a whole, is gradually recovering from the great depression, which culminated the previous year," he continued, and trade asters that followed and had their origin in, or were as least precipitated by, the dislocation of the war."

New Type Electric Bulb

Stream Light Latest Development In Modern Illuminating Method.

A cigarette can be lighted in a jet of air streaming from the type of electric light bulb invented by the lamp development department of the Nela Park laboratory of the General Electric Company, at Cleveland, Ohio.

Details of the new development have been made public. The cigarette is one result of a revolutionary change in structure of electric light bulbs through a new art of working metal to glass.

The steam bulb is about the size of a large house lamp bulb. The filament over its tungsten filament is a copper coil. This coil develops a jet of steam the size of a pea and turns to black salt. The steam with this burning power has a temperature of 3,100 degrees Fahrenheit.

At a court function, we are told, Princess Margaret wore red gold and up a handkerchief which King Victor Emmanuel of Italy and Ethiopia had dropped, and was promptly thanked by the monarch. Well, His Majesty should be grateful. It's almost the only thing left he can stick it to, states the Windsor Daily Star.

One of our newspaper friends says the Windsor Daily Star brings a good story of the absent-minded professor who had suddenly found himself at a dinner which he didn't want to attend The professor rambled on something like this: "I didn't mean to attend the affair tonight, I meant to forget to come, and I forgot to forget."

Was Partly Modern

Proclamation Of Coronation Date Broadcast To Empire

With forms and ceremonies inherited from the immemorial past, the rite of the coronation of King Edward VIII. was duly proclaimed in London. But modern science and usage intruded even into mediaeval pageantry.

When the Earl Marshal, Duke of Norfolk, and his attendants stepped out upon the heavy walls of St. James's Palace, there was immediately in front of them a microphone to carry to the ears of the kingdom at large all that was said in the King's name. The proclamation set the date of the coronation as May 12, 1937. The date was announced in a special issue of the London Gazette.

While a fanfare blared from the silver trumpets of the Horse Guards, the Garter Principal King of Arms, with white-gloved hands, unrolled a long scroll nearly a yard wide. In sonorous tones he began the reading. The great crowd of Grenadiers stood at attention, and the great crowd hushed into silence. By means of amplifiers, every sentence was heard distinctly in the farthest limits of the throng. Further away on the battlemented ivy-clad walls of the palace, more members of the King's personal household.

Sir Gerald read the proclamation, "Declaring that His Majesty's pleasure touching his royal coronation and the solemnity thereof." The reading of the lovestring public 10 minutes. It opened with a reference to "the favour and blessing of almighty God" and spoke of "loyalty and love for the preservation of the lawful rights and inheritances of our loving subjects."

Big Prize For Air Race

Race From England To South Africa Is Announced

Sir Alan Cobham announced that I. W. Schlesinger, South African financier, has given £10,000 ($50,000) prize money for the proposed air race from England to South Africa to coincide with the British empire exhibition at Johannesburg.

Schlesinger is promoting the race with Cobham, himself a pioneer longdistance flyer, as consultant. The Johannesburg exhibition opens Sept. 15 and will run until Jan. 16, 1937. The air race proposal has the approval of the British air ministry and the South African government has promised every assistance.

Entire organization of the race will be undertaken by the Royal Aero Club of Great Britain, participation will be limited to British empire pilots and aircraft. In this respect it will differ from the London-to-Melbourne race of 1934 which was open to all-comers.

Cobham made Schlesinger's motive in arranging the event was the promotion of commercial aircraft and the furtherance of air interest on the part of citizens of the British empire. But chiefly, he said, the race was intended to focus attention on the Johannesburg exhibition.

Cobham added the race would show that the day was not far distant when it would be possible to breakfast a weekend in Johannesburg. Possibly, he predicted, the flight will be accomplished in two days.

Feather In Your Cap

Phrase Originated From Custom That Is Almost Universal

The phrase means that something is a feather to you. The allusion is to the very general custom in Asia and among the American Indians of adding a feather to the headgear for every enemy slain. The ancient Lycians, and many others had a similar custom, which is still common on the English sportsman who kills the first woodcock to pluck out a feather and stick it in his cap. The custom in one form or another seems to be almost universal. In Hungary at one time none might wear a feather but he who had slain a Turk, and it will be remembered that when Jordan quelled the Pajang rebellion he was honored by the Chinese government with the "yellow jacket and peacock's feather."

SHORTCAKE BISCUITS

4 cups flour
4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons shortening (½ butter, ½ lard)
1 tablespoon sugar
Milk, sufficient to make soft dough. About 2½ cups

Sift together three times flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in the shortening. Add sugar, mix well. Add milk to make soft dough. Turn on floured board. Pat or roll lightly to 1" thickness. Cut rather larger than ordinary. Bake in oven 200 degrees F. 15 to 20 minutes. When done split and spread with creamed butter. Put between biscuits some crushed and sweetened strawberries. The biscuits may be covered with whipped cream, and the juice from the fruit poured round the dish or served at the table as many people do not like the sheet cake biscuit soaked with juice.

Famous Canadian Artist

Florence Watson Dies In His 81st Year

At His Home In Ontario

Homer Watson, one of Canada's outstanding artists, died at his home near Kitchener, Ont., in his 81st year. He had been ill for several months.

In the same rural community where he died, Homer Watson was born in 1855 and began his art career without tuition of any kind.

In 1880 the Marquis of Lorne purchased "The Pioneer Mill," exhibited by Watson at the Royal Canadian Academy. This painting and another of Watson's early works, "Last of the Drought," went to the private collection of Queen Victoria. Watson's fame spread and he made several trips to England, exhibiting with the famous artists of his day.

His outstanding contribution to the history of the Great War was his panoramic "Valcartier Camp", done under assignments by the Canadian government in 1914.

WIDER MARKETS FOR CANADIAN GOODS IS NEEDED

Quebec.—R. W. Coghlin of Montreal, as the new president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, challenged the C.M.A. to "go and negotiate sound and enduring trade agreements that will benefit all Canada.

"During our history we have made unsatisfactory agreements with other countries but we have also made very good ones," said Mr. Coghlin at the annual dinner at the conclusion of the 60th convention.

"Let us continue our efforts to negotiate sound and enduring agreements," he said. "Volume of trade alone is not sufficient. The character and value to this country of the exchange of products for those of other countries are vital to prosperity.

"Canada has immense stores of wealth in the form of raw and partly finished materials," said the new president. "But it would not be wise, economically, to export them unless it is done to the permanent advantage of Canadians."

If industry was to employ more people it should be given every reasonable encouragement, Mr. Coghlin said. If manufacturing operations were curtailed by external influences, unemployment would increase.

An appeal for members of the organization to take greater interest in the economic and financial affairs of all western Canada was made by F. C. Brown of Vancouver, newly-elected first vice-president.

The delegates, who previously applauded when one of their speakers suggested all unemployed in Canada should be put to work on a canal basis to relieve the taxation burden, heard from Hon. T. D. Bouchard, Quebec's minister of labor and public affairs, how Quebec province plans to do this.

"The plan has no other end in view than to improve the lot of the unemployed on relief, to give a practical use to activities that have been lost up to now in direct relief, to protect finances of public bodies and to attenuate the crisis by stimulating commerce and industry through creation of useful works," said Mr. Bouchard.

C.P.R. To Build Road

Given Right To Build Branch Line In Quebec

Quebec.—By a vote of 23 to 4 the railways committee of the Quebec legislature gave the Canadian Pacific Railway the right to build a line from Anglier, in Labelle county, to Senneterre, in Abitibi county, via Normanda.

The company, by its bill, first requested permission to build as far as Lake Chibougamau. The committee decided it could only build the line from Anglier to Normanda.

Loyal To Empire

Propaganda Favoring Peace At Any Price Deplored By I.O.D.E.

Winnipeg. — Propaganda favoring peace at any cost, "the effect of which would be the severance of ties which bind Canada to the empire," is deplored in a resolution endorsed by the National chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, in annual session here.

The resolution reaffirms loyalty to the empire, pledges support and accepts all responsibilities of empire ties.

The resolution contends "there is being fostered in the Dominion a propaganda, the avowed purpose of which is the avoidance of war at any cost, but the ultimate and inescapable effect of which would be the severance of the ties which bind Canada to the empire."

It has become apparent that the efforts of the English-speaking peoples of the world to substitute collective security for individual national armed effort in the adjustment of international differences are being obstructed to by the other nations of the world.

"And because of this fact, it now becomes apparent that those peoples who truly desire peace must use international justice must be prepared to defend those principles by force where united action becomes necessary."

The resolution reiterates the order's "desire for peace to be maintained by every honorable means," but "does heartily hereby accept those national responsibilities which accompany the benefits accruing to Canada from its association within the British commonwealth of nations, and we do therefore, now reaffirm our loyalty and pledge our support to the empire."

Use Waste Gas

System To Utilize Gases In Western Canada Now Permitted To Operate

Quebec Negotiations are now under way to commercialize the gases at present escaping into the air in Western Canada oil fields, Major General A. G. L. McNaughton, president of the National Research Council, told Canadian Manufacturers' Association in annual convention here.

"We have developed a system," said the president, for manufacturing these gases into products such as used in the manufacture of motor tires."

He was not prepared to say to what extent the new system would be developed but he expressed the hope it would be made to provide Canada with its own crude stock, of which approximately $1,000,000 worth was imported in the last year.

Advance Arguments In Favor Of Scientific Research

Quebec. — Canadian manufacturers were urged to lend a hand to development of scientific research and to derive the greatest benefit from its latest discoveries

Benefits to be derived from this course were outlined to the annual convention of Canadian Manufacturers' Association by L. A. Hawkins, executive engineer in charge of General Electric Research laboratories at Schenectady, N.Y., and Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, president of the national research council at Ottawa.

Mr. Hawkins, who described research work as essential to an industry as a cost accounting system, said: "If we could produce more and more and work less and less, there is no reason why life should not be better than that enjoyed by the people of old Athens who each had at least four slaves."

BATES RETURNS MONEY HE MADE ON INSURANCE

London.— Alfred Bates, advertising executive, and one of three men held guilty by the tribunal which investigated the Hopgood, Bates, Bay scandal of insurance brokerage, has repaid his winnings to the insurance brokers.

Bates had claimed the money in connection with insurances he placed against increased taxes in the budget brought down last April.

Harold Eves, Baker solicitor and secretary, said a letter had been written to all brokers through whom insurance had been placed informing them although Bates "adheres to the evidence given by him before the budget inquiry tribunal, in view of the report of the tribunal published he has no desire to make a profit out of insurances placed for him."

Bates, in testifying before the tribunal, had sworn he had received no information from any source before Mr. His insurances were a result of his judgment that increased armament expenditure would make an income tax increase inevitable, he testified. In its report, the commission charged Bates with "misstating and suppressing the truth."

Meanwhile, the central figure in the inquiry, J. H. Thomas, sought seclusion in the country. The former colonial secretary, who resigned during the investigation, must make a decision whether to resign his Derby seat in the House of Commons.

The third man mentioned unfavorably in the report, Sir Alfred Butt must also consider his position in respect to his seat in the House of Commons. The report held he and Bates used information they obtained in the budget secret to enrich themselves against increases in tea and income taxes, later announced in the budget.

Unfit For Duty

Hon. R. B. Bennett Says Many Judges Should Be Retired

Ottawa.- Many Canadian judges are physically and mentally unfit to give continuous and concentrated attention to their duties, Hon R. B Bennett, Conservative leader, told the House of Commons.

The former prime minister, honorary president of the Canadian Bar Association and a leading lawyer of the west in his earlier days, said there were judges on the high court benches of every province who would be "better off on pension although incapacitated to carry on their work"

The house was considering a bill to place federal appointed on charges in the Ontario high court made by the province They involved two new trial judges and the retirement eventually of the chief justice in appeal.

The Conservative leader referred to men in the prisoners' dock, giving their evidence and judges so deaf they could not hear. That, he said "is a condition that exists at this time in more than one province"

At the same time, Mr. Bennett gave his opinion Canadian judges were under-paid. Hon C. H. Cahan, former secretary of state in the Bennett administration, did not agree with his party chief. The trouble was "lack of moral courage" on the part of successive ministers of justices who could retire provincial high court judges who were incapable of performing their duties

WOULD DEVELOP GREATER TRADE WITHIN EMPIRE

Quebec Canada's sister dominions were pictured as the ground on which she might develop her export trade.

The suggestion was made to delegates to the 65th annual convention of Canadian Manufacturers' Association by representatives of Australia and New Zealand, South Africa and the British West Indies.

Possibilities of empire trade development also were reviewed by F. W. Field, senior trade commissioner for the United Kingdom in Canada and Newfoundland

From the delegates themselves came advocacy for increased production, increased sales and increased exports. But from Hon W. D. Euler Canadian minister of trade and commerce came a warning against any heavy production when it became a matter of production below costs

The minister spoke optimistically of conditions in Canada generally, and he urged his listeners to take every advantage offered in foreign markets. His sympathies with manufacturers in certain problems but he blamed them for provoking some of their own difficulties. They were not taking full advantage, for instance, of foreign trade possibilities

The minister conceded in some cases difficulties were due "perhaps to force of circumstances," but he thought there can be little doubt that [illegible] could be made in this field

LEAGUE STRESSES VITAL PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Geneva - The International Labor conference opened its sessions here by electing C W Oxenmaes of Denmark as president. Delegates of 46 countries, including Canada, were present

Dr. W. A Riddell, the Dominion's adviser to the League of Nations at Geneva, and chairman of the governing body, hailed the conference as an opportunity to create in the whole world a sound public opinion in regard to the vital problem of labor and economics

Dr Riddell delivered the opening address to the 153 delegates and 226 technical experts. Italy was not represented, her delegates having been withdrawn from Geneva on instructions from Rome.

The Canadian, dean of the diplomatic corps in Geneva, stressed the importance of the report prepared by H B Butler, British economist and a director of the I L O

The report drawn a comprehensive picture of the present international crisis and deals particularly with unemployment. Butler set forth the unemployment problem could only be solved through better organization of the world's economic life.

The International Labor office, said Dr Riddell, is "one of the most important, if not the most important, forum, for discussion of problems fundamental to human wellbeing."

Memorial To King George

Premier Baldwin Urges Erection Of Permanent Memorial To Late Sovereign

London - Prime Minister Baldwin, speaking in an empire-wide broadcast on the birthday of the late King George, appealed for the erection of a permanent memorial to the late sovereign.

He asked the "members of one great family to be sure that long after our voices are still there shall be some permanent memorial to King George for the service and happiness of future generations — a visible sign of the love of the king's people."

The prime minister commended the two schemes adopted by the representatives of Australia and New Zealand, South Africa and the British West Indies.

Possibilities of empire trade development also were reviewed by F W. Field, senior trade commissioner for United Kingdom in Canada and Newfoundland combines the twin yeast vitamines B and G with chocolate and milk in this delicious dairy food.

These Twin Yeast Vitamins combine together to furnish a stimulus to growth and healthy digestive nerve and skin conditions. They are preventive in nature and should be taken in food regularly. Insufficient intake is probably more serious in children than in adults on account of the child's lower capacity for tissue storage of Vitamin reserve and a relatively greater need to meet the requirements of growth as well as of maintenance.

According to the V.R.A. "Radio" Miss Shaw and rather an unpetting experience when leaving Montreal a short time ago, as she was on her way to the Maritimes to spend her holidays. A collision with another locomotive and two cars, threw every one to the floor, and the train in which she was travelling was damaged quite badly. She was apparently none the worse for her experience and was thankful to resume her journey after a delay of 4½ hours.

UNIFORM QUALITY OF PRIME BACON FACTOR

There were several outstanding features in the 1935 hog market, states the Sixteenth Annual Market Review 1935, issued by the Live Stock Branch, Dominion department of agriculture. Not the least of these was an average price somewhat higher than in 1921, despite a lower average price for bacon in the British market during part of the year. This situation developed out of strong competition for the visible supply of hogs, and from the producer's point of view, made a satisfactory market. The trade made commitments to the British bacon market in excess of those of the previous year, apparently at times when the market was somewhat out of line with profitable business.

With regard to Canada's place in the British bacon market, the Dominion retained her position in 1935 as the second country in volume of supply to that market. This position was further consolidated in 1935 through heavier shipments in a smaller total volume of imports into the United Kingdom from all sources. In respect to bacon supplies, Canada also held second place, and here again offered a larger volume in a smaller total import than during the previous year. Denmark continued to secure by far the largest share of the British import bacon trade, and during the year the Irish Free State made a substantial gain in volume of product sold. Foreign countries supplies showed the effects of further restrictions in their quota allowances.

Unfortunately Canada's place position in the British bacon trade was not improved, and her bacon showed a lower average price than the similar product of any other country. This situation has been variously explained from time to time, but it might be well to state here, says the Review, that while the top qualities of Canadian bacon are as good as, and possibly at times better than the top grades of other bacon imported into the United Kingdom, the quality as a whole is still not satisfactorily uniform, in that respect with foreign bacon. Uniformity in quality is the most important factor in making or prices for bacon, particularly now that Canada is shipping a volume second in that of Denmark. This indicates the importance of the work which is being undertaken to develop further uniformity in the type and quality of the bacon finished for market, and also to unify packing house practice in the matter of processing and marketing.

FAIR PRIZE LISTS PRINTED

The prize lists for the Vermilion Fair are now in the hands of Secretary R.C. Heckbert, anyone desiring a copy, who has not as yet received one may obtain it from the secretary's office. The lists were printed at the office of the Vermilion Standard.

FINAL WARNING

Despite the public warning published a short time ago regarding the prohibition of the discharging of fireworks within the limits of the town complaints of violations of the law have been made, in one case of a child just passing dangerously close to a girl this might have been a fatality. In the interests of public safety, parents who permit the use of .22 rifle are again asked to impress upon the children that no shooting is permitted within town limits and caution must be exercised at ALL times. Prosecution will follow any reports of future violations of the By Law.

MYRNAM TO BUILD $20,000 HOSPITAL

Plebiscite Results in More Than Two-Thirds Approval

MYRNAM, June 17.—Construction of a $20,000 hospital was approved in a plebiscite taken in this district this week. Much more than the necessary two-thirds majority was obtained for the project.

With one poll to hear from, 1016 votes were cast in favor of a municipal hospital, while 210 were opposed.

It is planned to commence construction of the building as soon as possible this summer.

BOARD OF TRADE HOLD REGULAR MEETING

Deal With Erroneous Impression in South M. D.

The regular luncheon meeting of the Board of Trade was held on Monday. The chief subject under discussion was the statement in the Grizzly Bear M.D. minutes to the effect that notice of motion had been given protesting against the attitude of the Board of Trade with regard to the proposed Vermilion-Wainwright highway. Inasmuch as the Board has never taken the view as the plebiscite are to be found hundreds or samples of grain taken from farmer a distributors and elevator hands, also the rural section and the town with its shrubbery and flowers. In about one week there will be a sorrowful showing of ponies.

We would be extremely pleased to hear from groups of any kind who would like to have a picnic at the school and on the grounds. Bring the children and the ball team, if you have one, there is a large level space where they may play to their hearts content.

We shall be pleased to do what we can to make your visit a pleasant one.

Preserving B.C. Landmark

Directional Finder Will Be Carefully Guarded In Future

A block of stone engraved with local letters, left at Vancouver, B.C., in 1906 by the crew of H.M.S. Egeria to determine longitude and latitude, has been uncovered near the sunset pier in Stanley Park.

The stone, buried under moss and gravel, was formerly used to correct errors in instruments in use at the time and since was completely forgotten.

Inscribed on the stone is the exact longitude and latitude of its position with a note it was placed there by the Egeria, historic British survey ship

The mark is hardly worn by feet of curious visitors who in recent years have a historic relic lay hidden beneath them. Steps are being taken to preserve this landmark. A protective barrier of chain and concrete will be erected around it or it will be roofed in a stone structure surrounded by a small garden plot.

Many Memorial Plans

Late King George Will Be Immortalized All Over Empire

The late King George V. will be remembered through the ages. There have been 200 suggestions for memorials made from statues

Among the leading suggestions for a "philanthropic" national memorial to the late king are:

Acquisition of land for a national park.

Homes for old people throughout the nation.

A medical research fund to include the provision of radium for cancer

Hostels for young men and women seeking employment far from their homes

The money for the philanthropic memorial will be raised through public subscription)

In addition, many towns and cities throughout Great Britain are selecting memorials.

It is proposed to have a stained glass window in Liverpool cathedral and a solid granite statue in Aberdeen.

A tablet will mark the spot where King George lay in state in Westminster Hall

A plaque is being placed on the village in Wandsworth visited by the King on one of his jubilee tours There will be a great statue of King George on a site in London near Parliament Square.

A Silken Thread

The Tie That Binds Together The Component Parts Of The British Empire

The recent proposal of a prominent American citizen that the interests of Canada and the United States would best be served were the two countries to join hands politically to form one great, powerful and resourceful country, appears to be meeting with little or no response on the side of the long, unguarded international boundary, and this fact will probably surprise many good Americans who consider themselves as our cousins in a broad sense.

Naturally there is no reason for Canadians being content to remain within the British Commonwealth of Nations, a reason one could hardly expect Americans to appreciate. The reason is that the tie that binds the Dominion of Canada to Great Britain is not an iron chain but a silken thread. At the outset of the development of Canada this country was governed by Great Britain, but as the country developed self-government developed until finally, under the statute of Westminster, Canada gained full nationhood as a member, with equal status, of the great British Commonwealth. The bond is aptly likened to a silken thread, but there is no disposition to break the slender tie —Swift Current Herald.

Great Progress Made

Montreal Doctor Hopes Eventually To Stamp Out Scarlet Fever

Scarlet fever, number one infectious disease, on the doctor's list, since diphtheria has been conquered, is now generally considered to be no more dangerous than chicken pox or measles, according to Dr. H. B. Cushing, Montreal, who presented a paper on the disease before the recent annual convention of the Ontario Medical Association.

Dr. Cushing warned that while scarlet fever is practically under control with the mortality rate down to one per cent, there is still danger of epidemics of great seriousness.

"If there were no scarlet fever many infectious hospitals would be closed," said Dr. Cushing. The development of tests and anti-toxins by Dr. and Mrs. Dick have added greatly to prevention, diagnosis and treatment, but these are not quite as satisfactory as the similar methods used in diphtheria cases, he said.

Fr. Cushing was of the opinion that the use of serum for scarlet fever is justified and was optimistic the disease would eventually be stamped out.

"Scarlet fever is practically certain to return in a very virulent form," said Dr. Cushing, "but it is comforting to know we can control the disease with serum."

Year by year improvements succeed one another, on the prairies. The ox-cart gave way to the horse and buggy, and the horse and buggy gave way to the automobile, until now automobiles are displacing many of the duties of the automobile. The latest step in the line of progress on the prairies is the coming of a passenger train, with a full complement of sleeping cars and diner, from Prince Albert to Regina to serve Saskatchewan, whose sponsors believe will save a great many lives. Preparations for the institution of the new service have been under way for a great many months. In the use of this service, the passengers, if necessary, can be carried on a stretcher, wrapped in blankets and is kept free from the danger of chills until admission to hospital

Many Years At Sea

Sir Edgar Britten Started His Career In Sailing Ship

Sir Edgar Britten, piloting the Queen Mary out on the high seas, first went to sea in sailing ships 44 years ago in his youth he gets misty-eyed when his middle name, Theophilus, and it seems a pity, for he resembles the Roman Emperor and it was an apt name. Theophilus was an iconoclast and humorist, and so is Sir Edgar.

He has ridden pretty nearly everything the Cunard line ever set afloat, and was commodore of the Cunard fleet and captain of the Berengaria, among many others. He was knighted in February, 1934, the third of the Cunard staff to be selected for this honor. The others were the late Sir James Charles and Sir Arthur Rostron. The only White Star commodore who has been knighted is Sir Bertram Hayes.

Last fall, due to the consolidation of the Cunard and White Star lines, there was much uncertainly as to the command of the Queen Mary, with matters of seniority involved Sir Edgar, ready to retire at 60, was persuaded to sign on for three years more.

"You must be a proud man," says the King to the captain.

"I am, sir," says the captain to the King.

He left grammar school to become a sailor on the Barque Jessie Osborn. He joined the Cunard service in 1901. In 1905, he was given a commission in the Royal Reserve. Multitudes of sea-going folk know him, and even call him "Cappy," but not only a trim ship and trim person, but a trim vocabulary. He is a great spinner of yarns and given to salty and witty obiterums.

JUNE 21

JESUS EXALTED

Golden text: Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto Him the name which is above every name. Philippians 2-9.

Lesson: Luke 24.

Devotional Reading: Hebrews 2: 5-9.

Explanations And Comments

Jesus Appears to the Eleven Disciples, Luke 24: 36-43. On the evening of the first Easter, while the two of whom Jesus had made himself known at Emmaus in the breaking of bread were telling the apostles in Jerusalem of their wonderful talk with the Risen Lord, he himself suddenly appeared in their midst and gave them the customary form of greeting, "Peace be unto you." The apostles were terrified, for they supposed they were beholding a spirit, "a form recognisable as that of Jesus, but of Jesus not risen but come from the world of the dead disembodied or only with an apparent body."

"Why are ye troubled? and wherefore do questionings arise in your heart?" he asked, and then to reassure them, to convince them that he was living and was not a disembodied spirit, he bade them see and touch his hands and his feet. "A spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye behold me having," he told them. "The resurrection body could evidently offer resistance to touch, but its nature escapes our conception." (A. E. Garvie)

While they still disbelieved for joy ("a curious yet real state of mind") he asked for something to eat, and when they gave him a piece of a broiled fish he ate before them.

The Last-Talking, Luke 24:50-53. Luke tells us little of the other incidents of the forty days and records the ascension. With verse 50 compare Acts 1:1-11 and Eph. 4:10. They were on the eastern slope of the Mount of Olives, facing Bethany. The apostles believed that the abode of the blessed was up in heaven, and therefore the account speaks of Jesus as being "carried up into heaven." "Jesus withdrew from the disciples in a form and manner akin to the sphere of the unseen and spiritual. He did not pass up or down through the vast spaces of the skies. We are r as far away. He a divine superior to the limitations of time and space." (C. R. Erdman).

There was no longer any doubt in the disciples' minds as to the reality of Christ, and they worshipped him. Then they returned to Jerusalem with great joy, for they knew that they had not lost their Lord, but his promise was true, he would be with them always. And they were continually in the temple at all the stated hours of worship blessing God

Barometer Of Temperament

Teeth are a barometer of your temperament, says a dentist. A blush line, you're temperamental; maybe even inclined to be neurotic Yellow teeth indicate a lazy disposition. And pearly white teeth the kind every one yearns for are a sign of poor metabolism And craving of teeth America's sweet tooth has caused the per capita consumption of sugar in this country to nearly double since 1900.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY —

"That's kind of a crude description, but it'll have to do. Grab that bomber if you see him. Let the rest of us know. We don't want to stir up too much fuss. But we want —that—cash!" he ended with sharp emphasis on each word.

They nodded, jerking their hats lower, hunching cartridge belts, fixing a staystrap here and there.

"Suppose we can't find him. What then?"

Link's eyes became brownish-grey pinpoints. "We'll find him."

"You mean you're to raid the hull town if necessary?"

Fleming turned his horse. "I'm going to ride down Main Street in case. If everything was all right, keeping my eyes peeled. Shootin'll be a signal for you, of course. Lavery, you and Shaw go around the other side and do like Waco and the boys are going to do. It's a crazy idea, maybe," he confessed. "But I aim to find that money if it's in Rawhide—and we've got reason to think it is!"

CHAPTER XVII.

The men scattered. Link built a cigarette, lipped and lighted it, then urged his mustang at a leisurely walk down the main thoroughfare of Rawhide, sweltering in the heat.

Few persons were visible on the sidewalks, merely a scattering of ranchers come to town for supplies and to visit the post office. "Hy, Link!" one man hailed, carrying out the custom of the last seven months. "How's Fleming's Folly comin'?"

Another lanter granted audibly "Don't really think you'll hold water there, do yuh, Link" Reckon yuh want that dam for a dance hall, or sell creditors when they come a-gallopin'"

The six-foot rider grinned a little wryly, his keen eyes roving the street for a man in a checkered shirt and a Stetson hatted. The gambler might step out of any door around any building, for the showdown.

"Hey, Link!" Matt Benson called as if reading his very thoughts. "Melt's lookin' for yuh!"

He took out his sagun and examined it carefully, spinning the cylinder and testing the trigger spring By no means a professional gunman like his opponent, he nonetheless had had some experience defending himself Link and Melt were fast on the draw, but there was grave doubt in his mind whether he was fast enough when pitted against a professional killer like Melt.

He shrugged his shoulders. There was no way out of it. He would do his best, and the result must be left to fate.

Dismounting before Sam Pickett's store, he tied his mustang at the hitchrail, ducked underneath, and strode with jingling spurs across the board sidewalk A number of customers were in the store, all known to him at least by sight. The holdup was not there

Link beckoned Pickett aside. He spoke in a tone so low that the grey-haired storekeeper leaned to catch it. "Need a heavy-set chap in here with corduroys and a checkered shirt?"

Sam shook his head. "Nope. What's his name? Want him, Link?"

He touched the butt of his gun significantly. "I wish you wouldn't mention this. I'm not sure of his name but I want him, yes. Let me know if he comes in, will you?"

Puzzled, the storekeeper rubbed an eyebrow and nodded. "Sure."

Link turned away. Answering as briefly as possible the greetings of the customers, he sauntered out of the place. As he stepped over the threshold he paused for a sharp look up and down the street. It was necessary to keep a keen vigilance for the Lupot . . .

His errand repeated in Thomas's hardware store and the dingy Oddtime Saloon was equally fruitless. In the latter place he discovered Lavery just ordering a drink. From him he learned that Shaw and Fleming knew the wanted man had not been

The next building in line was the Half Moon. He shifted his gun belt as slowly he approached the place This was Hall's hangout.

As the door flapped behind him he gave a quick look around. Mell was not present. He stepped to the bar, ordered a drink, and made a more detailed survey. Five men were settling up a card game at a small table. Two others stood near Link at the bar. Gus, the rotund servitor, clapped a glass before him and filled it. As he was sipping the liquid, someone touched his arm.

He turned slowly to find Buns Hamilton, wearing a queer, harried look. "Link, you find that money?" Here's a note that says yuh should look in our shave over to me." He produced a slip of paper and tendered it.

The message was brief and business-like, signed by Helen, requesting that he hand the Triple H share to Buns. Fleming gave the paper back.

"I haven't the cash right now. Hell it, but I got robbed Bah! Don't spread it, Buns— I trailed one of the hombres to town," he whispered swiftly. "The other's lyin' out near Lupot Creek. I got a line on him. Where's the money? We'll — we'll have to get it back."

"But why are you worried?" he questioned, delaying the truth as long as he dared. "If you and Roper are—well, suppose Kligo does get possession if your spread? I mean, Roper and Roper are to be married. In this state a wife can't testify against her husband's property anyhow."

Link took aim at her as he spoke, and when he did lift his eyes from her anxiety trebled "But, Link! I thought—Roper boasted to Jackpot Mell that he didn't intend to marry me! That he was it was all in order to get the ranch Sheriff Stephen Kligo does not get possession of your spread? I mean, Roper and Roper are to be—married. In this state a wife can't testify against her husband's property anyhow."

Link took aim at her as he spoke, and when he did lift his eyes from her anxiety trebled "But, Link! I thought—Roper boasted to Jackpot Mell that he didn't intend to marry me! That he was it was all in order to get the ranch Sheriff Stephen Kligo does not get possession of your spread? I mean, Roper and Roper are to be—married. In this state a wife can't testify against her husband's property anyhow."

Just then Roper Kligo entered from the rear. "Hy, Buns, you got the cash? Then I'll tear up this transfer of yours. I ain't the man to play cards for paper. I want hard cash."

Fleming looked at Buns. "What does he mean, 'transfer'?"

His hands crossed until the knuckles showed white. "I've got to have that money before noon, and it's up to you to get it to me. That note proves it. Bring me the cash before noon," he insisted with keen anxiety showing through his arrogance. "I've got to have it to keep my word."

Link started to ask "What for?" but with a final insistent gesture Buns turned away, whispered "They play all nids, by golly!"

A look of surprise made him lessen his pace. "Why, he gives the same glad of labor. And he's drinkin'—plenty?"

Fleming seemed to catch Roper's eye and the rancher indicated that he should sit down. "Come on, have a drink. I'm worried with a hoss air, rolling a thick black cigar between his lips.

"Reckon not, thanks."

It was more than likely a crude attempt to trap him, of course, that Roper invitation. Jackpot Mell was certain to enter sooner or later. But Link preferred the shooting, if there was one, to take place outdoors rather than in the Half Moon.

"Aw," Buns sneered in reply to something Roper said, "the chinse he ain't got the money right now. Got to get a check cashed or something"

At any rate Buns Hamilton had kept the secret. Link paid for his drink, preparing to leave. As he handed back change Chue whispered to him: "Watch yore eeleg, Lingh. He's lookin' for you!"

"Thanks." Fleming strode outside. Just then a two-seater buggy drew up to the hitchrack before Pieper's bank and he recognized Helen Hamilton alighting. She saw him at the same moment and beckoned.

"Is Buns in there?" was her opening question as he approached reluctantly.

"Yes."

She frowned and moistened her cherry-red lips, looking up at him. "Could you—that is, would you—make him come out? Oh," she hurried on, "Buns said he had an important matter to attend to in town. That was last night, just after Roper left. I—I want to bed, but this morning I discovered Buns hadn't come back. I didn't find out till an hour ago, as I got up early and went to look at the dam. The men insist they must have their money today," she added

As Link nodded she stared downward and with the toe of one shapely riding boot made little marks in the dust. "I know Buns has been gambling. It's been in his blood. I've seen the longing in his face ever since he came home. Is he—drinking much?"

"Quite a bit."

Helen sighed. "Is Roper in there?"

"Yes. It might be hard to get Buns out. They played poker all night. Where did he get the money, Helen?"

"He didn't have much. But, Link, I—I'm afraid. You see, I gave him power of attorney."

He started. "You did?"

"Yes. Roper said I should give Buns the responsibility, that it would be the making of him. Why?" The girl's wide eyes sought his, and when he did not answer at once she clutched his arm in apprehension. "Link! What has he done?"

"Well," came reluctantly, "he signed over your ranch to Roper on some kind of temporary scheme. For cash to play with, I reckon—a loan. He's in a rush for the money before noon." He glanced at his watch. It's eleven now. Must be," he added. "Kligo was free enough to tie Buns up in some trick agreement. Either he must pay back the money Roper loaned or, if he can't, done it by noon, the Triple H changes hands."

"He got some slender fingers went to her lips. "He couldn't!" she gasped, and turned to stare at the stolid front of the bank. At light of him Halsby started from another direction, and Drew from a third. Helen looked at Link's grave face. "Why, you shipped the cattle, didn't you? Where's the money? We'll — we'll have to get it back!"

"But why are you worried?" he questioned, delaying the truth as long as he dared. "If you and Roper are—well, suppose Kligo does get possession if your spread? I mean, Roper and Roper are to be—married. In this state a wife can't testify against her husband's property anyhow."

Link took aim at her as he spoke, and when he did lift his eyes from her anxiety trebled "But, Link! I thought—Roper boasted to Jackpot Mell that he didn't intend to marry me! That he was it was all in order to get the ranch Sheriff Stephen Kligo does not get possession of

HEAVY RAINFALL SAVES CROP

Extent of moisture

The long promised and needed rain commenced to fall shortly before mid-night on Monday and continued well into Tuesday. Upwards of an inch and a half fell this storm was of short duration but a large amount in consequence of it coming in such a long steady downpour. The rain was general throughout the district and will be a great benefit to crops and early gardens.

EUROPEAN CROP CONDITIONS

Conditions during this spring have been favorable for wheat crops to make gains in Europe this week, although certain isolated districts damage has been experienced. Most results a good wheat prospect. Some rather wet weather has still been experienced, especially in the Balkan countries to the south-east, but on the whole conditions are favorable. France complains of much the same weather, and still wet weather and cold is being experienced in much of Germany. Rain is also reported in Italy, but the prospects are very good. Reports from Belgium and Holland indicate weather and conditions are favorable. The latter is also reported from Spain.

OTTAWA JOTTINGS

The fish on Lake Sall seem pleased with the rain, and Mr. Ottawa at the Lake reports a good catch on Friday June. He says he gathered in eight, to the end of the evening, Indiana pointed out that he had to be up early to get a score of 15.5.

The mixed schools softball game between the old people and the youngsters on the Victoria Day holiday, resulted in a win for the youngsters as the old people only got as far as the end of the sixteen innings and Fidelis Hunting against Bird Hill and there is no knowing the limit. The former netted the latter by 36 to 7.

After the ball games the crowd adjourned to the school where a good program awaited to finish the evening. Mr. Ed Eser was invited to take the chair and the following were among those who took part in the program. Howard Ferguson, Eric Hughes, M. Anderson, Kitty Tuvell, Miss Martin, Lionel Combe Martin, Marc Anderson, Tydzil Martin, M. Carlson, Mr. Hughes, Mrs. W. Rich and Mrs. Allen. Thanks to Martin Miss F. Isel and Lorrie Jane Thompson for a great singsong after the rendering of Jack and Jill it showed the crowd that they are beginning to small parties. Miss J. Thompson accompanied on the piano at the piano and also played for several other sing-songs. The Kinnaird brothers John and Albert played several selections on the banjo and two mouth organs. Their items were greatly appreciated. This was the first time such a combination had been heard and it is hoped that they will be heard again. It is well to keep this in mind when getting up a concert. Mr. W. Bird brought the proceedings to a close by inviting a couple of his humorous monologues which never grow stale. Mr. F. Bird was appointed chairman at the next meeting and a committee of five was appointed to make arrangements for a picnic in July.

We are sorry to hear that Leslie Palmer who has been employed by Martin Bird was taken to the Lloydminster hospital as a suspected case of infantile paralysis.

C.N.R. BUILD WORLD'S LARGEST LOCOMOTIVE

Number 6400 Is Stream-Lined

MONTREAL, June 14. The world's largest streamlined steam locomotive, and Canada's first "streamliner," Number 6400 of the Canadian National Railways, has just left the shops of the Montreal Locomotive Works, the builders.

Four other locomotives of the same design are in process of completion and will leave the shops of the builders at intervals of about one week. They will be used in fast passenger service by the National System, operating between Montreal, Toronto and Sarnia on the route of the International Limited. Running time will be made after the first of the new locomotives has been placed on exhibition. The builders estimate that the new engines are capable of reaching a speed of 100 miles an hour.

Canadian in design, Locomotive 6400 follows a stream-lining plan developed by the National Research Council at Ottawa and officers of the Motive Power Department of the Canadian National Railways. The design was selected after an exhaustive study of wind tunnel and other tests made with models of the 6400 class and of Canadian National locomotives.

Termed "partially stream-lined" in the official specifications, the new locomotive presents a striking appearance. The absence of such familiar front-end features as smokestack, bell cow-catcher and coupler will immediately strike the average observer. Smokestack and bell are concealed by the stream-lining and the automatic coupler disappears behind a door in the nose of the locomotive. The air pump and headlight generator are located on the front deck inside the nose to which access is provided by a side door. The whistle is installed outside of the stream-lining as required by railway operating rounds rules.

A stream of air drawn through a louvre at the top of the engine front will fill the smoke in the air as it emerges from the smokestack. This will give the engine crew clear vision and carry the smoke clear of the train.

Stream-lining extends from the nose of the locomotive above the running board to the engine cab, covering the pipes which were formerly exposed. The wheels and running gear are uncovered for easy access and inspection.

More than ninety-four feet long with its tender, the streamliner will render its working order weigh in excess of 450,000 pounds.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

(This paper does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by correspondents.)

Islay Alta.
June 12, 1936.

Editor Standard,
Vermilion Alta.

Dear Sir:—

In recent weeks I notice a discussion on insalvation. I regret that pressure of business prevented me from attending the luncheon of your Board of Trade at which the Hornby Scheme was discussed, but as an inhabitant of 28 years residence in this province I beg your indulgence

To sympathize with the British Settlers Association in many of their complaints. There is no doubt that in "Painting Canada in Attractive Colors" we, as a people, have been guilty of the grossest misrepresentation. Well do I remember the glowing accounts given in England by our representatives of the C P R and the Canadian government. Everything beautiful and encouraging was dwelt upon, samples of the grain raised in the Canadian West were on display in all the principal cities of England. The free, healthy life, the opportunities for youth were mentioned but nothing was said of the loneliness the lack of social opportunities, the high prices charged for all necessities the ridiculously low prices paid for agriculture produce, and last but certainly not least, the usurious rates of interest. Those were not given him to read, and I well remind you that the average man is too busy watching for the evils of which he knows, to worry about those of which he knows nothing. Then when he was the average immigrant caught.

Twenty five to thirty years ago the immigrant paid his own way. He had money in his pocket, and if he was green, he ripened in time because labor was scarce then. Is it now so? What farmer can afford to hire a green man now? Think of the lack of damage to equipment, the loss of valuable time, the possibility under inexperienced immigrants when we cannot find employment for our own people?

As to the Hornby Scheme I am fully aware of the supervision and of the safeguards which have been proposed but I am convinced that under the present or prospective conditions all such schemes are doomed to dismal failure. They may bring increased business for the members of your Board of Trade, but the net result will be disappointing.

If experienced Canadians cannot make it go, how can we expect immigrants to do so? These people are now, and will continue to be free agents, what is to prevent them from moving away from the supervision which may soon prove irksome—would suggest that before the Board of Trade speaks on an important subject, they might do well to submit the proposal to a ratepayers meeting of the municipal district to which those people will be placed, because it is the rural people who will pay in this arduous task.

With regard to the observations of your correspondents from Island Hill about the "Canadian Diet" I cannot see where he has any complaint on this head. With a row a sow, and a garden nobody should starve on the farm, in fact, I have known Canadian families who would consider themselves fortunate if they could afford the items mentioned in "Canadian Diet".

But after all is said, old timers should not be too hard on the immigrant, because they do not understand him, anymore than he under stands the conditions here. In fact I had always been accepted that it is the duty of the rich to help the poor, and social legislation is well advanced. This may be due in part to the fact that Britain is a rich country, not a poor borrower like Canada. I am not attempting to defend the present economic system, but I realize that a country of twelve millions cannot breed a way on its own. We have got to play the game whether we like it or not and any thing we give to a portion of our population, must be paid for by taxation upon the whole of our people, many of whom are little better off than the recipients of relief.

Thanking you for your space.
Yours very truly,
W. Lloyd Brown

ISLAND HILL

There was a feast of softball here Sunday when Bowtell and Morrison school teams came to try conclusions with the locals. First match was between Island Hill and Bowtell and the latter were the winners, the score being 21-8. Morrison next took the field against the invincible Hill team and were beaten by the tune of 20-8. Let us hope Island Hill will make good showing in the school events sensations as they have been doing at softball and we have no doubt they will. Line ups were: Bowtell—D. Minnard, F. Robinson, Bob Minard, Kathleen Robinson C. Shepherd, S. Kidall, M. Knutson, H. Knutson, Jim Harrison, Morrison—R. Miller, Jean Sellhuen, E. Sellhuen, R. Sellhuen, C. Hillier, E. Monaghan, J. Millar, J. Monaghan, B. Forsythe. Island Hill—Rod Mc. McMichael, K. McIntosh, S. Hall, E. Arnold, Richard McIntosh, T. Rochford, J. Dignan, D. Birmingham, C. Hall and Phil Hall. Were umpires, Goldsack and a large gallery watched the tussle throughout the whole afternoon.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Harley White on the birth of a son.

Bill Nelson with the assistance of volunteer help commenced building the new hall here Monday. He expects to have the job finished in the course of four weeks.

Notwithstanding Chatsworth's optimistic epistle the British settler's position is still precarious. Most Canadian papers are full of it. Last week we take this one at random: Breakfast—Cottage cheese, Melba toast, applesauce, coffee. Lunch—Corn, string beans, lettuce salad, Dinner—Roast mutton, Zucchini (Italian squash, lettuce, tomatoes, cucumbers, apricots. This is a good wholesome diet and let us examine it from the point of view of the settler. He cannot have meat in the form of beef. He cannot have mutton unless he has some cash and this is gone long since (if he attempts to keep sheep the dogs or coyotes will destroy them). Most of his vegetables are nipped by cutworms or killed by frosts. He may have an Italian squash but he certainly will not get apricots instead of Canada and as to Apricots whip he gets the whip all right.

The author of the article entitled "Lack of Purchasing Power" pleads supposed to last week's Standard put the whole thing in a nutshell when he stated "During the past half dozen or so of depression years the Western Canadian has not had the money or no income". Then how can the settler be expected to pay taxes land acquisitions, feed and clothe their children in the manner they are entitled to and what is more serious than all else he cannot obtain proper attention for his children with the result that they are growing up not

PLAYERS PARTICIPATE IN TENNIS EXHIBITION AT VEGREVILLE

Edmonton Stars Are Main Attraction

The local racquet wielders from and Valley Tennis participated in the tennis exhibition at Vegreville on Sunday afternoon when the Edmonton stars Harry Kinkaid and Jack Olive were the main attraction. Kinkaid is the Edmonton city champ and is regarded as number one player in Alberta together with Olliver they hold the city doubles championship. While the Cooper Boys were defeated 6-2 by the Edmonton champions in what the Edmonton Bulletin describes as a dazzling tennis exhibition they in turn took it out on the Vegreville boys the locals trimming Emil Wener and John Lemieux 6-1 and Claiborne and Pantely 6-4. In the only singles encounter in which the Vermilion players played Vella Cooper won from Stephen Goldsack 6-4, 6-2. A large gallery watched the tennis throughout the whole afternoon.

TASCHEREAU HAS RESIGNED PREMIERSHIP

QUEBEC, June 11. Louis Alexandre Taschereau, a self-educated lawyer who in 25 years as political life had risen from known to meaning of personal defeat resigned today as Liberal premier of Quebec.

Coupled with the announcement came the request for Lieut.-Governor Peter Monette to consider the formation of a new ministry. A general election was called for June 25. Taschereau's government had been charged by opponents with corruption in the handling of provincial finances.

Lieut.-Governor Monette accepted Mr. Taschereau's resignation and invited him to form a new ministry. The premier declined the honour on account of ill health and chose instead to lead the fight in the province's next general election campaign.

Taschereau's decision came as a surprise to his own supporters, who had expected him to lead the campaign. In a letter to Lieut.-Governor Monette, Taschereau said he felt he could not undertake the responsibility of leading the campaign because of his health.

The author of the article entitled "Lack of Purchasing Power" pleads supposed to last week's Standard put the whole thing in a nutshell when he stated "During the past half dozen or so of depression years the Western Canadian has not had the money or no income". The Need For Security

With the international situation as it is ... Europe but also in the Orient becoming daily more fraught with peril, the necessity for a reviewal and strengthened League of Nations becomes apparent, if world peace is to be preserved.

First hint of the blackened ... in continents which must have been obvious to any impartial student-observers of international trends, was in despatches received ... the early part of the present year, when the Italian Minister was reported to be paving the way for a rapprochement between Italy, Germany and Austria by attempting to effect a reconciliation of differences between the latter two countries.

When one considers the situation in which these nations find themselves at present, it does not require a natural profundity of thought to realize that a new World War is the goal they are striving for afterwards. All three are in urgent need of territory to provide an outlet for a large number of unemployed or part-employed people, and as a source of raw materials in the production of trade for all three. All three are in the same political situation with regard to the boat for they are forced to arm, while the people of all three countries are intensely averse to a regime what they have lost and this is probably the principal reason why they are content with the form of government they have.

It is true that the Italian aggression in Ethiopia appears ... the face of it to have resulted in triumphant advantage for the Italian cause, but it is doubtful whether, in the long run, occupation of Abyssinia even if subsequently results in not result in some modification of the fruits of victory at the instance of the League, will prove of great economic benefit to Rome. In any event it can surely be taken for granted that Mussolini and the Italian people ... in their present frame of mind will not be satisfied to call it a day, whatever the cost.

With this Italian viewpoint prevailing and Germany as it France eyeing one another with distrust and apprehension ... alliance between Germany and Italy, it is not hard to understand the reluctance of the British and European nations more secure. Both Italy and Germany are not only well armed and equipped but are perfecting their war machines to the nth degree of perfection ... utilizing the latest achievements of modern science.

The situation is an exceedingly difficult one for Great Britain whose people do not wish to be dragged into another conflagration. On the contrary the inhabitants of the United Kingdom are bending their energies towards recovery of economic conditions and statistics prove that they are well on the road towards this objective.

While Great Britain's attitude is keenly alive to the dangers of the international situation, fortunately her statesmen are not disposed to be stampeded into any precipitate measures and quite evidently the people of the country are well satisfied with Anthony Eden's recent assurance that in the council of the League of Nations the country is prepared to "play its part."

Expressing satisfaction with this viewpoint the London Times in a recent editorial said

"If the League even the incomplete League had disposed of the will, as it certainly disposed of the means to bring aggression to a standstill by economic non-co-operation, nothing would now be heard of the confusion time that the refusal of aid to the aggressor means war peace would have made narrowly trial of its resources and generally we should be looking on a very different picture from today.

Yet, even if the League had succeeded and it clearly could have succeeded in the policy of passive resistance it would still have been necessary to write another chapter in its development and to increase its powers by completing its membership and making its functions correspond with its capacity. The obstacle to be overcome is the spirit of mutual distrust between France and Germany.

"The outlook would be gloomy indeed if no effort were being or could be made to attack that mistrust at its roots and no responsibility could be more willingly and gladly borne by British statesmanship than that of seeking the means to end antagonisms which survives to the continuance danger."

The Times goes on to say that this endeavor was moved into the stage of serious practical discussions when the questions addressed to the German government on the subject of Herr Hitler's proposals for a lasting European settlement were published in the White Paper and suggests that conversations be pursued in a manner that will permit of fewer opportunities for any possible misunderstanding of tone and intention on either side.'

Bears Attack Aeroplane

Biggest Off Year While Machine Was Parked Overnight

Unreported for two months J. C. F. Daniel, mystery flying trapper of the north has flown to Fort Simpson, N.W.T., from his remote trapping with his aeroplane patched up where two grizzly bears ripped open the door and damaged fabric around it.

Daniel, who went out to Edmonton last year learned to fly and came back with an aeroplane and the bears went after the machine while it was parked overnight in snow The bears were after a bundle of beaver skins in the rear.

The flyer trapper brought a good catch of fur when he arrived at Fort Simpson and said his winter trapping operations were successful.

A Grim Story

One Person Killed Every Six Minutes In U.S. Last Year

Opening appropriately enough on Friday, there was a grim tale in last week's papers. It told that in the United States last year they killed one person every six minutes. The National Safety Council figured it out this way.

They killed 36,000 permanently injured 9 persons temporarily disabled, 271 killed every day 11 every hour one every six minutes 25,000 injured every day 1,000 every hour 16 every minute. 1,000 permanently injured every day, 41 every hour Total financial damage $3,000,000,000 in property loss wage loss medical expense

What puzzles us is how the life and accident insurance companies stand it. As far as we will it post hasn't compare with this day to day United States slaughter.

Nor should the rest of us feel complacent nor superior. We can rush about like mad, killing and maiming one another needlessly, adding life a sort of abandon

Russian Armaments

Soviet Government Plans To Expend Huge Sum This Year

When the Japanese war office starts to draw attention to the weight of Russian armaments, there is some reason to suggest that the pot is calling the kettle black. Japan devoted 47 per cent. of her whole budgetary expenditure last year to defence, and this year proposes to spend 50 per cent. Even so her military budgets, and those of all other countries, pale into insignificance in comparison with Russia's. Marshal Voikhenovsky, deputy-commissar of defence recently announced that in 1936 the Soviet would expend 14,000,000,000 roubles on her military forces. At the official rate of exchange this sum represents £2,000,000,000 sterling. Britain has for months been debating whether she should spend half the latter sum spread over a period of years, on modernizing her sea, land and air forces. From all this it is clear enough that whether the Japanese war office wishes to put the matter on gunpowder merely to raise a bogey it has substantial material to explode. Auckland News.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour into the bowels 40 pints of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food does not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons are absorbed into your blood. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get the bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Don't be satisfied with artificial aids that only move the bowels. Get Carter's Little Liver Pills and make sure of having the bile in your system to digest your food. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c.

A Serious Problem

Restoration Of Confidence In The Country's Wheat Is Urged

Canada s most serious problem in the opinion of Dr W W Swanson, head of the department of economics at the University of Saskatchewan, is a restoration of confidence in the country's wheat.

This is particularly so after the "alarmist" publicity given to the possibility of a temporary crop surplus, said Dr. Swanson. That surplus, he held, was only temporary although it may be around wholly unfounded fears of overproduction.

"There has never been any world overproduction of wheat nor any chance of such overproduction," he said in an interview in Montreal. "There was a temporary condition of surplus between the annual crop conditions in 1928, which was exaggerated by the crash of speculative values in 1929, but returning the country to sell its wheat freely at fair prices until this alarm died down."

Adopt New Method

Nicola Valley Leads The World In Fighting Sloppers

The Nicola valley in mid-southern British Columbia leads the world in fighting grasshoppers, the dreaded locust menace of ancient days.

According to word received by the provincial department of agriculture, the method used there, of poisoning the hoppers before the egg beds of the grasshoppers, has been approved by a world conference of entomologists at Cairo, Egypt, as being the most effective. Nicola is the only place where this has been done over a period of years.

Women Police Make Good

Number Attached To Scotland Yard Will Be Increased

The few women who have been attached to the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard have justified their appointment so well that their number is soon to be considerably increased

At present there are three women detectives in the west end divisions of the Metropolitan police force, and it is suggested there should be at least one woman detective in each division.

Originated With Latin Poet

The expression "Rome was not built in a day" is believed to have originated with the poet Claudian Claudianus, one of the last of the Latin poets (about 400 A.D.). Claudianus wrote "What Roman power slowly built, an unarmed traitor instantly overthrew." The proverb gradually became modified until it survives in its present form.

Pure reports that business there has been improving since early 1933.

Worth Fabulous Sum

Chicago Jeweller Not Disclosing Priced Paid For Gemmed Crown

In a gilded hotel suite in New York Warren Piper, a Chicago jeweller displayed a great glittering diadem which he described as the stoned and all-but-priceless crown of Our Lady of the Andes.

A group of visitors stood pop-eyed before the magnificence of the crown, which Piper, head of the American syndicate which just has come into possession of the object, had placed in a dull wooden case, flooded by indirect lights.

The gold of the diadem gleamed dully against the green radiance shooting from the stones, which Piper said were emeralds, encircling and hanging pendant from the crown.

Piper declined specifically to estimate its value saying the emeralds it contained were all but priceless, but he mentioned $4,500,000 as an approximate figure.

White-faced with apparent excitement, he said he could give no exact information as to just what will be done with the crown. He added however it might for a placed on exhibition and then broken up for sale to private individuals

Here is substantially the story of the diadem as related by Piper.

It was completed in 1599 and taken from the Incas by Pizzaro's Conquistadores in the conquest of Peru four centuries ago. Negotiations for sale of the diadem, described as the most valuable ever owned by the Catholic Church, were begun in 1914, proceeds to go to charity

Piper and his associates more than a year ago began active negotiations Meanwhile the crown had been under safe-keeping in New York

Piper would not disclose the price paid He said merely that money went to several South American countries as part ownership, as well as to the church

Has Peculiar Style

England's Walking Champion May Be Disqualified For Peculiarity

A man with an Olympic merry is V. W. G Stone, England's walking champion and for good reason.

Stone is a fine stroke on the cinders, so much faster than his British rivals that they scarcely can keep him in sight, yet the Olympic officials have notified him he won't be among those present at Berlin this summer unless he learns how walking style!

"And why not?" asks Stone, justifiably, having just won the British seven-mile championship. "Because," comes the rejoinder, "we're not so sure that you're really walking Maybe you're running."

And that's how matters stand A potential Olympic champion ci they claim but time to run under Olympic record; might have to stay at home because his country's officials don't wish to take any chances.

Moving pictures, it is pointed out by Stone's supporters, is nothing to amiss with his walking. He retains, it seems, unbroken contact with the ground, which is the vital difference between walking and running. Yet he has such a peculiar, mortbodoe type, and is so much speedier than any rival Britannia, that officials simply won't believe it.

Not Room For Candles

John Birch of North Bay, Ontario, celebrated a birthday June 8, but he didn't have room for candles enough to mark the occasion. Claimed to be the oldest white man in Canada, Mr. Birch entered his 104th year of life.

The brain is not mentioned in the Bible. Only in modern times has this organ's function been known. Aristotle, learned Greek, believed its purpose was to cool the blood.

Depends On The Country

Whether Gold Shipments Have To Be Heavily Guarded

A traveler recently returned from foreign parts tells me a story about gold. It seems that the only one which this traveler returned landed a large consignment of gold at Havre The gold was loaded much like any other cargo, only it was lowered into a special hold. And what struck my informant about the operation was the fact that while the loading was in progress not a single uniformed minion of the French law was in sight on the dock or on the ship.

There were numerous representatives of the banks making the shipment and numerous French longshoremen in blue blouses gesticulating and calling to each other in the high-pitched nasal tones which foreigners who try to learn French are never able to reproduce. The banks' agents simply checked the gold aboard and the ship's officers checked with them Then the hatches were closed, and that was that.

But when the ship got to New York passengers on the gangplank to see what looked like a whole platoon of police rush on the gangplank the moment the ship docked.

The voyager from whom I had the story says he thought perhaps the ship was bringing back some dangerous criminal fugitive, but when he inquired he found that the police had come aboard only to stand guard while the gold was being unloaded.—Baltimore Sun.

Letter Will Be Treasured

Has Been Twice Around World And Was Sunk In Air Liner

Rare letter was found among the letters recovered from the ruins of the plane that crashed into the sea off Alexandria, killing 13 people. It had been twice around the world. The letter, was sent to Mr. E. W. C. Hughes, of Bowaters (of Australia), Ltd. It was located in London to reach Mr. Hughes when he arrived in Montreal. He had already left Montreal when it arrived. The letter was then forwarded to him in New York. It missed him there too. From New York it was sent to a strong address to Sydney, and redirected to the sender in London. It set out again on its travels in the city of Khartoum and went to the bottom of the sea with the rest of the mail. And now at last the letter has reached Mr. Hughes, who can be well treasure it as a memento of a very tragic occurrence." CENERAL ELECTION FOR QUEBEC IS SET FOR AUGUST 15

Quebec —The political gun has set on Louis Alexandre Taschereau.

The suave, silver-haired French-Canadian lawyer who spent half his 70 years in public life, resigned from the premiership of Quebec—just a month after the Liberal party celebrated its 39th successive year in power.

On his recommendation, Hon. Adelard Godbout, former minister of agriculture, was sworn in as premier, shortly after the legislature was dissolved and the premier had announced a general election would be held Aug. 15.

It was a day of fast-moving events in the old capital But the premier's resignation did not come as a surprise. For days it had been considered imminent. Numerous rumors failed only to specify the definite time. They said that Taschereau would end his political life and there would be a reshuffling of the cabinet.

Mr. Taschereau, meanwhile, issued a long statement explaining his reasons for resigning.

"I leave political life," he said, "without bitterness and without anger against anyone, wishing all to do remember only the pleasures it has brought me, the friends I have made and the little good I have been able to accomplish.

Mr Taschereau said he had planned to retire before the last general, election, but he wanted to see "one more doing his duty if he abandoned his party "at a time when it was the object of the most violent attacks from our opponents."

Mr. Godbout was sworn in as premier by Dr. Alfred Morrisette, clerk of the executive council, in the presence of the lieutenant-governor and the former premier.

Opposition Leader Maurice Duplessis, whose Conservative forces, allied with the ranks of Action Libérale Nationale, gave the stagger-ing blow to the Liberal regime in last November's general election, said he found the government's manner of proceeding rather curious."

Not only had the legislature been dissolved, but all writs for the Taschereau regime. He voiced the intention of carrying on his work at the public accounts committee.

"We were just commencing the inquiry," he said, "and had only started to bring to light the scandals we have promised to prove Now the government asks that the house be dissolved." The work would be continued by the next government, however, "and I can assure you," said Mr. Duplessis, "Restitution will be forced from those who have misused public funds and those guilty of criminal offences will be sent to jail."

Just A Formal Motion

Finance Minister Asking Authority To Borrow Money For Expenditures

Ottawa —Authority for the necessary refunding and borrowing the government may normally expect in the next two or three weeks will be sought from parliament in a resolution appearing on votes and proceedings in the name of Finance Minister Dunning

The motion is for authority to borrow up to a maximum of $100,000,000 to be used for redemption of outstanding loans, purchasing or withdrawing for cancellation of unmatured securities and for public works and general purposes. It is a formal motion adopted by parliament at necessary intervals so that ample authority may be ready at any time the need arises to negotiate loans.

CAHAN CLASHES WITH McGEER ON MONETARY POLICY

Ottawa.—Two men as far apart as the poles in their monetary beliefs, Charles Hazlett Cahan, secretary of state in the Bennett administration, and Gerald Grattan McGeer, financial reformer from Vancouver, crossed swords in the House of Commons.

The buttons were off the foils from the start with the Montrealer accusing the British Columbia Liberal of advancing half-baked financial ideas which eventually would lead to wildcat inflation and ruin for the country.

The man from the far west, just as Celtic as his name indicates, came back in kind, accusing Mr. Cahan of avoiding facts, entertaining false ideas and outstanding economics by a system that has brought Canada to the brink of disaster.

The former cabinet minister rounded angrily call for men to stand together against inflation which he believed was moving fast into the centre of the political stage in Canada.

"Men on either side of the house," declared Mr. Cahan, "who take a conservative view, not in a political sense but a conservative and perhaps traditional view, must be prepared to advocate what they believe to be sound and sane national policies with regard to monetary matters, whether it suits whatever their own political party or the political party on the other side."

Fly reminded in post-War Germany and other instances in history, Mr. Cahan pointed to the perils of inflation which he believed left misery, disaster and ruin in its wake In his judgment, inflation or no inflation rapidly was becoming a major political issue. It would be promised to do everything possible to stop the printing presses.

Interjecting, Mr. McGeer at him, accusing him of casting sneers and jeers at him because he could not meet it argument in favor of a managed currency and a central bank that would issue currency and credit in terms of public needs, not for private gain.

Inflation was not his remedy, said Mr. McGeer. "What I do say is that within the limits of our gold reserves, our gold production, our legal tender currency and our practice of creating an effective bank credit transferable by cheque there is more money available than is necessary to finance the government without a disastrous imposition of taxation."

Code For Girl Workers

National Council Of Women Urges 60-Hour Week

Halifax The National Council of Women, in annual convention here, adopted in principle a code for household workers and employers which, among other things, would call for a work week of not more than 60 hours, overtime pay and a minimum wage schedule.

Miss A. M. Ward, of the Halifax Young Women's Christian Association, presented the code and after considerable discussion the convention decided to send it to local councils throughout Canada.

The code presented by Miss Ward was:

1.—Working hours per week should not exceed 60, including meal hours. This would involve (approximately) (a) an 11-hour day; (b) two weekly half-days off, one preferably Sunday.

2.—Minimum wage in cities over 100,000 inexperienced household help, $17 per month; experienced, $22. Minimum wage in cities under 100,000 inexperienced, $15; experienced, $20.

3.—Overtime work should be paid for either in money or extra time off.

4.—Hours off, rates of pay and general outline of duties should be set at time of employment.

5.—Separate room for sleeping should be provided, and some facilities for entertaining.

The concession also for the King's birthday, June 23, the Dominion Day fares include one-way coach class fare and one-half for the round trip good in coaches and in tourist sleeping cars on payment for that accommodation. The one way first class fare and one-third for the trip good in sleeping and parlor cars on payment for this first class accommodation.

From the number of enquiries already received at headquarters of both railways, both King's birthday and Dominion Day holiday rates indicate a large passenger hat

British Wheat Reserve

United Kingdom Has Three Months Supply In Case Of War

London The United Kingdom's present wheat supply would feed the country for about three months in the event of war cutting off further shipments Sir Thomas Inskip informed the House of Commons

The question was raised by W S Liddall, Conservative, who asked the defence co-ordination minister what measures were being taken to assure a reserve supply of grain in case of war.

"The question of a sufficient wheat reserve will be considered by the committee which is now engaged in examining the whole subject of food supplies in war time," Sir Thomas replied.

Counterfeiter At Work

Bank Of Canada Notes Are Raised By Skilful Art Work

Ottawa The Bank of Canada disclosed search was being made for a man who had raised three or four of the bank's bills by skilful art work, faking a $2 bill into a $20 on one occasion.

Governor Graham Towers said he believed there were not more than four of the bills in circulation and that they had been traced in Ontario and Manitoba.

One of the notes, recovered by police, was of $2 denomination in the French issue. The numerals 82 were changed to $20 and the word, "Deux Dollars" were darkened so as to be almost imperceptible in the latheing.

The same words on the lower border of the front of the note were left out and "twenty dollars" substituted.

Scotland Yard Expert

Sir Patrick Quinn Of Investigation Department Is Dead

New York.—A London despatch to the New York Times says Sir Patrick Quinn, 60, former superintendent of the special branch of the criminal investigation department Scotland Yard, is dead.

Because of this knowledge, he was invariably entrusted with the protection of Queen Victoria, Edward VII, and George V, during their sojourns abroad and also was made responsible for the safety of all foreign rulers visiting England. Sir Patrick shunned publicity When a few weeks after the outbreak of the war it became known that he had been able to round up nearly all the principal German spies in the United Kingdom. It was suggested that his success should be published, but he objected

"For heaven's sake," he said, "don't everybody think us stupid and inefficient! It is our greatest asset."

SENATE REJECTS AMENDMENTS TO THE B. N. A. ACT

Ottawa — Senate division bells rang the death knell of immediate constitutional reform when the government Conservative majority in the red chamber united in a straight party vote to defeat 40-15, the joint petition to Westminster asking for specific amendments to the British North America Act.

Hon. Arthur Meighen Conservative leader refused to accept a proposed amendment from the government side which sought to meet his objections to the proposal to obtain a constitutional power for the provinces to impose indirect taxation, "as against the provinces and against the address," he declared

The Conservative leader declared the time had arrived when the government should come to grips with the problem of provincial expenditures for social services, which were not affected and relief of unemployed who refused to work.

The joint address, which was adopted in the House of Commons without division, was a petition to the British parliament to amend the British North America Act in two respects. One clause sought power for the provinces to impose sales taxes on certain classes of commodities, the other to provide necessary power for the minister of finance to set up provincial loan councils

Under the constitution provinces may impose only direct taxes and the indirect taxation field is restricted to the Dominion. Certain forms of indirect taxation, such as those on business and entertainment are already being imposed but subject to challenge on constitutional grounds.

There was little debate on the joint request phase of the address but Hon Raoul Dandurand, government leader declared from the first that no motion could be accepted which would have anything to do with the address Defeat of the amendment by a recorded vote was followed by rejection of the address on the same division

To Assist Unemployed

National Council Of Women Urge That More Attention Be Given To Question

Maximum working hours in industry and commerce should be so distributed as to allow at least one and a half days weekly rest, and that these intervals should be continuous wherever possible — the so-called English weekend — the National Council of Women urged.

The 43rd annual convention also felt that in view of the widespread unemployment among "intellectual workers," national health and unemployment insurance schemes should be widened in their scope

The two points were contained in a resolution advocated by the international council of women, passed by the convention at Halifax.

Increasing difficulty was experienced by women over the age of 30 years in retaining or obtaining employment, another point of the same resolution said. It urged the establishment of loan funds and training schemes to enable such women to qualify themselves for entry into new occupations.

Immediate measures for the aid of the unemployed youth, just out of high school, and the older unemployed women were advocated by the convener of the standing committee on trades and professions, in her report, Miss E. F. Baker, of Winnipeg, suggested courses in which would be taught the rudiments of citizenship, history of civilization, hygiene, personal and moral out-look, and national and international events, so helpful in that direction.

As convener of the committee on natural resources and industry, Mrs. George Bell, of Regina, reported a moderate but steady improvement in Canadian industry.

She drew her conclusion from the reports presented her by councils in 19 cities and towns from Halifax to Vancouver.

Pioneer Bird Bander Active

Jack Miner Hands Over Twelve Hundred Canada Geese This Spring

It is a well-known fact that Jack Miner is a pioneer in tagging birds on this continent. He tagged his first duck in August, 1909, at Kingsville, Ontario. That duck was reported killed in January, 1910, in South Carolina.

He had to invent nets and contrivances to catch the various species he has tagged. That, in itself, was a task that demanded no little time and patience and resulted in small expense.

To date he has tagged over fifteen thousand Canada geese. This past spring he made seven or eight catches, which totalled over twelve hundred in number.

These tags furnish invaluable information to the scientists, naturalists and game protective departments concerned in the study of the life, habits and migration routes of wild birds. The authentic data so secured is used not only in the universities of the continent, but also by federal, state and provincial governments in both Canada and the United States. Such records demonstrate clearly where the largest percentages of migratory wildfowl are killed.

Each tag put on bears Jack Miner's name, post office address and the date, while in one corner is also stamped the selected verse of Scripture this being Jack Miner's unique way of passing along God's word to such people who shoot this coveted game bird.

Each of the twelve hundred tags put on this spring carried such a Scripture message, as that Jack Miner calls them his "winged missionaries."

Wheat Control Abandoned

Spain Is First To Part With Europe's Policy On Protecting Wheat Growers

The first important breach in Europe's policy of protecting domestic wheat producers by elaborate governmental methods can be attributed to Spain. The government of that country has given up policies providing for fixed prices, controlled imports and segregation of surplus stocks.

For twenty years the Spanish government has exercised control over the wheat industry in Spain and of late years these measures have had infinite variety. The objective has been to increase returns to producers while maintaining low prices of bread. The only regulation now in force compels mills to keep on hand one month's supply of flour. The government now has on hand about 12,000,000 bushels out of a possible of about 22,000,000 bushels which was purchased to prevent disruption of the market last year. The government claims that the farmers have extended wheat seeding to unprofitable land, thus bringing about the possibility of a continuous surplus. Wheat is a basic factor in the life of Spain, representing about 25 per cent. of the total value of all agricultural production.—The Budget

Sailing To Southern Seas

Romantic Story Behind Proposed Trip Of Young Adventurers

"Voyage to South Seas in sail schooner leaving August for about a year. Six young men wanted to crew, each contribute $500 toward expenses."

Behind this advertisement in a London newspaper is a story that would have inspired the romantic imagination of Joseph Conrad.

It began 15 years ago when two children met at school. The other day they were married. Now they plan to sail away with six other adventurers and two friends for $6,000 mitad. Like all true adventurers they are going into the unknown, but with the knowledge that they cannot go so far without finding more interesting life than by staying in one town.

The bridegroom when interviewed, said: "I am negotiating for the purchase of a 150-ton schooner. This will be paid for out of my own pocket. I shall be master. Lars Peersch, a Pan, with whom I have served in sail, will come as first mate.

"My wife's brother, George, will be a member of the crew. My wife will supervise the cooking and stores and generally do the purser/steward's work, as well as help to turn at the wheel and other ship's duties. She is filled with quiet enthusiasm. She has complete faith in the future.

"We now require six young men between the ages of 18 and 30," the bridegroom added. "They must be in good minors and prepared to pay $500 each towards the cost in return for food, accommodation and the experience."

Old Roman Coins Found

Workmen In Dorchester, England, Come Across Twenty Thousand

Special police watch was placed on the Dorset Museum, where 20,000 Roman coins discovered by excavating workmen in Dorchester, England, were stored.

Dug out by men working on the foundations of a chain store, the hoard is now found to have been one of the biggest ever discovered in Great Britain.

Police took the coins from the spot where they were found, and experts have been sent to the British Museum for experts to decide if they are Treasure Trove. If they are, the customary inquest will have to be held on them.

So great was the crowd round the scene of the discovery that extra hoardings were erected.

Behind these the workmen were excavating carefully, and bit by bit the plan of a villa once inhabited by a wealthy resident of Roman Dorchester came to light.

The coins were in a beautiful bronze ewer nearly 18 in. high, and a bowl more than a foot across. Part of a wooden box contained further stores of wealth.

New Method Discovered

Maxims When Tossed Are Rested Quickly For Short Spurts

Discovery of a method of "pump up" tired muscles, which for short sports rests them more quickly than ordinary relaxation, has been announced in Rochester, N.Y.

When tired muscles are deliberately tensed the action appears to inject or squeeze into them a revitalizing chemical naturally produced in the body. There are three of these chemicals, it is said, one revived responsible is adrenalin, the adrenal gland product which man manufactures liberally when he

The time for spread of the revitalizing chemical is only a few seconds by the "pumping up" method The discovery reveals a hitherto undreamed of unrecognized quick

The easiest shore frog muscles "loaded," by active alternate pull and release, which tenses them. Complete relaxation overcomes the fatigue in about ten seconds. But tensing a muscle rapidly restores its energy in about half a second.

A Cornell gymnast reported similar results in her chinning work After 20 successive chinnings a short relaxation with arms outstretched left him with scarcely strength to resume chinning. But tensing for an equal period restored his muscle so that he went on easily and repeated the chinnings more than 20 times.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ravin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays. It does not digest. It ferments. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisons are not absorbed into the body and you feel sour, sunk, sick and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement does not relieve you at all. You need something that starts the liver flowing. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best liver tonic you can buy. It is a vegetable laxative and gentle. Sluggish bile flows freely. They do the work. Harmless as mother's milk. Even children love Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Liver Pills to make them "step on it." Naval Officer Believes Ship Would Accommodate 10,000 Passengers

Vladimir Yourkevitch, erstwhile Czarist naval officer and designer of the hull of the Normandie, arrived at New York by the French liner Paris. M. Yourkevitch carried plans for a possible new trans-Atlantic liner of 100,000 tons or gross, 25 per cent. greater than the Queen Mary.

Looking across to the adjoining pier, where the Queen Mary lay, M. Yourkevitch pictured his new liner as capable of developing 300,000 horsepower, racing 36 knots, and accommodating 10,000 passengers.

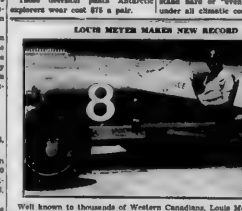
LOUIS MEYER MAKES NEW RECORD



Well known to thousands of Western Canadians, Louis Meyer again won the grueling 500-mile annual race at the Indianapolis Speedway and established a new record of 100.06 miles per hour. That is the only man to have won the race three times. Many readers will remember his having raced in a rubber-tired tractor at the Peh Fairs throughout Western Canada several years ago. In his opinion the new speed records and absence of fatalities in the daring race are largely due to high speed tire development. With the question of tire safety no longer a factor, Meyer says drivers' confidence and freedom from worry have greatly improved their driving ability and opportunities. Firestone Tires were used.

JESUS MEETING THE WORLD'S NEEDS

Golden text: Jesus of Nazareth . . . went about doing good. Acts 10:38. Devotional reading: Acts 1:11.

Jesus Gave a Worthy Ideal. Jesus Made the World's Needs His Own. In our special review topic, WHAT are the world's needs? Of course the answer is that the world's needs are many, so many that no one can possibly give them all. But they can be classified in such a way as to make our question not at all altogether impossible one to answer.

Jesus Gave a Worthy Ideal. This, certainly, is one of the world's greatest needs and Jesus meets, an ideal of life and character and spirit which wins the approval of many one even at his best. Others, of course, have attempted to do this, and some have done it with considerable good helpfulness. Even in non-Christian days there were setting up lofty standards and pointing to ideals of life and conduct that were truly noble and good. We are much in the Plates and the Aristotles and the Boots of the past. Ancient and in modern times who have held up pictures of noble living and tried to win men to emulate them. But Saws have been found in the standards that others have set up, while nothing mars the picture which Jesus drew of what we should be and do. The Sermon on the Mount convicts us and shows us the kind of lives we should try to live.

He Realized His Ideal. He not only painted a picture of what we should be and how we should live and think, but he incarnated that picture in his own life. It is the story of what Jesus was, even more than his picture of what we should be, that wins us. And it is the fact that he was the embodiment of what he taught that fills us with hope; the fact that he, in his human experience, realized the perfect will of God tells us that we can approach unto his perfect life and service. It is a most inspiring thought that Jesus lived the kind of life he did, triumphing in temptation and mastering the hard and trying and tragic tasks given him to do.

He Meets Our Need of a Saviour. Whatever may be our theory of the meaning and purpose of the life and death of Jesus, we all unite in one thought that he is the Saviour of the world

"I know a soul that is steeped in sin,
That no man's art can cure;
But I know a Name, a precious Name,
That can make that soul all pure.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY —

LAWRENCE A. KEATING

CHAPTER XVIII.

Her face became white and Helen uttered a gasp. Instinctively she took a step back as if dumbfounded while Link, feeling his discomfort heighten, avoided her glance. He was scarcely noticed Matt Benson, the renter of a small parcel of ranch land from Kilgo, Miller, an exclamation behind him. Benson stared an instant, then turned and scurried off to reveal the precious morsel of news he had just chanced to overhear.

At that moment Ed Porth, Fleming's rider, approached from behind and touched his boss's arm. He turned slowly to find the man tense with suppressed excitement.

"Link," he exclaimed, "I saw that hombre in the checkered shirt. He just went through the back door of the bank!"

"The bank!" A frown slowly rippled his forhead. The girl gave a nod. Waco and the other stopped at that moment, and were quickly apprised of this discovery.

"What yuh goin' to do?" Byrne's unsawy eyes noted Roper at the head of loungers and cardplayers emerging from the Hall.

"We're going in the bank, of course! Funny it didn't occur to me to look there. Helen, did you hear that? You'd better move over near the hotel," he went on in a low tone "There's no telling what might happen now."

He turned back to the men. "How long ago, Ed?"

"Just a couple of minutes. That buck door ain't usually open, is it?"

"No. You stay back and watch; he might come out and lose himself again. Waco, you'd better go along. Drew can stay in the body. You stay out front just in case. If you see the others, call 'em over. But keep like as not you can, there's no need to upset the whole town."

"We're too late to keep it quiet," was the reply from Byrne. Pulling a big his eyes, Fleming ray Kilgo and Bass coming slowly toward them, although still a hundred yards away. There was a grim look on the Bon 80 owner's reddish countenance, but though his gaze encountered Link's he made no effort to call to him

"Scatter!" At once the men turned and hurried along the side of the

Roper left off, swallowing hard, his eyes fixed on the slugun Fleming drew slowly and held in his hand His ominous muzzle was pointed at Otto's heart. "Reckon you better turn back over," he stated in a flat, determined tone. "That gent is in your bank and we want him"

"Bank robbery!" His mouth wide open, raised trembling hands to ear height. A rasp of boothools made both Matt Long men turn to glance at the front door. Link's eyes clashed with those of Roper Kilgo, panting on the threshold. Two curious faces peered over his shoulder, Benson and Bass

"Bank robbery!" Kilgo pulled pulling back. "Fleming's holdin' up the bank!"

The full significance of this alarm

Stockmen's Bank to guard its rear. Link and Mike Drew waited another moment, then walked slowly inside the institution.

It was gloomy as we this, and with the melancholy quiet of a deserted hall. But when their eyes became accustomed to the dusty shafts of light from the side windows Fleming and his side made out Jimmy Farline, Fred Otto Pieper himself, seated at his accustomed desk immersed in work.

"Hold on, Jackpot - yuh can't pull a shootin' here!"

"Anyhow, we don't want him shot!" brawled someone deep in the milling throng. "Let's lynch the damned hunk - that's more like it. I could to but this country an' victimize us ranchers, ain't he?"

Link strode to get free. But his gun was gone, and ready hands gripped his arms, holding them behind him. Struggle as he might he was a prisoner. white-faced and tense, facing the crowd of hostile townsfolk and ranchers whose vengeance was swiftly forthcoming by the cupidity of Kilgo and Mell.

"Wait!" he yelled. "I tell you I saw Ed Porth saw the guy come in here—"

"Outside!" cried someone "Let's have a hombre party!"

The proposal struck a responsive chord. "That's it let's hang him!"

"He can't rob our bank an' get away with it!"

"That buddups all talk It a lie Link meant to stick up Otto and then make a getaway "

"Yeah and leave the girl flat Why, the Hamilton spread is practically hustled right now!"

Amazement flooded over the Star Loop owners face sheer disbelief that such viciousness could be touched to life in the hearts and brains of those folk Always friendly to him, they had suddenly sparked to hate and why? How was it possible "

He knew of course it was plain The unusual drouth, two years of months by Roper and Mell The hitherto undisputed leadership of Kilgo was now reaping its harvest To have followed irrigation when he did not believe in it was a serious enough crime; but actually to have seen Roper's intended bride away from him—that was forever unforgivable.

Don't GAMBLE with MUSTARD!

The cost of the mustard in any recipe is so small, why take chances by using anything but the best? When you see KEEN'S D.S.F. MUSTARD you KNOW you are getting ALL pure mustard — full of flavour and zest.

Made from seed grown in the Fens of England. Shells or hulls are removed and only the inner part of the seed is used. Specially fine grinding brings out the full mustard flavour.

Jostling, bawling, milling, crying out epithets and insults, the throng crushed and elbowed its way out of the bank. Otto Pieper stood watch as a man struck Fleming. Then he followed, automatically, blinking, clearing his throat, tugging helplessly at his watch chain as he saw the surging mob burst through his front door and into the street. Otto could not absorb all this. He was dumbfounded

"Where'll we hang him, boys?"

"How about from Spring?"

"Naw." snarled a red-bearded ruffian. "that's too far Why not use that post in front o' the jail?"

This seized the fancy of the mob Cries of approval greeted the suggestion, and everyone moved down the street. In the crush of sweaty, profane and vengeful humanity Fleming was mauled and shoved cursed and struck about with the [illegible] His protests were futile and unheard for the threats and jeers on all sides. There was no reason here, but only that vented by the desire of the locals to protect themselves against something they did not understand but had been educated to fear.

That something was progress. The progress of a country, of his stealthy work, his astuteness and cleverness dating from the day he left the ranges to meander up Fall, Roper Kilgo had laid this ground work. Now he was to reap his harvesting Rawhide citizens to wreak vengeance

The czar of Boone County was to have his unquestioned sway enlarged!

Link realized the error of drawing his gun there in the bank. He had done it in the heat of the most precious minutes wasted. But discovery of the tableau had given Kilgo and Mell time to get out and round up their riders he thought, were preparing to ride

Link's heart sank The din about his ears rose to a crescendo of hate as he [illegible] the bull county bawled someone

"So yuh finally turned bank rob er, eh?" — another man flung in his teeth — "Well I'll learn you!"

Fleming tried to answer, but at that instant his captors gave a terrific heave. All but Ed Porth and he dragged to the tall cedar pole that stood before the adobe jail Some one was climbing it to string a rope through the iron ring at the top It was meant for a flagpole to be used on Fourth of July, but it served as a means of a lynching the anger of a mob gone mad with namesake hysteria

Interlude With Death

British Medical Men Are Interested In Strange Case

British medical circles recently heard the astounding story of Mary Devenport's seven minute interlude of "death." In a dental chair, how she lost 21 teeth and how she went back to work in a steel factory

The case poses a question for those who believe the soul leaves the body on the instant of death," remarked Dr Alfred A. Mosser of Sheffield He described the case for the British Medical Journal

"She remembers nothing about her strange experience," the doctor asserted "There were no dreams under the chloroform. Her brain registered no reaction to what death is like, because the brain cells still were under the effect of the anaesthetic during the seven minutes of lifelessness"

Dr Mosser reported the 20-year-old girl's heart stopped beating shortly after chloroform had been administered preliminary to having her teeth extracted by a dentist.

"The patient went suddenly white, breathing stopped and the pupils dilated widely. The pulse and heart sounds could not be detected.

"The head was immediately lowered, artificial respiration started, and strychnine was given hypodermically.

"While this was being carried on, I massaged her through the diaphragm from beneath the costal margin No response of any sort occurred, so I decided to try an intra-cardiac injection of 'coral' phrgin, a long needle into the left ventricle about the level of the fourth space and slowly injected the 'coral'

Immediately after this, the massage through the diaphragm was continued and in about one minute I could see a faint flicker of pulsation in the external jugular vein of the neck

After another 10 minutes of artificial respiration the breathing recommenced And the pulse at the wrist gradually returned.

Her condition gradually improved so much that I decided to continue the anaesthetic with open ether, and the dentist proceeded to remove about 24 teeth

The report added the girl made an uneventful recovery .Her sweet back to work two days later

TWO GOOD CITIZENS—

At various times it falls to the lot of the Standard to pay tribute to some person who has been during his or her years a source to a credit to the public spirited citizen in every sense of the word. Such tribute is made in order that it be learned. Principal K. G. Hughes, a public school staff and Capt. F. B. Baker of the high school staff are two of the latest acquirements to our community, but both have done much in the few years they have been here. Two men more capable to give either of these two men for the work they have carried on or the work of the community and their leaving will depart a void that will be very difficult indeed to fill. Both have been untiring and enthusiastic workers in almost every movement and each a former and present member of the Rotary club, Mr. Hughes being at the present time president and last winter he was instrumental in organizing a Rotary club for a juvenile league which will continue this winter consisting of some 4 or 5 teams in the west side. Capt. Baker always took an active part in all social activities to raise funds for athletic equipment. He is an energetic member of the V.A.A. and usually the leader work on that body than anyone else will be greatly missed. Mr. Johnson has been also a keen worker of the association and is a valuable member of the executive of the Municipal Power Association.

The above activities in connection with Mr. Hughes's stay here compare to many unofficial others he has done or was always ready to do his share.

The same can be said of Mr. John Cox. Although here on only a short space of two years at time of leaving he is president of the V.A.A., secretary of the musical festival association and a valued member of the United church choir. He is a prove leader in school activities and a great worker in all lines of public endeavor. He has been interested in both Civic and school boards business and even a good pessimist pessimism on the executive of both bodies. Mr. Johnson is an energetic supporter worker whose Christmas is fortunate in no

AUBURNDALE

Mrs. are sorry to hear Mrs. Wm. Neal in Wainwright hospital suffering from a heart attack. Mrs. Neal had not out with Mrs. John Harrison and Mrs. J. Church on a motor trip to Blackie, Southern Alberta when she was taken ill. Mr. Wallace was called and he, with Mr. McLeod, met the party on the road with the ambulance and took Mrs. Neal to hospital. We sincerely hope she will soon be well again.

Mr. Anderson, our minister, got the young people's league started last week with good results, and a good attendance of adults as well as children. The first meeting of the season started with an enjoyable social night, refreshments being served.

Mr. Anderson has now obtained a nice little road boy which he uses in the performance of his various duties both in the different church districts.

HON. W. A. FALLOW VISITS DISTRICT

Last week, after addressing a large gathering in the Britannia hall, the Hon W. A. Fallow minister of public works, in company with Engineer Ritchie, drove by car and inspected some of the possible routes for the new Vermilion-Wainwright highway.

We saw an airplane passing over last week in the direction of Edmonton. This is the first one we've seen here in a year.

BUILDING LARGE MODERN HOUSE

Mr. J. J. Ephon is now busy building his new house. The size of the house will be 30 ft. by 30 ft., and will contain eight rooms, a spacious cement basement, and every possible modern convenience.

Mrs. Mickinnon has gone to Kinsco. Peace River district, to pay a visit to her daughter Chester and son in law, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLaughlin, who are living in that town.

Miss Agnes Cleland with three of her friends, Hedley, Grace and May Hallet motored from Lloydminster last week to spend the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Cleland.

Mrs. W. Cleland and Miss Betty Knox left on a visit last week-end to Vermilion as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible]

The cutworms played havoc with the gardens in this district as well as elsewhere; a lot of the gardens had to be replanted but the recent rains will soon bring the seeds along.

Mr. Geoff Brimacombe took the place of Mr. Paul Brimacombe, the regular teacher, at the Autumn Leaf school on Thursday, while the latter was writing examinations.

Mr Magnus purchased a fine sermon to the Autumn Leaf school house on Tuesday evening, June 16th. Twenty-seven were present. In spite of the fact that the very dry year

BRIDE-ELECT HONORED

A miscellaneous shower under the auspices of the Young People's Club was held in the Autumn Leaf hall Tuesday evening the 19th for Miss Hilda Keys ...ady whose marriage is to take place at some time before the end of the month. There was a big crowd present and everybody enjoyed the singsong, dancing and refreshments, and Hilda received many useful and beautiful gifts, for the furnishing of her new home.

Mrs. Agnes Cleland has returned home from Lloydminster where she has resided for the past three months. She will remain at home for the rest of the summer.

M.L.A. SPEAKS AT SCHOOL

Mr. W. Mannon M.L.A. for Battle River delivered a meeting at Social Creditors in the Autumn Leaf school house on Monday evening June 15th. The school house was crowded with interested Social Credit-ers. Mr. Mannon spoke at length on the sound Social Credit legislation brought down at the last session of the legislature, laying particular stress on the Bank Inspection which gives the provincial government authority to adopt Social Credit principals as soon as it considers fitted in a position to do so. A number of questions were asked and satisfactorily answered by Mr. Mannon. Lois lunch was served by the ladies of the group, and although schoolhouse was as crowded that the people scarcely had elbow room, everybody seemed to enjoy themselves immensely and there was much talk and good-natured arguing about the why and wherefore of Social Credit. Premier Aberhart etc. Mr. J. Little the secretary of the Autumn Leaf S. C. group notified the members that the next meeting is on July 15th in the Autumn Leaf schoolhouse, when the matter of organizing the district for the dividends will be taken up, and everybody is invited to attend. Mr. W. B. Elford who is a general merchant in the town of Iron Alberta, and who accompanied Mr Mannon, also gave an interesting discourse on Social Credit and spoke greatly in favor of the Prosperity certificates which it is expected will shortly be put into circulation. Mr. Elford stated that he would gladly handle any number of these certificates in his store

CAPT. FRED BAKER
GUEST SPEAKER AT THE BOARD OF TRADE
Is Social Service Worker

Captain Fred Baker, of the Social Service council of the Church of England, Edmonton diocese, was the guest speaker at the Board of Trade luncheon held on Monday. The attendance at the luncheon was larger than usual. Gerald Stephens acted as chairman.

Captain Baker was introduced by Canon Leversedge and in his open ing remarks gave a brief outline of his work. He then divided it into 3 classes and gave specific instances of his experiences in dealing with police court cases, juvenile court cases and others of relief investigation. Captain Baker's work is necessarily confined to Edmonton in spite of being in contact with the sunny side of life. Captain Baker's occasional droll humor gave the impression that his was a deep human feeling associated to a man engaged in his work.

HEAVY RAINS SWEEP DISTRICT SUNDAY EVENING

Heavy rains swept the district last Sunday evening starting at various times from 5 p.m. on. A good many ponchers at the north lakes were washed and some didn't return until Monday afternoon. The rains were exceptionally heavy from the C.P.R. line north.

"Electric light and power accounts are all due and payable 10 days from mailing, do not yourself a favor, get a jack pot by letting your account get into arrears. You are the only one that can prevent this vegetables can easily be obtained by early seeding and with flour, milk, eggs, butter beef, pork, wild fruits and a vegetable garden any housewife ought to be able to make good balanced meals. If one is there, as Chatterton Chester says, she needs a few lessons in cooking, the classification of foods and the balancing of meals. The low prices of farm produce make it impossible for farmers everywhere to pay their debts, but they can certainly always get plenty of good wholesome food. We have been in this district for 25 years, at Vermilion, for 17 years, and only once, in 1929, did we have a crop failure. That year we had practically no grain, and got no potatoes or other vegetables, but even then we reaped off breaking oats that yielded 21 bushels to the acre and weighed 41 lbs. to the bushel. In [illegible] failure in altogether 1929 was the very dry year.

FAMILY REUNION

A very unusual reunion took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C.T. Buford of Dunvalanite when the Mrs. Laughlin family once again was united.

L.O. Laughlin arrived from Cranbrook B.C. to join his brother R.J. Laughlin and family from Oklahoma, and sisters Mrs. J. W. Gould and Mrs. C. T. Buford and mother Mrs. Mary A. Laughlin. The first reunion for 27 years. Photographs were taken and friendly reminiscences at the past were exchanged. Some 24 sat down at the evening meal.

Mr. R.J. Laughlin is soon to leave for the old home in the sunny south and taken with him many pleasant memories of Canada.

Mr. R.J. Laughlin and brother L.O. Laughlin were guests of their sister Mrs. J.W. Gould, Isley, Sunday even ing and Monday. They enjoyed the rain.

The visitors trip home will be by way of Banff, Vancouver, Victoria, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, up through the Pan Handle coming home from the south. They expect to be 11 days en route. They are all much impressed with the long days of sunshine and think that they ought to rise and go to bed with the sun. They report fine paved roads in the States and great accomodation at the auto camps along the way. Wishing for a safe journey home accompany them and may they come again to visit in sunny Alberta.

START NEW SEARCH FOR WAINWRIGHT OIL

First deep-drilling in the Wainwright oil field's Lloydminster will start within the next couple of weeks, it was indicated Tuesday by F.B. Taylor of Vancouver, who as an individual has acquired rights to acreage in the Wainwright area.

"We'll go down to 6,000 feet or maybe more if necessary," he said. "We expect, however, to find oil at 4,000 feet."

Apart from one well sunk by Montreal-Alberta interests to 2,500 feet northeast in the Wainwright field has previously gone much below 2,500 feet, he noted.

"I believe that the holes we are going to sink will prove or disprove the Wainwright field for the future," Mr Taylor said.

Hawthorn Trees

Hawthorn trees prefer to grow in open uncultivated soil. Before the arrival of the white man in Alberta when the entire St. Lawrence Valley was covered with dense forests, hawthorn trees could establish themselves with difficulty and only in small groups along water courses. Today after three centuries of clearing large hawthorn stands are established near the old settlements, such as Quebec, Montreal Toronto Rochester on the sites or close to old Indian villages like Caughnawaga and near the old forts of the Hudson Bay Company.

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE OF FORTY-NINTH BATTN

The Forty-ninth Battalion (The Edmonton Regiment) Association will hold its Annual Church parade on Sunday, July 19th, next.

The parade will fall in on the Market Square, Edmonton at 10 a.m. and will march from the Square to Parliament Hill grounds where the service will take place. Following the service a luncheon will be held in the Rose Room of the King Edward hotel at which special rates have been secured for the members, their wives and children.

The Edmonton Regiment will supply brass and pipe bands, Colour Party with the colours and an escort.

The 19th of July is the Sunday immediately following the close of the Edmonton Exhibition and it is felt that many members of the 19th Battalion, who have visited the Exhibition, will remain over for the parade.

BUFFALO COULLEE
June 12, 1936

Council meeting was held in Saltaux school with Crs. Hetherington Phenney, Ramsay, Hibbs, Law and Curtis present and Reeve Phenney presiding.

Mr. S. Hamilton of J. D. Adams Co. and Mr. Mc Whinnie of Richdown's grove present. Some repairs were ordered. Wm. Mason, M.L.A. from was present and reported certain concessions regarding consolidation agreement covering the Sec. 28-47-6 4. after some discussion a cheque for the full amount of taxes, balance of 1935 payment was given.

A letter was read from K. C. McLeod Supt. with copy of a letter from Mr. A. Nichyporuk attached. Mrs Nichyporuk was also present and asked that some payment be made on the taxes on her house, that the pump in the well be repaired, and that her pension be increased. The council agreed to supply the pump when asked and said she could not put it on, the offer was withdrawn. Carried that the reeve see that the pump is repaired. Information being supplied that she had two privilege cheques not cashed and that one was now due in two days, council refused to consider increase in pension.

Mr. Percy Hetherington was present to discuss matters regarding arrears of taxes. Hospital notices for the Smith ward read. A letter from the Vermilion girls' softball team was read. Mr. Steele and Mr. Robinson were present soliciting a grant. Carried that a grant of $10.00 be given. Correspondence was read regarding Elk Mound. Sec. to reply and advise no bonuses available. Letters were read from Dr. Bell and the Provincial Auditor re W.S. Burchill with accounts for medical and vaccine services attached. Information was supplied that this man is now working and Sec. was to write for his accounts and advise Dr. Bell. A letter was read from Dr. Bell asking guarantee of account re Mrs. Coulter. The reeve carried that council will assume responsibility as case not indigent. An offer was submitted to purchase the W½ 1-47-6 4. Sec. to write to supply registered names in the matter. Carried that Sec be instructed to levy a tax of 2 mills on all taxable property in the municipality with a minimum of 25c on any parcel subject to tax levy under authority of the Soldiers Settlers Tax Act 1936. Weed inspectors declarations were completed and instructions given for the purchase of some additional sprayer and spray repairs. Inspectors were also instructed to prepare rolls to sit their next meeting. Sec. to attend to several weeds, and to turn some in to the office at the end of the year. Accounts totalling $1,000.00 were passed for payment. Carried that reeve and Mr. Jasper Shippy was presented and approved. Also one from Mr. J. J. Ishbister, carried that same be approved on condition that Mr. Addison and family undertake to reimburse the M.D. out of insurance for $1,000 should the pension not be maintained. Carried that Sec. be instructed to advise all those in default on payment of 1935 Consolidation taxation and default that if payment is not made by July 1st that a four per cent penalty will be added and if unpaid or arranged for by personal attendance at council meeting on July 8th the agreement will be cancelled and land included in Tax sale. A letter was read from Windermere re P. Mc Kay for $25.00 on arrears of pension in addition to regular Dominion payment. Carried that request be granted. A complaint was made that the W½ 7-49-1 was being fenced in by part of this in provincial land the Sec. was instructed to advise the parties concerned that fences must not be extended beyond the patented portion without proper authority. A number of accounts and insurance were approved and ordered paid.

Cr. Law carried the adjournment next meeting to be at 10:30 o'clock on July 8th 1936

EDMONTON EXHIBITION OFFERING OUTSTANDING ATTRACTIONS FAIR WEEK

With the date of the Edmonton Exhibition drawing near — week of July 12 to 18 — the management are happy to announce the finest bill of attractions ever presented for the enjoyment of Edmonton Fair visitors. For the first time in many years the rail ways are offering single fare rates good for the entire week of the Edmonton Exhibition and bus lines are also offering reduced rates. The unusually large volume of show entries and capacity demand for show space in the Manufactures Building rate full outstanding success to the 1936 show. The citizens of Edmonton interests and the Exhibition management are co-operating in their preparations to entertain a record crowd of visitors during Fair Week.

Firmly established as Western Canada's premier Live stock and Agricultural show, the Edmonton Exhibition has also built up an enviable record for the high class character and splendid variety in the entertainment features arranged for Northern Alberta's Big Annual Holiday and carnival of fun.

As event of much interest to many readers will be the Grand Parade of Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. in Edmonton Fair week, and Friday, July 17 has been set aside as Legion Day with a one-piece display of fireworks at night. For the evening show in front of the Grandstand. Every available space has probably produced more outdoor shows than any other man on the continent, has built a magnificent program for the Big Parade and Parade" and which will present to Fair visitors the most unique and spectacular entertainment ever staged in an outdoor [illegible] centre. Developing Hudson's Bay Route

Recent announcements of efforts that are being made to interest British capital and Federal provincial governments to aid in extending the sphere of influence and service of Churchill as the Canadian port of the Hudson's Bay route is a matter of real importance to the whole Dominion, because the Bay and Straits are the western gateways as well as the Pacific Coast are stimulating public interest in the possibilities of further development of this comparatively new trade channel.

The past few months has seen the birth of a scheme that Winnipeg should be given direct connection with Churchill by construction of a road due north from that city which would cut off approximately one-third of the distance between the Bay and Winnipeg via The Pas that a line should be built from Bay River, Saskatchewan through the Lake Athabaska country, giving Prince Albert direct connection with Hudson's Bay and bringing Saskatoon closer, that a link should be made between that line and the Alberta Great Waterways Railway giving Edmonton and Calgary connection with Churchill and also via Edmonton a line from Churchill to Vancouver, using the existing C.N.R. main line from the Alberta capital to the B.C. coast port and finally a suggestion of a more direct line between the Pacific Coast and Churchill through the Peace River country.

It is not likely that all these lines will be built at once, but so many advantages can be claimed for them that it is reasonable to believe some sections will be made from time to time as the need for them becomes more apparent, and that in course of time, perhaps not so far distant, a more or less direct northern route from Churchill to the Pacific Coast will be an actuality. Just how long that will be is a matter of pure conjecture at this stage

Some of the advantages claimed for these extensions are that they would make possible the development of the rich mineral lands in the north of the three prairie provinces with greater rapidity, that the shortened distance between Hudson's Bay and the larger western centres would result in decreased freight levies on all imported and exported commodities and that a shorter overland route would tend to promote more tourist traffic between Europe and the Orient. It is also contended that the construction of a direct north route would be of benefit to the Pacific and the Bay coasts have distinct substrategic value in the event of Canada becoming embroiled with any aggressive Oriental power, since Vancouver would no longer be the only practical outlet for the nation's seaborne trade.

While the military aspect has not been overlooked, the promoters of this new northern network of communications are more particularly interested in the value it would have in developing the trade and commerce of the country, its potential effect on the freer exchange of commodities between Western Canada and European countries and particularly Great Britain and its possibility in promoting more local trade

With the prospective development of the mineralized areas of this vast north country becoming more immediate the last-mentioned objective is one which has immediate significance to the people of the western provinces and should be of particular interest to those farmers who, under existing conditions, are finding an urgent need of developing more and greater local markets for increasing varieties of farm products

When the immensity of this great northland is reviewed and the undoubted great value of its resources is considered, the possibility of developing local markets for prairie farm products almost stretches the imagination. Because of the long distances

London's Latest Fad

Pictures Made From Butterfly Wings Are All The Rage

London society's latest fad is pictures made almost entirely from butterfly wings. "Real," the artist has been buying old collections of these wings. He has completed a portrait of Queen Mary in the new medium. The dress consists of 600 butterflies' wings, all taken from collections made so far back as 1880. A striking portrait of Princess Elizabeth, entirely from buttterflies caught in the nineteenth century has been bought by the Bethnal Green Museum. Considering that the coin is made out of one of Canada's most beautiful natural products, and that up to one which we all have to use a great deal it ought certainly to be a work of artistic design. No nation can reasonably feel proud; when we see nobody with any aesthetic sensibilities can possibly feel other than ashamed about the present Canadian large nickel --- Toronto Saturday Night.

Friendship Of A Dog

Many People Consider It A Thing To Be Valued

A teacher in an Eastern city absented herself from her classes a day and a half because of grief over the death of a pet dog. A doctor is quoted as saying that "any teacher who cannot bear up under the sorrow of the death of a dog is in no physical shape to teach school."

People who have dogs, or who have lost them, will not all assent to this view. In many homes the dog is a real "person," a member of the family circle, a friend as well as a pet. Some say that affection should not be lavished upon dumb animals, but the fact is that they inspire affection, and give, in return for it, a grateful faithfulness which human beings do not always exhibit.

It is quite possible that a school teacher, losing one of these friends, would, whatever her physical condition, be incapacitated for her duties. Whether the resulting absence should be at her own or the municipality's expense is another matter altogether. But it is a mistake to suppose that the death of a dog will not affect normal people to whom it has been companion and friend.

Pioneer Navigation

Voyages From England Took Five Months In Early Days

Britain's Cunarder R.M.S. Queen Mary is a long way removed from the "Tweed," the ship by which he first left England's shore affirms Alf. Fisher, 78-year-old pioneer to this country, who celebrated his birthday at Sailcoats, Sask.

Seventy-one years ago---two years before Confederation --- Mr. Fisher left England at Quebec from the four-masted schooner on June 18. The boat had set sail on January 10, two months and a week before.

During the 71 succeeding years Mr. Fisher has seen a varied life in Canada. As a Northwest Rebellion veteran, he saw service in South Africa and enlisted for service in the Great War. He also spent some years with the Mounted Police Force.

Only seven when he crossed the ocean, Mr. Fisher recalls vividly the welcome change in diet which Quebec fruit made after five months of salt meat. His seventh birthday two days after landing was a fest of fun amidst a pile of logs on the old wharf. These things stick in his mind, he says.

The Canadian Michel

When King's Head Changed Other Side Could Be Improved

While the Bank of Canada, the nation's note issue, and the question of the issuance and supercarptions to be employed on Canadian money are under discussion, we may as well record our view, on aesthetic grounds, that the first Canadian coin to be altered by the substitution of the head of the present monarch for that of his predecessor should most decidedly be the large nickel. The obverse of the coin in its present design is probably the ugliest and cheapest-looking transportation to be found in the entire British Empire. Considering that the coin is made out of one of Canada's most beautiful natural products, and that it is one which we all have to use a great deal it ought certainly to be a work of artistic design. No nation can reasonably feel proud; when we see nobody with any aesthetic sensibilities can possibly feel other than ashamed about the present Canadian large nickel --- Toronto Saturday Night.

Solar Eclipse Observations

Radio Impulses Are Reflected To Earth By Sun Radiations

Indications that the earth's electrified roof, which, many miles above the surface of the globe, reflects back radio impulses, is formed mostly as a result of ultra-violet sun radiations appeared in preliminary results of the solar eclipse observations.

Prof. Boris Gernsmovich, head of the Soviet eclipse expeditions, said he had found that ionization, the formation of a decisive influence of these radiations in the formation of the ionosphere and for ionosphere had been obtained in a quick examination of results. He warned, however, that the information still had to be checked.

Prof. K. Kesmerik, head of the Soviet expedition at Temsk, said a great change was noticed in the behaviour of the ionosphere beginning 15 minutes before the total eclipse, when the audibility of radio signals was sharply increased.

Snake Worship In India

Many Fanatics Encourage Reptile To Live In Homes

It is strange, but true, that millions of people in India worship snakes, five snakes of every variety. Not only are these worshipped in every little village, but in some homes the family snake roves about the hearth unmolested. India is Millions gives some authenticated facts:

Here snakes are encouraged to dwell, in order to ensure freedom for their family from many evils and ward off misfortunes---leprosy, and the invasion of the house and garden by harmful snakes. Such lack of children is another of the misfortunes entailed by any failure to perform regular worship in honor of the family snakes.

Sunday School Lesson

JULY 5

THE COMING OF THE HOLY SPIRIT IN POWER

Golden text: Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. Acts 1:8.

Lesson: Acts 1:6-14; 2:1-47.

Devotional reading: John 16:7-14.

The Continuing Spirit of Christ, Acts 1:6-8. The apostles were met with their Risen Lord on the Mount of Olives. The question they there asked him, if at that time he would restore the kingdom to Israel, shows that even then they were unable to rid themselves of the common Messianic expectation of the Jews that the Christ would rule over a Jewish nation independent of Rome and herself dominant, politically and religiously, over the other nations of the earth.

"It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father hath set within his own authority," returned Jesus, and then he promised them power through the Holy Spirit, and gave them his great commission: they were to be his witnesses in Jerusalem, in all Judaea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. The Acts record the story of how Christ continued his work through his followers. The "uttermost part of the earth" was represented by Rome, the capital of the Empire, the place where, as Irenaeus said, "All met from every side and whence they go to every quarter."

Things as they were looking, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight.

The Day of Pentecost, Acts 2:1-11. The exact day of Pentecost (Greek, "Pentecost means fiftieth: it was the fiftieth day after the Passover), the disciples were all met together. Then suddenly there was a sound as of a mighty wind, and upon each of them appeared tongues as of fire. The Holy Spirit had come. The tongues of flame are like them literally or as a figure? It is the Greek in which the Acts was written; the word for spirit means wind or breath; and the expression tongue of fire is the symbol of fire, John the Baptist used it (Luke 3:16).

The apostles were "filled with the Holy Spirit," Pentecost, but they were conscious of the presence and guidance of the Spirit, and inspired by this inspiration controlled their whole being. Henry Drummond has said that probably most of the difficulties of trying to live the Christian life arise from attempting to half live it. He who tries to wholly live the Christian life is "filled with the Spirit."

Great Skill Required

People Who Produce Miniature Marvels Also Have Keen Eye

A new miniature marvel has recently been attracting attention---the world's tiniest steam engine, which is no bigger than a pen nib. The Hungarian who, made it, says it runs perfectly. He spent many hours making it out of odd bits of metal and wire, and has had to discard numerous parts which were mind fractions out.

Such ingenious model is an interesting comparison with what was apparently the previous smallest of all trains. Mr. J. Martin, of Walthamstow, London, made a miniature engine and christened it Silver Jubilee; he added two coaches and a guard's van, and the whole train measured no more than four inches. This remarkable midget was built solely of gold and silver. Its creator, aged 55, inserted mechanism by which the train could travel at a rate equivalent to two and a half miles a year.

For the world's most striking working unit we must turn to Nebraska, United States, where Emanuel Kahn has devised an electric motor capable of some 400 revolutions a second, but which is small enough to rest upon a man's fingernail without overlapping it. Bone from the parts of a horse are made of gold, and the whole engine, weighing a quarter of an ounce, depends upon a vital link in the shape of a thin strand of cotton.

Also no larger than a fingernail is the engine of Professor Kenichi Aoyagi, of Fukuoka, Japan, who presented a drawing to the late Emperor when Japan's ruler. He also made such an etching for King Edward VIII.

To conceive these things an eye-splitting of even eye is essential, but even greater skill is required to split a bank-note---which is a thousandth of an inch thick---in two. Yet there was a forgery charge recently against a man who did this, and was found guilty. The charges are genuine, nerely getting away with it, too. There has been no other case like it in England.

But there is no doubt that where miniature marvels are concerned, the palm must be given to Mr. John Charbonnea. His exhibition of 24,000 miniature objects a few months ago was the first of 33 years' collecting and three trips around the world.

He has the Lord's Prayer engraved on a pin head!

Lead Poisoning Dangerous

All Painted Articles Should Be Kept From Children

Confirming the report of Dr. J. P. Ross, of the Hospital for Sick Children, at the Canadian Chemical convention, Niagara Falls, that several Toronto babies have died recently from lead poisoning after biting painted articles, Dr. Alan Brown, chief physician at the Hospital for Sick Children, expressed the belief that there were many more cases than are recognized.

"We usually have half a dozen or more cases a year," Dr. Brown explained. His warning was that people with babies in the home should keep them away from painted articles, even the woodwork, and should pay attention to the paint on toys.

Lead poisoning from paint causes lead encephalitis, or inflammation of the brain tissue. "The lead gets into the blood stream, then into the brain," explained. "It is held to poison the brain cells." Dr. Brown. "You can detect it in the bones by the X ray, and it stays there for years."

Home-painted articles are particularly dangerous for young children, Dr. Brown emphasized.

"Quite apart from the cost, of the paint used around homes is made up of lead. It is often on cribs and carriages, and the baby bites it and sucks the rungs, especially during teething periods. They get the paint into their beds, even into the mouth with the paint off their toys. Only baked-enamel paint is safe."

The main symptoms of lead encephalitis are convulsions. Dr. Brown explained. "Whenever we have a case of encephalitis now we examine them for lead poisoning in the brain."

Seeks Fame And Fortune

Chinese Boy Earning Way To Hollywood In Original Manner

Consider the case of Eng Wing Koon, hanger-by-the pigtail extraordinary, who hopes to make fame and fortune in Hollywood.

Koon is crossing the continent by swinging from the pigtail of Jack Byrne in chosen spots, that is, to gather money and pay his way to choice hanging rooms further west.

He learned the art in New York so told state police at Bloomingburg, N.Y., when he made no move as to question his travel techniques.

All he needed was a soap box to stand on until he got his pigtail tied to a horizontal lamp-post or tree limb, he explained

He hung by his pigtail for about five minutes, then dropped to the box, lowered himself to the ground and started passing the hat.

Then the state police took him to the county jail at Hoonton and asked their colleagues in New York about him.

He had him---came the reply. We are looking for some Chinese dope fiends.

But Eng was no narcotic. The police decided. His father at 70 Pell Street and learns that Eng far from being a fugitive sought the limelight of publicity

So the police gave him a free night's lodging. He packed up his pigtail his wax and Hollywood.

Head Of Baden Powell Issue Appeared On Postage Stamp

Lord Baden Powell, who for 30 odd years was the central figure of the world movement of the Boy Scouts, which he founded, is the subject of a new postage stamp issued by Kenya, Uganda and Tanganyika, and the stamp is used as a postage stamp. A Question Of Luck

Dionne Sisters Have Fortune While Other Children Lack Necessities

Doubtless Dr. Allan DaFoe deserves the fame which has accrued to him through his successful treatment of the Dionne quintuplets Film producers are not to be unduly censured if they esteem it profitable to invest hundreds of thousands of dollars in the future earning capacity of the five ever-publicized infants

Is there not, however, a question of values here, the kind of question which breeds skepticism in the intelligent young? A current news item refers to "the thousands of people who made unselfish offers of help to the babies in the early days." Those "unselfish offers" indicate a laudable condition of human sympathy They also indicate the disproportionate generosity of an emotional soul

Five infants receive wealth such as their parents never dreamed of possessing, simply as a reward for being born "Neither the babies nor the rest of the Dionne family need worry about their normal requirements for the rest of their lives," announces the Ontario Minister of Welfare Whether that is fundamentally beneficial remains to be seen Everyone will agree that it is good to feel financially secure No need to be apprehensive about the supply of the quintuplets' milk

Yet there's a brave little youngster at the corner of Main Street, a boy of twelve, who begged me to buy a pair of sneakers in the middle of winter, running errands and shoveling snow after school hours. He would like to go to college some day, but probably won't be able to finish high school. A child with an intellect, his teachers say, a child who should have an opportunity His mother is a widow, and he has a younger brother and sisters

There's another child on Main Street---a girl of seven. Delicate-featured, with a far too pronounced depression in her grey eyes Her parents are educated, but they are "on relief" with a far too meagre dole, there's no fuel to light the kitchen stove The last time it was lighted the mother made all the family go to bed into doughnuts, which the little girl hawked around the neighborhood

Sometimes the little boy and the little girl wonder why no "unselfish offers" from a sentimental public come showering down on them. It was a mistake to come singly. They should have come in fives---Christian Science Monitor

Evidently Had Good Appetite

Queen Elizabeth Enjoyed Meal Of Pork And Veal

Reference is made in the June issue of "The P.L.A. Monthly" to "The London Tavern" in the City, it dates from Plantagenet times and was a favorite of the King's Head.

"Queen Elizabeth left her forced sojourn in the Tower of London in state, and a few years before she ascended to the throne, and on her way to Richmond went into the old church of All-hallows Staining (near the site of the Tavern) to offer thanks for her deliverance from captivity, and then went to The King's Head where she ate a solid meal of pork and peas. The metal dish and ewer used on the occasion are preserved at "The London Tavern today."

Rest And Change

Man Must Follow Nature's Example To Do Best Work

The maxim itself forbids us the necessity of rest and change During the snows and frost of winter it lies dormant. In rest it gathers force for a renewal of its activities in spring. We must follow the earth's example and gather force in rest and change, that we may do more or grow and gaining in strength and power than it could go on producing the grains and fruits and vegetables of summer and autumn without an annual rest.

Knew Human Nature

Disraeli Had Method Of Greeting Followers In House

Disraeli confessed that, although he was always forgetting their faces and never remembering their names, he had no difficulty in being pleasant to his followers in the House. When they crowded in the lobby whom I don't know from Adam, and I see he expects me to know who he is, I take him warmly by the hand, look straight into his eye, and say, 'And how is the old complaint?' I have never known it to fail."

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

Little Helps For This Week

Turn ye to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope Zech. 9:12

O power to do, O baffled will; O prayer and action, ye are one Who may not strive may yet fulfil The harder task of standing still, And good but wished with God is done

That God has circumscribed our life may add a peculiar element of trial, but often it defines our way and cuts off many tempting possibilities that perplex the free and strong, while it leaves intact the whole body of spiritual reality "that if we knew things that happen to us if we do them." We know that God orders the lot, and to meet it with the energies it requires and permits neither more or less, to fit it at every available point with the right and action of an earnest mind even if this action be narrowed, is what in that condition we have to do

No Necessity For Speeding

Time Gained Is Usually Not Worth Thinking About

There is no necessity for people to be rushing about the province at 60 miles an hour, says Inspector R. A. Great Britain the Pedestrians Association, has set a limit fix against motorists and is clamoring for a country-wide speed limit

Most of the road accidents there have been due to speeding, and the association examined the circumstances of a large number of accidents to this cause. It found that the time sought to be gained was usually a matter of a few seconds We in Manitoba can be equally certain that the cost of the speeding on our highways is by any legitimate excuse. --- Winnipeg Tribune.

News from Islay

A very pleasant afternoon was spent at the home of Mr and Mrs Bert Gould on June 1 when they entertained quite a number of friends in honor of Mr and Mrs. L. H. Playne who have now left for England for a two months visit. Mrs Playne was showered with handkerchiefs. Miss Jean Gould making the presentation with a nice little speech. Mrs Playne replying suitably.

The regular meeting of the W. A. of the Union church was held at the home of Mrs. W. Hooper and was very largely attended. It was a joint meeting of the ladies and husbands. Ladies Mrs Gallagher and Mrs. Mc Lachlan in charge of the devotional while Mrs Stuart and Miss Marie Smith served refreshments.

A most enjoyable farewell party was held in the Islay church parlor on Tuesday evening of last week in honor of Miss Hooper who left on Wednesday morning for Vermilion.

Miss Smith B.Sc. of the Islay high school staff is holidaying at the coast leaving her absence Miss Irene Hanson relieving.

Mr. W. Lennox of the Bank of Montreal staff is spending his two weeks vacation which is to be spending at his home in Camrose.

Mr and Mrs. Bert Gould, Jean and Mrs Gould Sr. and Mrs. L. Hooper motored to Edmonton on Tuesday morning. They returned on Wednesday.

The present school teacher Miss E. Lundgren is now at her home in Vegreville for the vacation.

Mr. Mackie Islay hired a truck and treated his senior pupils to a day's outing at Lac La Nonne.

BET MINIMUM PRICE IN JULY

Hon. Ed. Gardiner minister of Agriculture in the Federal government says the minimum wheat price for the 1936 crop will be set some time in July presumably about the middle of the month. The prevailing minimum price on wheat from the 1935 crop is 87½c a bushel.

SAFETY DRIVING CAMPAIGN BY A.M.A. WINS SUPPORT

Campaigns for safety in driving, waged for some years by the Alberta Motor Association, has won responses in various parts of the province.

In different centres, police officials are taking steps to carry out brake-testing operations and otherwise to see that machines operating on the highways are in proper shape mechanically.

Now that the summer driving season will soon be in full swing fresh warning to motorists is sounded by the A.M.A.

Congested highways besides such factors as high speeds and reckless turns and possibly strange roads all combine to make the summer driving period the most critical in the year. Supposedly book drivers, and people who are observers of safe driving are waiting in order for the first thaw to end the seasonal increase in traffic accidents have been made for the ending of the international border here. Cities and towns are having all-out safety campaigns. Last year traffic fatalities rose steadily to new high figures for August were the worst months of the year.

The A.M.A. has issued a list of nine driving talents which it observed as keep a car of motorists out of trouble this season. These include keeping your car in sound condition, keep your car under control, keep your eyes on the road don't let figure worry or anger with gasoline about to flicker, will be very effective in stamping out the pest.

It has been extremely gratifying to have had the co-operation from the ratepayers and council that I have enjoyed in the last two years and I see no reason why, with the continuance of the same this year, we can not help but make headway in combating the weeds in this municipal district.

As long as the ducks and geese migrate from large infested lakes to the fields and especially as long as the winds blow, combined with a little carelessness on the part of a few, we will have weeds to fight; so at least let us hold them where they are.

If in doubt regarding the identity of any weed you may have, a message left at the M. D. office will reach me and I will do my best to help you with the problem of weed control.

WEED PREVENTION IN VERMILION VALLEY M.D.

By E. S. Farley, Weed Inspector

As we all know the different kinds of weeds are now doing their best to get the crops and possibly a few weeds at this time would not come amiss, on how to combat some of the most persistent of the weed family.

Now Thistle, Canada Thistle and Quack Grass can be most effectively controlled and to a large extent completely killed out by the black summerfallow method, namely either discing, or cultivating the patches once a week throughout the growing season. This entails considerable work but if persistently carried out will prove very effective in most cases. This method is most easily carried out if the infested field is in summer fallow this year.

For the smaller patches of now thistle or Canada thistle in the growing crop, the municipality supplies attached in limited quantities, which if applied at the time the plant has reached its greatest growth, or is

MISS MURIEL SMITH HONORED

On Friday June 26, a dance was held at Fidelity school in honor of Miss Muriel Smith, who has been an efficient and popular teacher in this district for the past six years and has now resigned from that position There was a large attendance at the dance and a very enjoyable time was had by all. During the evening Miss Smith was presented with a beautiful white gold wrist watch by the community. Mr. A.S. Young, as a prominent member of the school board made the presentation. In the course of his address he remarked on the very satisfactory service Miss Smith had given as a teacher and extended to her the good wishes of the entire community in whatever new field of endeavor she entered. Miss Smith replied, thanking the community for the gift, stating how she had enjoyed being in the district.

GRADING, GRAVELLING AND HARD SURFACING OF ALBERTA ROADS

Work is to start immediately in various parts of the province on the extensive improvements program undertaken by the Provincial Government, utilizing "Prosperity Certificates to finance the projects.

In three ridings in the south-eastern part of the province, an initial appropriation of $5,000 each has been made, to be augmented as the situation demands.

The Provincial Public Works Department, which now has hundreds of men at work on the main highways, soon will be handling thousands, according to the government's program. Among main projects under way now are improvements to the Jasper high way, Edmonton-Wetaskiwin highway, and the hard surfacing of the Trans Canada section between Calgary and Banff, in addition to work in the southern part of the province

Provincial operations on hard surfacing on the Calgary-Banff road will be materially assisted by a $10,000 grant from the Dominion government.

On the Jasper highway, second course gravelling of the stretch immediately east of the park boundary is expected to be completed (mixed) shortly. The department also is carrying on an extensive reconstruction program on parts of the abandoned railway grade west of Stysl.

The general activity in road improvements in this province, demonstrating the value which both provincial and Dominion governments place in developing a large tourist trade has been commended by the Alberta Motor Association which has long urged the need of highway improvements.

Tourists from the United States would pour into Alberta if the province had hard-surfaced roads, it has been stated by motor club officials from south of the border

Canada's Railway Centenary

This year is Canada's railway centenary. On July 21st, 1836, Canada's first steam train was operated between Laprairie and St. John's, Quebec, over the Champlain and St. Lawrence Railway the first built in the chain of railways which now constitute the Canadian National System. The opening was made the occasion for a gala celebration at which tributes was paid by the leading citizens of Lower Canada to the founders of the Company. There for among men, whose influence was the creation of a transportation link between Montreal and New York, were pioneers of Canada's development But perhaps even they could not visual ize the vast country that would be built up as a result of the introduction of the steam railway. The sixteen miles of line over which the "Iberville", Canada's first locomotive, hauled the coaches carrying the distinguished guests of the Company, has developed into the great Canadian National System, with 24,000 miles of line serving Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The drawing, depicting the start of the first train, is from a painting by Adam Sherriff Scott, R.C.A., and is reproduced by courtesy of the Royal Bank of Canada.

WORLD PRODUCING MUCH LESS BARLEY

The world's area under barley has declined irregularly since 1929, but in the British Empire the reduction has been slightly more steady and more pronounced states the Imperial Economic Committee's report on the Grain Crops (1928-35). Though India and the British Isles have contributed materially to this decline, the reduction in the Canadian area (slight) is responsible for the change in the Empire total.

As in the case of wheat barley production in Russia has surpassed that of the United States in the past few years the United States falling from the first place as largest barley exporter in the world in 1928 to the seventh place in 1935. In that year its order of world's barley exports Russia Argentina, Poland Morocco Roumania and Canada surpassed the United States. Although India since 1930 has been consistently the largest barley producer in the British Empire Canada is by far the most important Empire exporting country.

Canada is the largest exporter of barley in the British Empire but her exports to Britain are irregular. Generally the Canadian exports of barley to Britain [illegible] during the years [illegible] the United States and Russia. The latter country has become the chief source of barley supplies to the British market since re-entering the trade in 1930. Australia and Argentina have been shipping barley to Britain in increased quantities. Total imports of barley to the British market in 1935 were larger than in any other year since 1928. The provisional estimate for 1935 shows that Canada exported 118,000 tons of barley to the British market, Russia sent 311,000 tons and the United States 110,000 tons. According to a preliminary estimate as at May 1, 1936 it was intended to plant 1,055,300 acres to barley in Canada this year as against 3,886,800 acres in 1935.

North-Eastern Alberta Firemen's Association Formed

Well Attended Convention Last Friday

FIRE CHIEF M. HILL HEADS NEW ORGANIZATION

Emerging from a convention of fire chiefs held at the town hall, Vermilion on Friday last week was the organization of an association to be known as the North Eastern Alberta Firemen Association to cover the towns and villages from Fort Saskatchewan on the west to Lloydminster on the east, as well as towns and villages on the Grand Trunk line to the south and the Canadian Pacific railway to on the north. It is the first organization of its kind, as far as known, in Western Canada and its purpose in the main will be the study of matters relating to fire prevention and fire protection. It will seek to educate the people as to the necessity of giving more attention to fire prevention in the homes as well as business places. Melvin Hill, chief of the Vermilion volunteer fire brigade was elected president, deputy fire commissioner R.E. Moore honorary president, William Rodgers, chief of the Vegreville brigade vice-president, George Lee of Vermilion, secretary-treasurer and an executive committee comprising five chiefs T.L. O'Connor, Mannville; T.J. Farley, Lloydminster; R. H. Sherwood, Kitscoty; P. A. Morel, Fort Saskatchewan and the fire chief of the town of Wainwright. J.W.G. Morrison, K.C. Vermilion was appointed legal adviser to the association. The convention which opened in the afternoon was attended by five chiefs and members of the different brigades from Fort Saskatchewan, Radnorly, Vegreville, Innisfree, Mannville, Kitscoty, Lloydminster, Heinsburg, Irma and Vermilion. T.M. Bowbey of Edmonton was chairman of the convention and addresses, written by lecturers of the prevention and fire protection were delivered by deputy commissioner Moore; Fire Marshall Booth of the city of Edmonton; deputy fire chief Macgregor of Edmonton and Chief Hill of Vermilion. There were over 30 representatives present. In the evening the visiting firemen were guests of the Vermilion Board of Trade at a banquet in the Elks hall at which the guest speaker was deputy fire commissioner R.E. Moore, representing the provincial government. In his address Mr. Moore urged that volunteer firemen be given every assistance by the public in their work and pointed out that the social side be developed, such as by the organization of hockey leagues, dances, clubs dances and so forth. He dealt with the provisions of the Fire Prevention Act and particularly stressed the necessity of educating the people as to fire prevention in the ten years preceding 1935 fire losses in Canada be

STRAWBERRY FESTIVAL AT HOME OF DAVID McPHEE AND AT ALLANDALE

On the 18th of June the weather was perfect for the annual strawberry festival held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David McPhee in aid of the Northern Vermilion United church. A bountiful and tasty supper was served at the McPhee home, after which the party adjourned to the hall diamond where a keenly contested ball game was arranged by the brown eyes, the blue eyes, the girls' team Clandonald, the latter being acclaimed the victors. When the shadows of night came on the guests were again entertained by a variety program which included a quartette by Gerald and Lawrence Omness, a recitation by Marjorie Pratt, and ringing with the pantomimes in which fifteen of the local young people took part.

AT ALLENDALE

On June 23rd under equally favorable conditions a similar event took place at Allendale, for the purpose of sustaining the funds of the Sunday school. A tasty well planned supper was served by the Ladies' Aid. Here soft ball was also played between the Reds and Islay, the latter winning the laurels. The program was a lengthy and enjoyable one and included: Duet, Gerald and Lawrence Omness; Reading, Hilda Omness; Chairs O'Dee Ludwig Omness, the Adamson brothers Miss Adamson, P. Lambert, Della Omness Recitations by Marjorie Pratt and Miss Ruth Armstrong concluding with a pantomime in which Messrs Reed McPhee, G. and L. Adamson Misses McPhee, Martin Good took part. At both events a happy time was had by all and the proceeds were satisfactory

Drive Them Off The Highways

Some time ago it was predicted that with the advent of the warm summer weather which tempts people to enjoy outdoor life as much as possible the newspapers would carry stories of automobile accidents re-sulting in the deaths of some and injury of a great many more.

The prediction is a safe one and is already being amply fulfilled. Even before the hottest summer months had arrived a number of smashes with their accompanying fatalities and injuries were reported in screaming head-lines in the daily press.

Eye witnesses of one accident in one of the prairie provinces report that a couple of men were driving a brand new car along a crowded high-way towards one of the cities on a Sunday evening. With the speedometer recording 75 and 80 miles an hour they flashed past scores of cars laden with men, women and children returning from a day at the summer resorts.

As the speeding car tore past other automobiles some of them travel-ling at almost equally unreasonable rates such traffic constituted, the occupants turned round and waved a derisive "ha, ha", gloating in their ability to "beat the other fellow". The inevitable happened. The driver lost control, or there was a blow out and the two occupants completed their journey to the city in an ambulance, broken limbs and pain-twisted features bearing mute testimony to their agonies. The erstwhile handsome car lay partly on the highway and partly in the ditch wrecked beyond the semblance of a vehicle.

Fortunately in this particular instance the two occupants of the car were the only persons to suffer as a result of their recklessness, but for an hour or more they had jeopardized the lives and limbs of scores, perhaps hundreds of people using the highways in a legitimate and sane manner, in-cluding many women and children.

Such recklessness on the highway is nothing less than criminal and those who come to grief as a result of such misuse of the roads and motor vehicles have only themselves to blame. A worse feature, however, is the menace of such wild driving to other people. Even at moderate speeds of 35 and 40 miles an hour the highways are none too safe, but with speed-crazed individuals at the wheel the roads become potential and sometimes actual shambles.

While the police are on the watch for reckless fools and do all they can to protect legitimate users of the highways there are not enough of them on the job to ensure complete protection and it is doubtful if the provinces can afford to employ sufficient patrolmen to furnish immunity from all dangerous posts.

Under such circumstances the only safeguard for reasonable people is to ensure public opinion against examples of this type to the extent that some drivers will be willing to report them to the police and appear in court to testify against them. Such complaints supported by adequate best-imony should normally result in cancellations of drivers' licenses, or at least suspension for a considerable period of time.

After all, the sensible driver, who reports the action of crazy drivers who endanger the lives of others is merely carrying out the law of self-preservation and is doing a public service in the interests of his fellow men and women. No one would hesitate to report a wild man running amuck with a knife or an axe, yet a wild man at the wheel of a powerful automo-bile is a thing greater potential danger to the public.

No person should feel a bit squeamish about reporting dangerous viola-tions of the laws of safety or harbor the notion that because he and his friends have been safely passed in front of his business. If two or three drivers report the recklessness of another their testimony should be ample to ensure conviction. If half a dozen or more report a case, the evidence would be overwhelming and a conviction certain.

Not very long ago newspapers reported the organization of a new safety body the Dominion Automobile Safety Council Inc., with head-quarters at Montreal, coupled with the announcement that its chief func-tion was to promote safety measures by educational means designed to cut down the motor car accident toll throughout Canada.

Such an organization can perform a very useful function in society in arousing public opinion and assist in dispelling the comparative apathy with which the general public appears to regard a very important question. The proposal that the co-operation of the driving public to report all cases of wild driving on the highways be sought might well be recommended.

Such drivers should be driven off the highways.

Not An Ordinary Search

Two Victoria horticulturists have set out on a 2,000 mile trek to look for wild flowers. But it is no ordi-nary wildflower that attracts Ed-mund H. and Joseph A. Lohbrunner trip as rural mail carrier after 16 to the Arctic and sub-Arctic part of the Yukon and Alaska. Rare and more pheromonum and dwarf wil-lows so much in height will be sought during the summer adventure.

Long Service Ended

With approximately 140,000 miles behind him travelled behind a slow, for wild flowers. But it is no ordi-by jolting horse, Henry Gaspereau of Rhodes Cut has made his last trip as rural mail carrier after 16 years continuous service over a daily route of 24 miles. Only twice in that time did he fail to make his round and storms were responsible both times.

Motor Roads In Britain

Increase in Traffic Is Causing Worry To Authorities

It is said that the British Isles have never been known better than they are today by more of those who inhabit them; and small wonder in view of the means of mo-tion available, observes the Lon-don correspondent of the New York Sun.

Road traffic has more than doubled in five years. In Great Britain there are 178,000 miles of public highways, of which 43,000 are classified roads. The total num-ber of vehicles using them last year was 2,361,000, as compared with only 873,700 in 1921. One person in every 19 now possesses an automo-bile. But there are 10,000,000 or more cyclists also using the roads.

According to Hore-Belisha, min-ister of transport, Britain, in the 20th century, has become the "most densely vehicled" country in the world, having 73 registered motor vehicles to the square mile as com-pared with seven in the United States. The increase has been so rapid, he declared, that highways and surveyors have not been able to evolve the means of assuring the free flow of traffic in conditions of method and safety.

In the next five years $430,000,000 is to be expended on roads and in that period it is also planned to construct 220 miles of cycle tracks and 1,250 miles of pedestrian footways. Although increased safety for the cyclists will be assured by con-struction of cycle tracks such as are already in force in the new towns sent, many of the cyclists resent the efforts to circumscribe their use of ordinary traffic arteries.

Japanese Zeppelin Service

Japan May Purchase Two Or More German Dirigibles

Japanese sponsors of ambitious plans for a trans-Pacific Zeppelin service found themselves faced with severe obstacles.

Plans, it is learned authoritatively, however, that the plans had not been abandoned.

Usually reliable sources said one group proposes three routes:

1. An airship service between Tokyo and Hsingking, capital of Manchukuo.

2. An airship line connecting Tokyo with Singapore or Batavia, in Shanghai and Hongkong.

3. An aerial route from Tokyo to San Francisco or Los Angeles, via Honolulu.

All three schemes call for purchase of two or more German Zeppelins. The Nazi government would supply air-plot called in for advice returned to Germany without, so Zir as could be learned, reaching any agreement with the Japanese interests. The sponsors were informed Germany could not fill such an order for pas-senger experts and pilots except for a very limited time.

Shaona River Floods

Church Is Wrecked But Bible Left On Table Is Undamaged

The flood waters of the Shaona river wrecked the interior of the Mount Nebo Methodist church at Ush, sit-uated on the river bank, but an open Bible undamaged on a small table, it was revealed in stories brought out from the ruins when the waters fell.

The church organ was overturned chairs were scattered about the building and the linen cover over the table on which the Bible stood was muddy

Another story from Ush concerns three hens that perched in high branches of a tree.

Later the water dropped the hens were found under the trees where they had established a community nest in which were found four new-laid eggs.

Oriental Figure Of Speech

Story Of Jonah In Hindustan Translation Shows Language Expert

The story of Jonah and the whale may inside a whale means from a matchbox translation contains egg, according to data supplied by George M Lamsa of Washington.

Writing in "Gospel Light," Lamsa, an expert in the Aramaic language and Bible tones, said:

"According to the interpretation of dreams in the East, fish or whale signifies trouble, disturbance and in-decision. Jonah in the whale is an Oriental hyperbole, and means Jonah is in trouble, just as an American would say, 'he is in a hole,' or 'he is out of a hole.'

"This American slang would be confusing to an Easterner, just as the term 'Jonah in the Whale' would be to a Westerner, unfamiliar with Oriental speech."

Should Be Other Ways

Not Increased Taxation Appears Only Remedy For Extravagance

For the current fiscal year, the Finance Minister expects a deficit of slightly less than $100,000,000.

These are astronomical figures!

Why, in 1896—only 40 years ago—the total expenditures of the Do-minion Government, chargeable to consolidated fund, amounted to "mere" $39,000,000. At the turn of the century in 1901 the figure was $46,000,000. And on the eve of the Great War, in 1913, total expendi-tures amounted to $113,000,000—or just an even fifty million less than last year's deficit!

Is increased taxation the only remedy?

Is there no room for greater economies in these times when every private business—every citizen—must economize?

Has every loop-hole of waste and extravagance been stopped?—Hali-fax Herald.

Millions Of Words Used During Session Of Parliament

During the recent session of par-liament, lasting less than five months, members of the House of Commons created approximately 3,-240,000 words while senators were comparatively reticent with little more than 580,000 words recorded by Hansard.

Special committees of the house whose proceedings were recorded used more than 3,000 pages of Hans-ard with something like 2,250,000 words of evidence and argument, that which investigated radio hav-ing the largest number—over 600,-000 words.

Reporting these proceedings and the general activities of the govern-ment and the members of parlia-ment. The Canadian Press sent over its automatic printers to its mem-bers throughout the Dominion well over 600,000 words.

Probably well over 1,000,000 ad-ditional words were sent over the telegraphic wires by the score of special correspondents who are rep-resenting individual newspapers in the press gallery. The house of com-mons was in session 90 days.

Dame Of St. John

Lady Tweedsmuir Has Been Appointed To Order Of The John Of Jerusalem

Lady Tweedsmuir has been ap-pointed a dame of grace of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, the Dominion Chronicle announced.

Persons admitted to this order "are such persons, being subjects of the British crown, and professing the Christian faith, as have per-formed or may perform any par-ticular good services for the order and its objects." The objects of the order are the encouragement and promo-tion of ambulance, hospital and other charitable work.

The order received a royal char-ter from Queen Victoria in 1888 as a revival of the military and re-ligious grand priory dissolved by Queen Elizabeth in 1559. Her Ma-jesty the King is the sovereign head of the order.

Speakers Held To Time

Convention Of Health Authorities Run By Light Signals

A system of automatic lights similar to ordinary street traffic sig-nals was used to keep speakers in order at the convention of the state and provincial health authorities of the South American held recently in Van-couver.

Five minutes before the scheduled time limit of each speaker a green light flashed on the hot-light ap-paratus set on his table. With one minute to go a yellow light appear-ed. When a red light came on time was up and whether or not he was finished the speaker had to sit down.

As a result of their signal sys-tem, the convention authorities were able to run their program on sched-ule.

Star Explosion

Flight Speeds Greater Than Speed Of Light Is Claimed

Did Mother Earth escaped from a big cosmic one of the nearest shows since the universe began—a star ex-plosion that happened long before man.

The shepherds saw the star of Beth-lehem and it was the star of Bethle-hem that the earth and the sun are next door neighbors by comparison with the star "three and a half years 2,000 or 3,000 years ago.

Civilizations rose and fell, but even light — traveling at 186,300 miles a second—could not give the earth the news of the blast until re-cently.

Man had suspected for a month that something had happened out there in the Milky Way, for a scientist in Holland had reported that cosmic rays—children of disintegrat-ing matter—had been travelling to earth in greater and greater numbers here from that direction.

On the night of June 26th, an astronomer-scientist at Delphos, Ohio, L. C. Peltier, peeped through his telescope and saw a bright star that wasn't there the night before.

It was so bright he could see it through the telescope. It lay on the boundary line between two constel-lations, Cepheus and La Certa, which are in the northwestern sky at sun-set and directly overhead in early autumn.

At Yerkes observatory of the University of Chicago, Dr. Otto Struve announced the star had been on astronomers' maps since 1893, and had not gotten any brighter by 1930, when its picture was had snapped.

Yacht To Be Scuttled

Famous Cutter Britannia To Be Sunk In English Channel

The famous royal racing cutter Britannia will be sunk in the Eng-lish channel by the shipbreakers' yard and will be scuttled in the English chan-nel.

Official orders for the sinking of the yacht, so closely identified with the late King George, were issued recently. A month ago it was an-nounced the sails and rigging would be sold.

The Britannia was built in 1893 for King Edward VII. when he was Prince of Wales. The famous cutter won 231 first prizes and 129 other awards in 625 races in the course of 43 years of racing.

Legend Came True

Water Filled Pool In Devonshire When King George Died

The age old legend, "And when the pool fills with water . . . ?" came true at North Tawton, Devonshire, when King George V. died. The legend says that when the spring-fed lake pool fills with water, a member of the royal family will die. The spring filled just before the death of the Prince Consort Albert, husband of Queen Victoria, and of Queen Victoria herself and the Duke of Clarence, first son of King Ed-ward VII. Three days after King George V. lay dead, the water van-ished and cattle are grazing there

SAYS FRONTIER OF BRITAIN IS ON THE RHINE

Paris.—Reiterating Stanley Bald-win's declaration that Britain's fron-tier is on the Rhine, Alfred Duff Cooper, British secretary of state for war, told the Association France-Grand Bretagne:

"Your frontier is our frontier."

France, British friendship, the minister declared, is not a question of "sentiment or even of choice," but as "urgent necessity, a question of life or death for our two countries."

"There still are today many Eng-lishmen who are so blind in their prejudices that they discredit before Britain entered the war from sheer blindness of heart solely in order to aid her friends, the French.

"We entered the war because our vital interests were at stake and because our lives were endangered.

"It is this kind of ignorance which from time to time lends Englishmen to propose reorientation of our foreign policy and the conclusion of other friends. They do not under-stand the nation is not free to choose at its pleasure its allies . . .

Referring to Britain and France, Duff Cooper said:

"They preach in Europe at pres-ent that liberty is a false ideal and that submission to another's will is the highest form of human activity. Such ideas contain nothing new. They are as old as tyranny and are completely foreign to the civilization of the western nations.

"They preach that war itself is desirable and that the mind of youth should be impregnated with the principle that to fight one's kind is man's nature and that death on the battlefield should be our highest am-bition.

"Such ideas are thoroughly unat-tractive. Yet they are propa-gated with terrible dangers and that if we permit them to triumph they will be a calamity for the world.

"That is why Britain is not only our frontiers but our very ideals are in mortal danger. It is consequently on the two great democracies of the western world that now rests the terrible responsibility of saving not only our own peoples but all of civilization we have created at the price of such great efforts."

Gigantic Air Base

United States Government Plans Project For Alaska

Seattle. — The Intelligencer says Rep. Bryon B. Harlan (D., Ohio) of Dayton, Ohio, disclosed that the United States government plans to establish another Pearl Harbor base in Alaska.

The newspaper quotes Harlan as saying he carried complete plans for the colonization plan with him aboard the U.S. fisheries vessel Brant for Alaska.

Col. Charles M. Marsh, chairman of the federal trade commission, ac-companied Harlan.

"The second colony will be under-taken as soon as the success of the Matanuska colony is assured," Har-lan was quoted.

"The Alaska base will be greater than that at Hawaii. Hawaii will be difficult to defend in case of war, because it relies on the mainland for its supplies."

Parliament Prorogued Before Many Motions Were Dealt With

Ottawa. — Eight private-member motions designed to prompt govern-ment action in various directions looking toward betterment of the social and economic system were left high and dry on the House of Com-mons order paper without ever hav-ing gone beyond the printing stage.

Prorogation of parliament left six other private-member motions and one senate bill on the order paper in various stages of debate. These in-cluded the permissive senate meas-ure to authorize establishment of the foreign trade zones in Canada.

Debate was unfinished on motions to raise money by higher income tax to put all unemployed at work at a prevailing rates of pay; to reform Canada's attitude toward the League of Nations; to guarantee fixed mini-mum prices to primary producers of grains; to revoke the empire trade agreements and to amend the crimi-nal code.

Notices of motion that got no farther than the order paper includ-ed parliamentary government and new reform proposals; rescinding the sackeye salmon treaty with the United States; a survey of Canada's national productive capacity; read-justment of the representation in the House of Commons; use of electrical energy in place of coal on railways and for heating purposes; that tariff protection be withdrawn from indus-tries paying low wages; reduction on the national debt structure and the interest payable thereon; establish-ment of system of national scholar-ships to aid qualified pupils in uni-versities, colleges and technical schools.

Demand From Russia

Warns Free Passage Through Dar-danelles Must Be Restored

Moscow, Switzerland. — Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff of Rus-sia demanded Russian submarines as well as other warships have free passage through the Dardanelles.

His request, made at the Lausanne treaty signatories, in confer-ence here, was in answer to a Tur-kish proposal that warfare craft be barred from the strategic straits which Turkey wishes to fortify.

Litvinoff declared he was unable to see why other countries should want to dispatch warships to the Black Sea unless they were sent on courtesy calls or on sanction mis-sions for the League of Nations.

Litvinoff asked aircraft-carriers and submarines of non-Black Sea nations be barred from the Black Sea.

Japan insisted on complete reci-procity in the movement of warships in the Black Sea.

France took the stand powers not bordering on the Black Sea should be given unrestricted passage through the Dardanelles if acting under the mandate of the League or helping a victim of aggression under regional pacts.

Abolish Office

De Valera Decides To Do Without Governor-General

Dublin President Eamon de Val-era announced in the dail that the office of governor-general would be abolished in the projected new con-stitution. He said, an elected representative of the people would be the ceremonial head of the state.

James McNeill, first governor-general of the Irish Free State, was appointed in 1928 and offered his resignation to the king on Oct. 3 1932 His Majesty accepted it on the advice of Mr. Dulera, president of the executive council

His successor was Donald Buck-ley, a member of the dail who had played a prominent part in the 1916 Easter rebellion

For some months before McNeill's death there had been friction between the governor-general and President de Valera over slights offered former by members of the Free State government

Famous Singer

Former Edith Miller, Of Portage La Prairie, Dies in England

Gravesend, Eng.—Mrs. Max Colyer-Fergusson, who before her marriage won fame as a contralto singer, died here recently. She became known as the "Manitoba Nightingale". Mrs. Fergusson was born at Portage in Prairie, Man.

Winnipeg.—Mrs. Max Colyer-Fer-gusson was the former Edith J. Mil-ler, daughter of the late W. W. Mil-ler, postmaster at Portage in Prairie, Man., for many years. Her beautiful contralto voice carried her to inter-national renown as "The Manitoba Nightingale."

Miss Miller's musical career began officially when she was a student at Westminster Ladies' College, Tor-onto. She won the gold medal at the Toronto Conservatory of Music after studying under an Italian music master, Signor d'Auria.

She continued her studies for three years in Winnipeg, then moved to Europe, where she continued her music in London and Paris. In the latter city she was a pupil of the famous Madame Marchesi.

Freight Disregarded Signal

Thirteen Persons Were Killed In Spanish Train Crash

Leon, Spain.—The Madrid express collided head-on with a slow freight train inside a single track tunnel through a mountain near Pajares, Leon, killing 13 persons and injur-ing 23.

The signalman on duty said the signals were set as a warning for the freight to take a siding. Author-ities decided the signal was not heeded, causing the collision.

Officials said the engineer of the freight train disappeared immedi-ately after the disaster, and could not be found. His fireman and en-gineer and fireman of the express were killed.

SAYS NO NEED TO ASSUME WAR IS INEVITABLE

London.—"There is no need for panic or to assume that war is in-evitable," declared Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, in a speech at a dinner of the Royal Em-pire Society.

No country in Europe desires war and the "irritating belief" to the contrary was that war was inevitable.

"But," he added, "there is no doubt that rearmament is going on. Europe that a spark might start a conflagration unless great powers like ourselves are strong enough to make other influence felt in the cause of peace.

"We are re-arming to stop the drift to war. We are building our navy and air force are adequately strengthened in time there will be no world war. Our armaments, par-ticularly British naval strength, is one of the most potent factors of the game of the world.

"If a well-balanced fleet, capable of defeating an enemy, keeping the seas open, equipped to go anywhere and concentrated upon the three essential duties cover, cruising and convoy can be built in time, there will be no world war."

Successful Treatments

Medical Association Told Of Gastric Ulcer Cases

Victoria.—Of 60 cases of gastric ulcers, treated with regular recog-nized treatment, not with any in-novations, 33 were apparently en-tirely relieved of symptoms of the trouble for five years or more after the treatment, Dr. E. E. Cleaver, Toronto, told the Canadian Medical Association.

The 60 cases reviewed were all those of fairly advanced years. The treatment was diet and a duodenal tube.

X-ray pictures were taken at the time of the first treatment and at the end, so that the results were studied closely.

Dr. Cleaver said gastric ulcer had a natural tendency to heal itself.

Motor Torpedo Boats

Six Boats Of New Design Handed Over To British Admiralty

Portsmouth, Eng. The first of six new high-powered motor torpedo boats which British experts assert are likely to revolutionize naval de-sign and construction was handed over to the admiralty.

The craft, which will be inspected by the king, is able to manoeuvre so deftly it is considered to be in-vulnerable to an air attack. It can make more than 40 miles an hour.

Carrying a crew of 10, the vessel is equipped with two torpedoes, which may be fired by remote, and a light gun armament. Eighteen of the boats, it is said, can be built at the cost of a single submarine de-stroyer.

Lifting Of Sanctions

Lloyd George In Critical Of Action Of Government

Sawley, Derbyshire.—"Last night I saw the white feather embroidered across the Union Jack by a skilled and practised hand," said David, Lloyd George in a speech commenting on the government's decision to lead the move to lift sanctions and debate in the House of Commons.

"I am one among the many mil-lions in this land who are humiliated by the spectacle,' the former prime minister declared, referring in scath-ing terms to the government's "be-trayal of Abyssinia."

"They had three foreign ministers undertaking the task," he said, "but one after another threw in his hand because he was afraid to tackle the job. We ought never to have taken the task in hand unless we meant to put it through.

"There is no sympathy anywhere on earth for this act of aggression.

"We are told—if you threaten sanctions against an aggressor, he may hit you in the eye. But is it really coming to this That Britain won't do its duty for fear of a black eye?

"We seem to be impotent with the whole British Empire behind us im-potent against one man bluffed by Mussolini, fooled by Laval. The voices of the people and the voices of the dead are calling upon them to insist that Britain should head the world again upon the path of right."

WILL ATTEND LEAGUE MEETING IN SEPTEMBER

Ottawa.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will head Canada's delega-tion to the meeting of the assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva in September. He will also attend the coronation of King Edward and the Imperial conference in London next May. Because of those journeys he will be unable to go to France next month to attend the unveiling of the Canadian war memorial at Vimy Ridge

Mr King said he had asked Hon Ethiel Lapointe minister of marine Hon C C Ferland minister of pen-sions and health, and Hon Ian Mac-Kenzie minister of national defence to represent the government at the Vimy ceremony.

At the fall meeting of the League assembly the question of the read-mission of the Soviet republic to membership in the League will be discussed.

Conservative leader Rt Hon R H Bennett commended Mr. King's decision and said it was highly de-sirable the prime minister should attend such an important meeting.

Would Not Shorten Hours

Geneva Labor Meet Favors Principle Of Paid Vacations

Geneva.—The international labor organization ended its annual con-ference after adopting the principle of paid vacations for workers and rejecting the proposal for a 40-hour week.

Although six nations have already adopted the 40-hour week, C. B. Spencer, British employers' chairman of the conference, announced in his re-port the shorter hours schedule would remain a topic for study of the labor office rather than an immedi-ate project.

The labor office ought not to abandon the 40-hour week, Harold Butler, director of the international labor organization, told the dele-gates. He recalled the 48-hour week first proposed as early as 1848, was not put into practice until 1919, and that the 40-hour week was not adopted by any nation until 1931.

Manual For New Citizens

Would Impress On New Canadians Importance Of Their Citizen-ship Rights

Vancouver.—A proposal that the federal government print a manual which would be placed in the pos-session of all new citizens of Canada to impress on them the importance of their citizenship rights was con-tained in a report submitted to the Vancouver Canadian Clubs by its president Mr Justice A. K. Dysart of Winnipeg

Mr Justice Dysart who is chair-man of a special committee on naturalization also advocated some special ceremony for the presenta-tion of naturalization certificates in Winnipeg these occasions were made an impressive ceremony, he said.

NATIONAL BODY MAY TAKE PLACE OF LOAN COUNCIL

Ottawa.—Finance Minister Charles A. Dunning announced it is proposed to set up a national committee on financial questions composed of Do-minion and provincial representa-tives. It will be established "on a purely voluntary basis."

Communications have been sent to the provinces asking for their sug-gestions for the setting up of the committee.

The finance minister gave out a statement in which he emphasized the "desirability of regular and fre-quent meetings with the provinces for the mutual discussion of prob-lems in the field of finance and taxation."

While the loan council legislation which it had been proposed to intro-duce into parliament had fallen by the wayside with the failure of the Bennett financial amendment to pass the senate, it was hoped to arrange for closer association of Dominion and provincial governments on matters of finance and taxation.

Subjects which might be consider-ed by the proposed committee were mentioned by the minister They in-cluded financial relations between the Dominion and provinces; methods of reducing "evils of multi-ple taxation"; possibilities of co-operation in tax administration; methods of securing "more equit-able, better balanced and more elastic tax systems"; methods of securing greater co-operation and co-ordination in the financial policies of Dominion and provinces; and clearer and more uniform methods of budgetting.

Had the constitutional amendment brought down in the commons been passed by the senate, the intention, the minister said, was to set up loan councils in the case of those provinces desiring to participate. Also an advisory body to be known as the national finance council con-sisting of the Dominion minister of finance and provincial treasurers would have been created.

Mr. Dunning expressed the hope that such a body organized on a voluntary and advisory basis only, could, over a period of years, make a substantial contribution to the improvement of conditions in the field of public finance in Canada.

U.F.A. Convention Closed Wednesday

Many Speakers At Open Forum

Sessions of the annual convention of the Battle River Federal Constituency U.F.A. and C.F.W.A. were held here from Monday to Wednesday, inclusive of this week. The program being run according to schedule, Mayor C.W. Robinson extended the delegates the keys of the town on Monday morning at the opening session and from then on the business was packed full of all business and interesting addresses. The open forum Monday evening was extremely interesting and attracted a large number of townspeople to the grandstand. The debate was led by H.E. Spencer and P. Ekenstaler while speakers were Mr Van Allen, Edmonton and Liberal M.L.A. Gerald O'Connor M.L.A. Liberal, Wm Hallins Myriam, Communist M. Sereda, Farmers' Unity Leader and J.W.G. Morrison Conservative. Mr. Andrew Wood acted as chairman for the evening. The question period was lively and interesting.

The delegates camped on the grounds of the Vermilion agricultural society and enjoyed many recreational hours as well as the business meetings

Reports from different locals showed marked decline in membership, we have not yet overcome the shock sustained from the social Credit wave but they will come back, explained one delegate

Consideration For Workers

General Foods Gives Annual Vacations With Pay To Hourly-Rated Employees

Factory employees of General Foods in 31 plants in various parts of Canada and the United States will enjoy from one to two weeks' vacations with pay this summer.

General Foods employees who have completed two years but less than five years of continuous service by July 1 of each year, and who have a record of regular attendance during the preceding calendar year, will get a week's vacation with pay during the current calendar year. Employees who have completed five years or more of continuous service will receive two weeks' vacation with pay.

The decision to reward General Foods' hourly-rated employees was made by the food company's plant managers' Announcement of the vacation plan was made by P. D. McIntosh, Vice President, General Foods, Limited, Toronto.

"The purpose of this plan," Mr. McIntosh said, "is to provide annual vacations with pay for hourly-rated employees. It is a recognition of continuous service and regular attendance and of the value of a period of recreation from routine duties.

"Vacations with pay for factory employees is not an innovation with General Foods," Mr. McIntosh explained. "It has been the practice for many years in some units of the corporation to give vacations with pay on a limited basis. The newly announced program is a further step in a long established industrial relation policy of the corporation. It will liberalize the existing vacation plan and make vacations with pay available to all General Foods factory employees with two years of service."

Two years ago General Foods prescribed its employees with an old age retirement plan. A group insurance program, supported in part by the corporation, also is in force.

During the depression the corporation maintained a high average of employment, and since then General Foods has increased employment to what is now the highest in its history.

Qualified For Prize

Stellan Flore Handed Dozen In Family For 918 Years

Guiseppe Pernatoni, descendant of a family which has lived in the same farm for 918 years, has been awarded a prize by the Italian government. Records show that in 1018, when Saharinian were still over running the Italian peninsula, a peasant named Pernatoni reclaimed a plot of marshy land in Montalchito which had been reclaimed with and been cultivated by his family ever since. Last year the Fedelia Alta Terra" prize, as it is known, went to Antonio Gustolisi, who, surrounded by his 20 children and grandchildren, was crowned to be working the same land as Guerricini, which his ancestors had worked for 700 years.

British Aviation

Stage Seems To Be Speed In Developing Air Craft

The greatest financial year in Britain's history of aviation is just starting. Between now and next April more than $123,500,000 will be spent on aviation alone.

Work, for the right man, is to be had for the asking. There are not enough men to fill the positions vacant. Every pilot with the right experience has a post, every workman with skilled experience in drawing overtime pay, every designer with ideas a busy at a drawing board.

The largest order for civil aircraft ever placed has been gained for the new Imperial Airways machines—craft that will span the Atlantic, halve times on the empire lanes.

More than 2,000 men are at work in the Rochester works of Short Brothers, finishing the first batch of flying boats for this order. Another 2,000 are building the engines for them. Hundreds more are making the land planes for this order at Armstrong Whitworth. The order amounts to $10,000,000.

The government is spending $90,000,000 on the Royal Air Force expansion scheme. Every aircraft factory in the country is working to maximum capacity on this order No more orders are being taken.

Wider Markets

Says U.S. Policy Of Economic Isolation Will Never Bring Prosperity

What the United States needs is a complete readjustment of the economic policy we have pursued since the World War, wider markets for our own and our customers' goods, a wider field of endeavor for labor, a way found to pay our foreign debts, and we gradually liquidate their obligations to us. The policy of economic isolation if protected for a million years could not in that time return work and prosperity to the people of the United States.

Under a policy of economic isolation, even if a man makes a profit more and more of that profit will have to be contributed to the government to provide subsistence for the unemployed. Under this policy we make it necessary for those who are working to support those who are not. The more trade we have the greater our prosperity and consequently less the tax burden. Less trade, less prosperity and higher taxes.—Senator Tydings of Maryland.

More Than A Coincidence

Lone Brides Did Not Choose Thirteenth For Ceremony

Superstition is gradually dying out, but it looks as though there's a little of it yet, especially in connection with weddings For instance, on February 13 June usually runs with one another to see which will have the most marriages to its credit. This year, however, a Saturday came on the so-called "unlucky 13th, and whether it's coincidence or not, the Saturdays before and after have a bigger-than-ever list, while the 13th contents itself with less than half the normal number.

This brides of June 13, however, seem a bit afraid of any bad luck.

They all chose the day because it fits in best with their plans, although some admitted that she had rather a hard time convincing herself that the "13" didn't matter.—Toronto Telegram.

Has Large Interests

Over $780,000,000 Of British Capital Invested in Shanghai

When one thinks of Britain in China, one thinks of Shanghai. It is estimated that somewhat over $750 000 000 represents the investment of British capital in Shanghai. "In spite of Japan's numerical predominance the British community in Shanghai still contributes nearly twice as much as the Japanese towards the municipal taxation," according to The Round Table. "What sort of times going on in Shanghai in recent years is typical of the changing conditions in the Far East. There has been a tremendous increase in the Japanese population in the international settlement and adjoining district till today the British are outnumbered nearly four to one But the municipality has been developed by the British and its local council is controlled by them.—Hamilton Spectator.

Seattle Child Actor's Case

End Dispute Over Custody And Earnings Of Adam Barthelmess

Judge Harry Archibald has approved an agreement ending the family dispute over the custody and earnings of Freddie Barthelmess, child screen actor.

The agreement gave the custody of the 13-year-old star to his mother Myllicent Mary Barthelmess, who has piloted his screen career from its beginning.

The boy's parents, Cecil Llewelyn Barthelmess and Lilian May Barthelmess, were divorced and the right to visit him as often as they cared to so long as this did not interfere with his regular work.

The Union Bank and Trust Company was named as guardian of Freddie's estate and his earnings, unofficially estimated at $1,500 weekly,—were ordered distributed as follows:

Ten per cent. to the father, five per cent. each to his minor sisters, Eileen and Hilda, and the remainder to his own estate.

From the estate the expenses of the boy actor and his aunt will be paid. The residue will go towards building a fund for his education and future needs.

Home Away From Home

Glasgow Prisoners Are Made Comfortable In Furnished Pen

Prisons of Glasgow, Scotland, are to be just like a home away from home to the lowest class of law breakers. The city will spend $3,500 in making cells more comfortable with blankets, pillow slips, bolsters, rubber mattresses, collapsible tables and chair and other conveniences. Drunks will not be permitted to use them. Recent legislation was enacted in Parliament about the treatment of persons awaiting trial.

Sea Monsters

Back Season Brings Its Own Story Of Some Fearsome Sea Serpent

There must exist subterranean monsters of which we have no knowledge, or periodically wander from outlandish places reach us of fearsome creatures. The latest is a description from Papua of a sea serpent with long, curled tusks like those of a boar. If the natives can capture one, the New South Wales Annas had virtually reigned as high priest in Jerusalem for fifty years, though Caiaphas was the official high priest, recognised as such by Rome. The members of the Annas circle and before them stood the Pharisees. Peter and John, at the healed man also, as a kind of accessory in the dock.

They what power or in what name have ye done this?" they questioned the prisoners.

Peter, now filled with the Holy Spirit, answered his enemies' rulers of the people [the chief priests], and elders of Israel [members of the Sanhedrin] if we this day are examined [put on defense] concerning a good deed done to a feeble man (a cripple), by what means this man is made whole [if] be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye [some] did, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth [his man stands] before you whole." Then boldly Peter charged them of unbelief concerning Christ. "He is the stone which was set at naught by you [the builders], which was made the head of the corner." Then he declared that the angle of two walls which supports and unites them. See Ps. 118:22 and Matthew 21:42.

"In none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, whereby we must be saved." Even with these words Peter ended his witnessing for his Lord.

Thousands Watch Air Display

Britain's New Flighting Planes Go Through Intricate Manoeuvres

One hundred and fifty thousand persons, including representatives of 37 foreign powers, attended the annual display of the British Royal Air Force at Hendon airdrome.

The huge crowd watched Britain's new fighting planes roaring over the field at a speed of 300 miles an hour and participating in intricate flight manoeuvres.

One of the features of the display was a training demonstration in which two flyers took to the air and all instructions from the "teacher" in his "pupil" were relayed by wireless from the ground by radio "and loud speakers stationed on the ground.

Hospital At Aklavik

New 24-Bed All Saints' Hospital To Be Opened This Summer

When the new 24-bed All Saints' hospital is opened at Aklavik, diocese of the Arctic, this autumn Miss Margaret Field, Chilliwack, B.C., will be added to the staff. It was announced in Toronto. The building will replace that destroyed by fire April 8.

Miss Field will accompany Margaret A. Solomon, nurse-in-charge at the hospital, and Marion Harvey, house matron, when they journey to Aklavik by the last boat down the Mackenzie river in August.

Miss Solomon has been in New Westminster, B.C., since the fire, and Miss Harvey in Toronto.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JULY 12

WITNESSING UNDER PERSECUTION

Golden text: We must obey God rather than men. Acts 5:29.

Lesson: Acts 3:1-4:31; I. Corinthians 1:21-25.

Devotional reading: Romans 10: 8-15.

Explanations And Comments

Peter's Cure of a Beggar's Lameness, Acts 3:1-10.

Peter Ascribes the Cure to Christ, Acts 3:11-16. An amazed crowd quickly gathered in Solomon's Porch and Peter hastened to tell them that it was not by his own power that he had wrought this marvel, but through faith in the Prince of life the man had been made strong. This fact at first of healing of the apostolic age reminds us of the fact that triumphs of modern surgery and medicine being wrought to-day by medical missionaries in the hospitals of eastern lands cannot be so as miraculous as the picture of this restored cripple, leaping about to try the new strength in his limbs.

Peter and John Arrested, Acts 4: 17 to 4:4. Peter's preaching at this time gained so many believers for Christ that the number increased to five thousand in all. The priests, the captain of the temple and the Sadducees came and arrested Peter and John because they proclaimed in Jesus the resurrection from the dead. It being evening and too late for a trial, they put the apostles in prison for the night.

Peter's Boldness Before the Sanhedrin, Acts 4:5-12. The next day the Sanhedrin met in session, that great Jewish tribunal before which Jesus had been tried and pronounced guilty. It was supreme in all matters affecting the Jewish law, the existence of death being the only penalty which they might not inflict. Annas and Caiaphas, Alexander and other great officials were present. Through his boldness and power Peter Annas had virtually reigned as high priest in Jerusalem for fifty years, though Caiaphas was the official high priest, recognised as such by Rome. The members of the Annas circle and before them stood the Pharisees. Peter and John, at the healed man also, as a kind of accessory in the dock.

By what power or in what name have ye done this?" they questioned the prisoners.

Peter, now filled with the Holy Spirit, answered his enemies' rulers of the people [the chief priests], and elders of Israel [members of the Sanhedrin] if we this day are examined [put on defense] concerning a good deed done to a feeble man (a cripple), by what means this man is made whole [if] be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye [some] did, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth [his man stands] before you whole." Then boldly Peter charged them of unbelief concerning Christ. "He is the stone which was set at naught by you [the builders], which was made the head of the corner." Then he declared that the angle of two walls which supports and unites them. See Ps. 118:22 and Matthew 21:42.

"In none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, whereby we must be saved." With these words Peter ended his witnessing for his Lord.

Employment In Canada

Upward Trend Is Indicated In Returns Made By Firms

Employment in Canada, as indicated by bureau of statistics returns from 9,860 firms, showed a gain of 23,295 persons on June 1 as compared with May 1, the bureau reported. In comparison with June, 1935, an increase of 47,721 was shown in the number employed.

The payrolls, also, were larger than the gain recorded during the month of may last year, was smaller than the average seasonal gain in the period from 1920 to the present.

The report showed $63,513 on the payrolls of the co-operating firms. Compared with $60,218 at the beginning of May and $13,782 on June 1, 1933, the index of employment on June 1 stood at 105.0 compared with 90.5 in the preceding month and 97.6 on June 1, 1935. The index is based on the year 1926 as 100 and at 102.0 stood at the highest figure for June since 1931.

Employment was reported in manufacturing, particularly in the food and lumber divisions. In the non-manufacturing industries, there were important increases in logging, mining, communications, transportation, highway and railway construction and maintenance, construction and trade. On the other hand, building construction was not so active.

The report was based on four of the five economic areas. Firms in the prairie provinces employed the greatest number of persons.

Construction (especially railroad construction and maintenance), logging, mining, manufacturing and trade showed improvement in the prairie provinces.

Stand By The League

General Smuts Enunciates The Position Of South Africa

General Jan Smuts, minister of justice in the Union of South Africa, said in a recent speech that it would be the League of Nations until the very end, agreeing with the views on the league expressed by Prime Minister J. B. M. Hertzog.

(South Africa has expressed her opposition to dropping sanctions against Italy for the Ethiopian conflict).

"It would be aberarat lunacy to commit suicide," declared the general Smuts, a former prime minister, told an Afrikander day meeting. "We do not possess a single ship able to defend them at present, nor which could land enough planes on our shores to wipe out our large cities within a few hours.

"I am not referring to an imaginary danger but to a very real one. We have to face the fact that plunged into the next war in which England is involved but let me tell you that decide which knows the secrets to keep out of war, and also knows that South Africa has the right to decide what is and is not of act on and the union will not declare war unless the people of South Africa through their own parliament have decided on that question."

Gen. Smuts said that South Africa [illegible] "an attractive bait for foreign powers, although he feared there was no doubt her position was becoming most dangerous.

Indian Boys Build Model

Work At Sardis, B.C., Was Done In Spare Time

The [illegible] Agriculture Indian school, Sardis, B.C., under the direction of Mr. R. Huddleston, have completed the building and design of a very fine boat. The boys, between the ages of fourteen and seventeen, have done the work in four months Thirty-five feet long, with an eight-foot beam, it will be equipped with a hundred horse-power motor It has nine lines and a light draught. The planking is British Columbia red cedar, the keel is of fir, ribs of oak, while half an inch of Australian rum wood has been used. As these boys come from families engaged in boat-building and fishing, the training they get at the school is of practical importance.

A rowboat is now under construction, and part of the instruction deals with gas-engine construction and repairs. While the Indian boys are thus employed, the girls are not idle, as the products of the arts and crafts department demonstrate.

FLEMING'S FOLLY
— BY —
LAURENCE A. BEATTIE

His bullet ripped the weapon from the other's hand. With a hoarse cry Roper tried frantically to regain it. His bellow was that of a maddened animal as nerves sprayed pain over his arm and shoulder. Suddenly he abandoned the gun, stooped, snatched a fresh Colt from the holster Meli had not touched, and, gripping it, ran crouch.

Link waited. A bullet had torn a hole in his trouser leg and perhaps had creased him, but he was conscious only of throbbing pain from his side and shoulder. As the rancher fired again Link fired. His accuracy repeated; once more Roper Kilgo was disarmed!

The crowd uttered a long-drawn gasp, for still the man came on with heightening wolfish fury. The thirty feet that had separated Meli and Fleming was entirely gone; Kilgo's thick frame hurtled through the air and his claw-like stubby hands shot for Link's wrist and throat.

They crashed, a gyrating mass of writhing humanity. A cloud of dust rose as their bodies struck and distinguish one from the other. Link's forty-five exploded. A well-placed blunt fist made it clatter away to the dust. His antagonist whipped up a knee that grazed his groin At the same time Roper abandoned his wrist hold and dealt a terrible vicious fingers on Link's throat!

His eye started from their sockets. His head went foggy and his world reeled, then seemed to fall out A ringing set up in his ears and every muscle was taut with pain.

Link's left hand swept down on the [illegible] of strength in what he knew was his final blow. Fleming whipped his right arm back, crooking the elbow, then shot forth a terrific slam to the chin.

The fierce, brutal countenance before his ragged away. Dully Fleming heard knuckles meeting jawbone, felt that awful grip on his windpipe relax, felt black-rimmed fingernails scratching over his flesh. He crumpled to the ground as he slid into the yawning gulf of unconsciousness.

When again he opened his eyes they were staring down into those of Helen Hamilton, and he knew she leaned over him, held his head out of the dust with a slender arm about his neck. Gratefully he gulped from a flat bottle she held to his lips, then sank back sighing.

There was a movement in the circle of bystanders and Sheriff Amos Stephen's grim face appeared. The lawman knelt. "Tuh gonna be all right?" Say, Link, I got news for yuh! Gonna-mighty, can yuh stand a terrible shock?"

Raw whitey was bringing his senses again under control and he stirred as if to rise. "The money?" he croaked. "Pay—Kilgo! Pieper—"

"Yes! It's been done, Link! Otto brought the cash and I paid him Oh, my dear!" Helen whispered, searching his wan countenance. "You —you'll be all right?"

He managed to nod. "Thanx!" he asked weakly. "The agreement?"

"It's all arranged, Link. Buss— She halted, and the long silent lashes fluttered down. Her Stetson, anxiously, exposed a mass of tumbling tawny hair that slid slowly down around over his girl's shoulder. "Buss —got hurt. Roper tried to kill you, and—"

"Buss interfered," came the vibrant voice of Waco Byrne. "He's in a bad way, Link." He glanced at his girl, who had drawn back and Hamilton's shoulders with his good right arm, "Can't you see I'm busy making love?"

"What? You—"

Slowly he thrust away the checklook he had produced. A peculiar expression crossed his face. Otto Pieper took up his reins, clucked to his mount, and started reluctantly away.

Fifty yards distant he succumbed to a violent urge to glance around. But the banker jerked quickly front again, his lips screwed in the oval of one hissing. A curt, reflective glance passed between girl and boy. Pieper grinned and shrugged his shoulders.

"Fleming's Folly. Huh!"

"Big Family" Law Has Been Introduced In Soviet Russia

Mothers who have had an union with more than six children, the youngest of which is under five, benefit by a new law introduced in the Soviet Union. A "big family" law to this effect was promulgated recently.

Divorced persons will have to pay up to 50 per cent. of their income for the support of their children, and divorce will be made more difficult by heavy taxation.

Many fathers, it was announced in Moscow, have refused to help support their children, began making payments, fearing the punishment of two years' imprisonment provided by the terms of this obligation.

The government will pay 2,000 rubles a year for five years after the birth of the seventh child, and a similar aid at the birth of each succeeding child, including the 10th After the 10,000 rubles are paid for each new baby. Russia's policy theory until Dr Beth found a method of preventing the birth of children against the will of mother and punished was seen in a sentence passed at Kiev Three former officials of the Tsar's and Soviet governments were sentenced to death for embezzling funds assigned for rest homes and the care of tuberculous children.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. It then decays to poisons. These are absorbed into your system. You get constipated. Stomach gas gets up into your body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks punk.

Don't just relieve constipation. Take pep to get at the cause. Try a purely vegetable liquid laxative that will help set an unloosed or sour-acting liver to pouring out two pounds of bile into the bowels. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse any cheap substitute.

Mysteries Easily Explained

Easter Island Is No Riddle To French Ethnologist

The three great "mysteries" of Easter Island are no riddle to Dr. Alfred Metraux, French ethnologist, who has joined the staff of the Bishop museum in Honolulu.

Although Metraux first went to Easter Island as a representative of the Paris Museum of Ethnology, he transferred his services to the Honolulu museum because of his conviction that only long residences in the South Seas would help him solve all of the problems of the origin of the Polynesians and various tribes of the Pacific.

As regards the immense statues on the seashore at Easter Island, Dr. Metraux declares there should be no mystery whatsoever. The statues, he points out, weigh only five or six tons.

He insists they could have been carved in the island quarries from which the stone originated and dragged to their present position by natives. Four hundred men could drag them with ropes of native weaving, he declares.

The second "mystery" which he has defined is that the inhabitants of Easter Island are the remnants of the people of the lost continent. He identifies them as being merely related to the Maori of New Zealand and a relatively few came to the island in the 12th century

Finally, the third "mystery" of no one knows whence the natives of the island is explained by Dr. Metraux who insists that it is not a true writing language but rather a device to aid the memory of the natives in reciting sacred legends.

No Longer A Theory

Existence Of Spin Of Light Has Been Proved

The "spin" of light, that is, the twisting force of which its rays are composed, which a scientist predicted never does before, is announced by Dr. Richard A Beth of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute Massachusetts. The spin of light, or its angular m-mentum means that each particle, or photon, of light is capable of exerting a speeding rifle bullet This spin had been only theory until Dr Beth found a method of proving its existence by measuring it by training a beam of light on a circular quartz plate so inch thick. Quartz and Rock Crystal thousandths of an inch thick.

Anxious To Secure Organ

Brantford Historical Society Wants Instrument Now in Montreal

An antique barrel organ, more than 150 years old, sought by the Brantford Historical Society, has been discovered in the Indian room of the Chateau de Ramezay in Montreal.

Brantford historians are anxious to secure the organ for their museum because it was presented by King George III. to Chief Tayendanega, of the Six Nations, who became known as Joseph Brant, after whom the city of Brantford has been named So anxious are they to gain possession of the music box that they have offered to even purchase it outright.

This is hardly possible, because the Chateau de Ramezay is not an antique shop where objects can be loaned or purchased instead it is a haven for historical objects.

The Brantford parties will have to address their pleas to the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal, and according to past records they are not considered generous in the habit of letting a valuable museum piece slip out of their hands

The organ stands about two feet high and resembles more a modern humidifier or an electric ironer than a musical instrument. It is well preserved in spite of the fact and when it has not rendered melodious tunes for more than a century, by pumping the bellows by hand, instead of using the handcrank. It is still possible to hear tunes, but these sound like the whistles of a steamship.

The name of the maker is completely erased, and on the cover-board are the titles of 32 tunes and hymns, the name of which have not been heard since the 17th century

Museum records show that the organ was presented to Chief Tayendanega or Joseph Brant by King George III., during his reign of 1760-1820. The exact date of the presentation is unknown, but it is a known fact that the celebrated chief died at the Six Nations in 1807 at the age of 65. There is a statue of him at Brantford.

The World's Progress

Has The Same Role Of Advance Been Made In Every Field Of Endeavour

Whether the same sets of growth has been registered by the English-speaking peoples in every field of human endeavor between the Britannia and the Queen Mary is a question that needs further study. For example a few months after Britannia smiled from England there was published in that country a book called "Nicholas Nickleby" The year after the Britannia arrived there a first volume of essays was published by a man named Dickens. Undoubtedly we must have better statistics than are now available before we can affirm that the two English epochs are of the same [illegible] turn out a couple of books from five to three hundred times as good.—New York Times

ALBERTA CROP REPORT

(Issued by Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, July 2, 1936.)

During the past two weeks, all dry land crops in the southern and east central areas have suffered a serious set back at a critical period because of persisting hot weather and high winds, no rains having occurred to relieve these distressful conditions. This is specially true of the territory from Medicine Hat north-west to Brooks and Gleichen north to the Bassingtown district, where hopes for even a fair crop are practically abandoned in the more seriously affected districts. A shortage of feed is fully anticipated. The whole of the south and east is badly in need of moisture. This applies particularly to stubbled in crops, pasture and range lands.

In the west-central area and the Edmonton zone, some severe thunder storms and scattered showers have occurred, which have materially benefited local. Though there is still a good reserve of subsoil moisture over a great deal of the country, many districts would welcome good rains or moisture needs. If weather continues dry, maturity of grain crops will be much hastened with some consequent reduction in yields.

The most favorable conditions obtain in the River District where general showers have been more general and development of all crops has continued normally. Showers in this area point toward an earlier harvest by at least one week than in 1935.

Summerfallowing

Summerfallowing in the south is almost completed, though delay to some extent by high winds and dry soil conditions is being caused. Rapid progress is being made in the centre and north where about 50% of fallowing has been done.

Haying

Haying in general in the south with the exception of some late alfalfa, is completed. Cutting has commenced in central districts where the crop is likely to be somewhat below normal. With favorable conditions during the next few days, the hay crop in the north will be quite up to average.

Grasshopper Menace

The warm dry conditions have hastened the grasshopper hatch, and in the southern districts they are actually Crop damage up to ten per cent has been suffered at some points but the situation over the province as a whole is quite reasonable control and no serious trouble is anticipated. Further supplies for mixing poisons are being distributed for the Department to safeguard the situation. Gophers are exceedingly numerous certain points in the south, and their control is becoming a problem in a few districts where they are causing some crop injury. Hail has occurred in the Lacombe and Sedgewick districts with only slight damage.

Live Stock Market

The live stock market has changed little during the past two weeks and the general condition is fair. Supplies are moderate. The hog market is brisk with an encouraging trend in prices. Though best markings in the cattle are higher than usual smaller, weighing from the north make it necessary apparent that our local cattle industry has been materially reduced since last season for lack of feed and a satisfactory outlet and this has been marketed from the south ranges.

Brief crop note for this district is as follows:

Dist. 1—Hunter—Vermilion — Hoppers active, mostly general during last two weeks and all crops making rapid growth; pastures. Portions in ground. Prospects good for fair to average crop.

Exports of Canadian live cattle to the British market totalled 13,871 head during 1935, up to June 18. The cattle export to the United States for the same period amounted to 1,179 head. The exports for the corresponding period of 1935 amounted to 4,317 to Great Britain and 9,272 to the United States.

BASEBALL TEAM WINS AT ELK POINT TOURNEY

Take Second Money at Mannville Sports on Saturday

The local senior baseball team triumphed twice last week, taking home the lion's share of the money from the Elk Point sports on Friday and carrying off second at Mannville on Saturday.

At Elk Point they trimmed Spedden in the 1st game 9 runs to 2, Geoff Grimscombe doing the pitching and Bill Mead receiving. Elk Point was knocked out in the second round 8-3, Jimmy White and Bill Mead being the battery. Rain interrupted proceedings at that point and the money was split between the three teams still in the running.

TRIM LAVOY AT MANNVILLE

Allin Robinson, veteran local hurler, made the imported Edmonton team pitching under Lavoy colours look sick in the opening game at Mannville on Saturday and Vermilion won 4-3. The game went two extra innings before the locals eked out a win. Fred Grimscombe relieved the veteran Allin in the 9th, sending the fanciest boy back west. Vermilion then won easily from Irma and were drawn against Mannville in the finals. Mannville had hitherto played one local game and then drew a bye into the finals. An imported pitcher proved too much for the Vermilion batters, who tired from previous exertions and they lost 5-1. James Danks did the hurling in the final game and Fred Grimscombe pitched against Irma.

By far the best game was the Vermilion Lavoy fracas which was played at 10 a.m. before a handful of fans.

NEIGHBORHOOD NARRATIVES

From the Neighborhood of the South-East

(June 21 to 30th)

Sunday afternoon saw a party of Woodvale ball fans and players set out jauntily in Porter's truck for Tolland. We were met by a group of Tolland young folk (where was that tall pitcher of the Tolland league?) and proceeded to choose up sides. Jupiter Pluvius decided however to voice disapproval of our fun and so — the first big drops hit us scattered for home. And let me tell you that truck load got wet! To cap it all some mysterious engine trouble kept us out in the showers and then the capricious vehicle about faced in the mud; so we backed home in flip style (thanks to Clarence's driving ability!) the rest of the way, and proceeded to borrow the Porter home hold completely out of a wardrobe. No rain checks were issued.

Although the stork was well-nabbed this spring, he had time to drop a pair of twin calves on to the Pannell farm, to cure of Dad's purebred strain born. In no underhanded sleight that you call them Jack and Jill, rather!

The Neighborhood notes with regret the death of J. V. Paul Witherly as the passing of a real old timer and pioneer of the Vermilion district in life and in the spirit of the genuine old time!

While we let go unchallenged it recent cannibalistic exchange of pleasantries as sure do not but over the statement of an Eastern business woman in the pages of a well known farm weekly to the effect that western young people are lacking in conservatory. We challenge any person who seemingly has the means to widespread travel at least, to spend five years during the exhibitions and lack of opportunity that most young westerners have seen challenge them to watch the decreasing ratio of enjoyment, challenge them to dip with tooth and nail under a 'cent hog or dog' policy, and then just see how much time and money they would have to spend on the latest complexion fad in order to inspire confidence in our selves and others. We are well all long to save the surface but the to factor remains Island Hill and others certainly needs attention first

CALL IS ISSUED FOR LIBERAL MEET IN AUGUST

May Reorganize Whole Set-Up of Liberal Organization in Province

Complete reorganization of the Liberal party in Alberta may follow a meeting which has been called for Red Deer at 10 o'clock on the morning of August 1 next.

Call for the meeting has gone out over the signature of J. Boyd McBride, secretary treasurer of the Provincial Liberal Association of Alberta, and the purposes for which it has been called are outlined as follows:

1.—Considering the formation of one Liberal organization for the whole of Alberta, which would probably be named, "The Alberta Liberal Association."

2.—Drafting a constitution for this proposed association.

3.—Fixing the date and place for the holding of a General Provincial Convention (if the executive so decides) to elect a permanent Liberal leader.

"The meeting is an important one and we are anxious to have as large an attendance of officers of the various constituency organizations as possible," said Mr. McBride today. "The chief reason we are sending out the notices well in advance of the meeting date, and we are contacting the presidents, secretaries and other members of the constituency executives wherever possible. I am anxious to get in touch with them all and would appreciate hearing from any who see this notice but who have not received word of the meeting."

It is anticipated that in addition to the officers, over 100 members of the executive as well as elected Liberal members and defeated candidates from all over Alberta will attend the meeting.

GRIZZLY BEAR MINUTES

A meeting of the council was held in the municipal office on Saturday, July 4th, everyone taking the chair at 11 a.m. with all councillors present. Minutes of the previous meeting and financial statement for June read, and on motion, adopted as read.

Mr. Maure of Western Steel Products and Mr. J. Hamilton waited on council. A letter was received from the University hospital, Edmonton advising that unless they had debts overpaid by the municipality of the Hunchak account, they would be compelled to pass same to their solicitor for collection. On report of investigation of this case, it was agreed not to pay. Mrs. Ida Larson waited on council with respect to her Mothers pension. Recommendations as to same to be undertaken at once. GOOD MINIMUM PRICE NEEDED

The setting of a fair minimum price for wheat by the Wheat Board is a matter of primary importance to Alberta and Western Canada. The Alberta Wheat Pool desires to record its opinion as will organized bodies who are interested in seeing this important branch adhere. It is also important that the Federal Government be impressed with the need for a fair minimum on the Wheat Board.

The experience of 1935-36 crop year shows that the setting of a reasonable minimum price provided a measure of protection for the wheat producer that could have obtained in no other way. The Alberta Wheat Pool recognizes that the farmer can only realize the advantages gained by providing sufficient power to make their influence felt. A drive to bring about lower wheat prices was frustrated by the Wheat Pools in organizing the act the Federal government last year. While the minimum has changed somewhat and prospects appear brighter for improved prices this year, we are impressed that the welfare of agriculture needs the steadying influence of a substantial minimum price in order to offer some may develop later on.

THE NATURAL PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

The federal government seems inclined to punish the Natural Products Marketing Act by giving it the cold shoulder. It appears to be opposed on political grounds by the present government. Tourist Trade Revenue

It would appear that provincial governments of the prairie provinces which neglect to spend sufficient money to maintain their highways in good condition are overlooking a good bet, if figures of tourist traffic from the other side of the international boundary into Canada are an index of what might be expected if highways were made attractive enough to draw the quota of this windfall which the western provinces might reasonably expect.

Recently published figures show that tourists entering Canada in 1935 went of them from the United States were responsible for a total expenditure of $302,314,000 in this country during their stay here. If an estimate published by the Dominion department of trade and commerce can be accepted as reasonably accurate.

This is an enormous revenue from such a source when it is remembered that the principal export industry of this agricultural country totalled in value $156,132,857 in the same year, this being the value placed on Canadian exports of wheat and wheat flour for 1935 by the External Trade branch of the Dominion bureau of statistics

The total tourist trade to Canada in 1935 was worth approximately $46 000 000 more to the country than the principal exported agricultural commodity and, when it is pointed out that a substantial proportion of tourist expenditure means clear profit, the value of the traffic in comparison is greater than even appears on the surface

But when one examines the comparative figures of income from tourist traffic by provinces it immediately apparent that the share derived by the prairie provinces of this newly developed source of wealth is but a drop in the bucket compared with the income enjoyed by some of the eastern provinces and British Columbia from the same source

For example figures compiled by the Saskatchewan Motor Club show that on an average expenditure basis, varied according to length of time of their visit, American tourists entering the province direct through ports of entry on the contiguous section of the international boundary line spent approximately $622 036 in Saskatchewan in 1935, to which is added another $652 670 as the estimated expenditure of those who entered the country through Manitoba and Alberta, and spent a portion of their time in Saskatchewan, making a total of $1 674,714 as Saskatchewan's share of this new industry -if it may be called such—last year

In other words all that Saskatchewan derived from this source of new wealth was less than one per cent. of the Dominion's total income from tourist traffic Without going into further detailed figures it may be said that the tourist revenues accruing to Alberta and Manitoba for the same period were relatively commensurate.

There are certain factors responsible for British Columbia and some of the eastern provinces, and particularly Ontario and Quebec, securing the great bulk of this traffic One of these is the fact that these provinces are relatively closer to the large American centres of population. This is the principal reason. Another is the greater proportion of paved roads on the Canadian side in those provinces directly linked with similar highways in the United States.

But even after allowing for the greater advantages enjoyed by these provinces mentioned, the fact still remains that the prairie provinces are not getting anything like their proper share of tourist traffic and that for them there are great potentialities yet undeveloped.

The relative severity of American tourists in the prairie provinces is partly a heritage of the comparatively recent days when visitors found it a frequent experience to have their cars bogged down in mud. Highways have been materially improved since that time but the stigma earned by prairie roads in those days has by no means been lived down yet This coupled with the difficulty of financing maintenance of a great mileage of gravelled highways during the past decade since recent depression years has had the effect of keeping away from the prairie provinces a good many who would have come, but for the skepticism grounded on former experiences.

This is a handicap which has to be overcome before the three western provinces can expect to share in full measure in the benefits of tourist traffic to which their natural advantages and beauties entitle them This can only be done by taking the necessary steps to see that the network of highways already built is maintained in good condition and that as far as possible the dust nuisance of the gravelled highways is eliminated or at least mitigated to a minimum coupled with judicious advertising.

A New Fire Extinguisher

Bomb That Puts Out Plane Demonstrated In Prague

There has recently been demonstrated in France by its three inventors, Messrs Bodnarli and Bigand Final of Italy and Herr Puschner of Austria, a bomb that kills fire

The demonstration was arranged in collaboration with the Strasbourg Fire Brigade, which built some stage property houses and set them alight. They also lighted petrol and rubber. The new bombs killed all these fires, and aroused great enthusiasm

The principle of the new bomb is the bursting out of a candle on a vast scale, the force of the explosion put out the fire The chemical substance they contain is quite harmless but it possesses the property of cooling the material it touches, and so prevents the debris from smouldering afterwards The effect of these bombs on blazing petrol in the open air was amazing.

Toc H Movement

Celebrated Its Coming Of Age At Convention In London

Toc H, a movement which began in a dugout in Poperinghe, on the Ypres road, in 1915, celebrated on Sunday, June 28, its coming-of-age in the Crystal Palace, London.

In an address at the ceremony of "lighting of lamps," the Duke of Kent traced the development of the movement through the empire from its humble beginning to the present stage, remarking that Canada now has 38 Toc H units and two houses, South Africa 87 units and one house, and Australia 140 units and one house.

He read a message from the king conveying h s sincere greetings and congratulations and recalling that from the earliest years of the movement he had presided practically every year at the lighting of the lamps of remembrance

The object of the Toc H movement are to "perpetuate the lessons of cheerful self-sacrifice and mutual help without barriers of class or creed, taught by the young men who had down their lives during the war." It takes its name from the lamp representing the keeping alive of "the ideals which they embodied").

Referring to the founder, "Tubby" Clayton—Rev. P. B. Clayton, founder of the movement—to the eastern Mediterranean, the duke said that he had visited Toc H in that part of the world, where many of its members are drawn from the army, navy and air force.

It approved the suggestion of the committee which submitted its report last March—that empire broadcasting services should be developed. It also held that the broadcasting of relay stations should be continued for another three years, the postmaster-general being empowered to take over the relays afterward.

The government also approved the recommendations of the departments and believed the responsible departments should take all possible steps to prevent the broadcasting of foreign advertisement programs

However, the government rejected the proposal of the broadcasting committee,

Home Markets For Local Produce

Assuming that a statement appearing recently in the daily press is correct, it seems an anomaly that a country so well equipped in many sections to produce wool as Canada should have to import that commodity from other countries.

Yet such apparently is the fact if credence can be given to the published assertion of L. R. McGregor of Toronto, Assistant Trade Commissioner for Australia to Canada when he said in a recent interview that "Canada is Australia's third best customer."

Not only are the western provinces well suited to wool production, both on large scale on the ranches in southern areas of Saskatchewan and Alberta and on all three provinces generally on smaller scale from farm flocks, but it is generally conceded by authorities that conditions in these provinces enable Western Canada to produce wool of quality equal to the best anywhere.

Time was, not much more than a decade ago, when a substantial percentage of Western Canadian fleeces were offered to the market in poor condition. The quality of much of the wool of the fleeces were grossly filled with burrs and generally speaking ill prepared for market requirements.

Since that time, however, producers have learned a great deal about the preparation of wool, and the standard of the product has been vastly improved, so much so, in fact, that an unkempt fleece in shipments for market from the prairies is a comparative rarity today.

The big cause is for confidence that Western Canada can produce sufficient quality wool for domestic requirements in addition to considerable quantities annually for export, and the producer is now complying with market requirements in the preparation of his product.

Why then, should it be necessary for Canada to import wool from other countries such as Australia and the Argentine? In the light of the facts, that appears an unanswerable question

Another anomalous factor in the Canadian wool industry is the fact that although Eastern Canadian woollen mills are equipped with machinery to produce tops (wool in a partly manufactured condition) the machines are standing idle while tops are being imported from Great Britain. The reason, it is explained, is because tops can be manufactured more cheaply in England than in Canada. This is a plausible explanation, though the situation is an unfortunate one for this country, when it is remembered that there are plenty of idle workmen still in the East.

The anomalous situation at the production end, however, is one which should lead to some inquiries in the hope that the cause for a country like Canada importing wool can be discovered and if feasible rectified.

The statement made by the assistant trade commissioner for Australia engenders the thought that possibly there is room for considerable development of the domestic market for other Western Canadian agricultural products and inspires the question whether everything that is possible is being done to ensure absorption of home products in local markets to the greatest possible extent. If other agricultural products are subjected to competition of similar imported commodities, it is a very unfortunate thing for the producers and especially in this the case at a time when farmers are turning to greater diversification because they are forced to it by the European wheat situation.

Perhaps the solution to the problem of finding wider domestic markets for home grown products lies in the industry, and this is a question worthy of investigation by farmer organizations, boards of trade and similar institutions and the governments.

There are men today working quietly in private laboratories seeking means to extract by-products from wheat and other agricultural products, of which Western Canada has a great abundance, capable of conversion into trade clothing and other necessaries and there is no doubt there is great opportunity for more research work along these lines.

The work of some of those men leads to the belief that therein may lie at least a partial solution of some of the problems mentioned, but it is stated and not without authority that the secret of the manufacture of some of these commodities on a commercially feasible basis, has been wrested from lost tubes and retorts and other paraphernalia of chemical and electrical engineering laboratories and that all that is needed to make them a marketable reality is the necessary capital Where this is to be found for such projects is another question

Great Change Taking Place In Women Dotting Away From Kitchen Work Survey Shows

The average American woman is drifting farther from her traditional place in the kitchen, according to a survey made by Quaker Oats, nationally scientific fraternity for women at the University of Pittsburg.

The scientific co-ed came to their conclusions while studying problems encountered in a quest of employment. Their detailed survey report seemed an effort to clarify and classify the many-sided difficulties in job-seeking and their relationship with the university graduate.

Interviews, letters and telephone calls to and from a thousand personnel directors of business organizations and public institutions revealed that many positions are waiting for trained women.

Opportunities are available, it was found, in a wide variety of business, educational and scientific spheres. Almost every branch of city, state and federal departments indicated that women, especially those trained in science, are needed.

The positions enumerated included almost every phase of activity except that centred by the kitchen. Even in the field of dietetics, it was indicated, is facing highly uncertain times.

Tragedy In Northern Seas

Russian Scientists Succumb To Cold And Hardships

Twenty-year-old Ian Krukhoff related the story of a grim voyage through the Kara and Ice seas and the White sea with a cargo of 10 land men.

Krukhoff was the lone survivor of a party of 12, all members of a scientific expedition. He reached safety in a lifeboat loaded with the bodies of 10 of the others. The 11th was not recovered.

The 12, headed by the hydrographer, G. Berdinoff, left the expedition's steamer Tersus on June 27 in a small boat to make a study of the depth of the sea between Archangel and Krasnoshelsk bay, on a route crossing the Arctic circle.

"After three days' work," said the youth, "we decided to return to the ship.

"We were caught by a storm. Mountainous waves capsized the boat and swept away the oars, the sail, equipment and our comrade Nikholai Fedoyeff. He died with our hands and our caps. It was horribly co'd. One after another, my companions died of exposure and exhaustion until I was left alone with 10 bodies.

"The sea grew rougher, and it was only by tying my right wrist to the oarlock that I was able to stick to the boat."

Extension Of Trade

Says Canada Should Co-operate With The South African Union

Canada's aim should be greater development of trade with Great Britain, Hon. G. H. Ferguson told the Call Birkenhead.

While advocating extension of trade, the former high commissioner to London said Canada can never follow a policy of isolation. Canada should co-operate with the rest of the world and the Dominion must look for advancement. Britain has the greatest market in the world and the Dominion must endeavor to get a constant trade nation once again and said the close connection between Canada and Great Britain has been of immense advantage. He paid tribute to the foresight and purpose of the fathers of confederation who were "not dreamers but practical builders."

Drouth Stricken Areas

To Expand Drouth Rehabilitation Work In The West

Under the inaugural extension of drouth-stricken areas in Western Canada the Dominion government has decided to expand its drouth rehabilitation work in the west.

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, announced that applications would be given farmers in the digging of "dugouts" or reservoirs of 1,000 gallons or more. Financial assistance will now be given to all water conservation projects.

Provision of a systematic to dugouts in three cents per cubic yard of dirt moved up to a maximum of $80. In all cases the government's chief engineering advice and all assisted projects must be approved by engineers.

Assistance on the same basis is provided for the construction of small dams.

BATTLE RIVER U.F.A. CONVENTION PROCEEDINGS

PROSPERITY BONDS DISCUSSED BY HON. W. A. FALLOW

Meeting Here Last Friday

Corruption or ... be paid ... for in stamped scrip was discussed when Hon. W. A. Fallow, minister of public works, conferred with representatives of municipal districts in Alexandria and Vermilion constituencies.

The meetings were held in Vermilion and Kitscoty. Mr. Fallow was accompanied by Mr. Dorg. M.L.A. and Mr. McKenzie supervisor of government relief.

The municipalities agreed to supply Mr. Fallow with names of men who would work for scrip and to recommend foremen. It was indicated that about $50,000 in scrip would be ... relief to municipality to end the year.

It was announced that $2,500 in the scrip would be spent in Myrnam for the construction of a standard grade highway west from that town along the C.P.R. line, eventually to connect ... Edmonton.

Officials and members of the British Settlement association asked Mr. Fallow to urge the British government to assist British settlers brought here some years ago to return to the old country and to give financial aid to those who preserved to remain in Alberta. Mr. Fallow asked the association to submit a detailed brief on the matter.

The Battle River U.F.A. convention was held in the Fair Grounds at Vermilion on 6th, 7th and 8th of July. A variety program of business, sports and music was provided. The afternoon dance was good, representation coming ... from all parts of the constituency. At the opening of the convention the audience stood in silence for a minute in respect to the memory of their late president, Mr. Walter Skinner.

The chairman chosen was B.C. Leon of Edgerton with Allen Aitken of Meyerton and Andrew Wood of Riverton as assistants.

was Mrs. C. East, with Elmer Clay as assistant. Mayor Robinson of Vermilion gave an address of welcome which was appreciated. Every convenience had been made for the ... by the Board of Trade and others. After the usual committees were appointed the acting President, Mr. Leon gave his report. This was followed by the financial statement.

The afternoon was set aside for discussion of Provincial affairs and a courtesy invitation had been sent to the M.L.A.'s of Vermilion, Alexandra Wainwright and Ribstone to be present and address the convention. None of them, however, put in an appearance although the M.L.A. from Ribstone had expressed a willingness to be present if circumstances permitted. A very interesting discussion led by Mr. Cheeseman and Dr. Courales took place.

In the evening after a musical program, an open forum was staged with the object of getting the best ideas possible to solve the present crisis. The resolution debated was "Resolved that Prosperity Bonds are unnecessary in this Scientific Age". Those taking part were Van Allen and O'Connor (Liberal), Hains (Communist), Spencer and Simpson (U.F.A.), Sorvis (Farmers Unity League) and Morrison (Conservative). The Alberta Social Credit League sent a representative to speak for them, although they were invited to attend. Fifteen minutes was allowed each speaker and a rebuttal of five minutes was taken. Hains, Morrison, Spencer and O'Connor. After this questions were in order which continued until after 12 o'clock. The speakers addressed a crowded hall and were given the closest attention.

Tuesday morning was largely taken up by discussion of resolutions, some of which covered the following subjects: Organization, League of Nations, 1929 over-payment bonds, Wheat Pool advertising, War, and co-operation with other groups.

The officials were chosen just before lunch. They are, H. E. Spencer of Edgerton, President, H. C. Lees of Edgerton Vice-President, Directors are Jack McHugh of Minburn for the Vermilion constituency, Pete Ehses Amy for Alexandra, W. Reynolds of Heath for Wainwright, and A.L. Jamieson of Carr for Ribstone. Mrs. Reynolds, U.F.W.A. Director and Aubrey Reynolds, Junior Director, are ex officio on the board.

During the afternoon general discussion took place on improving the examination followed by a report on Federal affairs. M. D. ETHELWYN MINUTES

The minutes of the council of the M.D. Ethelwyn No. 912 held in the municipal office, Chauvonda, July 4 1936, with the following present. The Reeve, Mr. A.C.P. Jones, Deputy reeve, Mr. F. Gray and Councillors, Wood, Lawrence, Bykevich and Melnyk.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The council approved of the offer of Mr. Henry Lumley to purchase the S.W. 15-54-5 on the lease option plan. The municipality reserving 10 acres for a gravel pit.

The council authorized the payment of land taken for roadway on the S.E. 1-54-5 to the British Land Settlement Corp. amounting to $47.72.

The proposal of the Provincial government regarding road work to be paid entirely by Prosperity Bonds was discussed by the council. The council decided in favor of the scheme providing the district was in no way financially involved.

Letter from the Dept. of Lands and Mines advising the council that contract for the N.E. 11-53-4 had been cancelled.

A donation of $10.00 was given to the Vermilion Agricultural society to help finance the boy and girls camp held in connection with the Vermilion Fair.

Messrs. A.B. Wood and D.G. Lawrence were appointed inspectors for the Mothers' Allowance for the year 1936. Letter from Mr. W.J. Chester resigning the position of Auditor. Secretary was instructed to advertise in Edmonton Journal for application for the position.

Letter from the M.D. Ukraina asking road on the east side of 12 ... 7, 8, 9, was instructed to see that the road would be repaired as soon as possible. Letter from the Rev. P.C. Corbyn requesting that the municipality accept the transfer of the present cemetery located on the N.E. 16-55-5 in order that a board may be formed under the Cemetery Act. The request was accepted.

Several payments were passed and ordered paid. The council then adjourned to the call of the chairman.

SHEEP ON THE PRAIRIE FARM

(Experimental Farms Note)

It is well known that sheep are adapted to semi-arid conditions and that they will live on short dry pasture where cattle will lose weight in view of this fact, it would seem that in the drier sections of the prairie, a few sheep would profitably replace some of the cattle. Sheep will also do well in districts where rain is plentiful, provided they are not kept continually on low lying damp ground. They eat many weeds, lambs readily fatten on mixtures of oats and barley and weed seed and seeds will ... more after passing through a sheep's ... substances which entitle and keep ... not poisonous. Our ewe ... approximately as much as a half dozen sheep.

The lamb crop is the chief source of revenue, the wool clip usually taking care of the overhead. The lambs are born in the spring and sold in the fall only the breeding stock being carried through the winter. At the Dominion Experimental Station at Scott, Sask., lambs that have had a good start in the spring and fairly good pasture in summer have been fattened successfully on rape pasture ... on rape pasture without ...

Lambs fed grain while on rape pasture, gained more than twice as fast as a third lot of lambs on a full grain ration in a dry lot made considerably more profit. Lambs have been successfully experimented with bunting but rape was taken during the first few days to keep the lambs off the rape when it was wet with dew or rain. Rape for this purpose may either be seeded in rows while reasonably apart to cultivate between or in narrow rows with the regular grain drill seeder, but in either case the plants may well be from four to six inches apart. Rape may be seeded with oats if desired. There is less loss from trampling of the crop if there is room for the sheep to walk between the rows.

On the average farm a portion of the summer fallow land may be ... needed to rape and other ... suitable stock or sheep when the ... pasture because dry and short on the ... rape may be retained ... lambs ... at weaning time. INVESTIGATING RUMORS

We do not know what the town council is to discuss, personified in investigating street corner rumors as to what may or may not be taking place at the electric light and power plant. Has he there are conditions which should be rectified but it is noted no specific charge was made as far as known and it is felt that any such time as this was done the council might treat the situation as the gossip. At the same time it may have been the only means the council had of ascertaining the truthful matter of these rumors. If there are charges between councillors and citizens in the matter let them be brought out in the open and not left to circulate as rumors. If there are charges between councillors and the plant let them be brought out in the open and not left to circulate as rumors. If there are charges between councillors and the plant let them be brought out in the open and not left to circulate as rumors. The council will announce whether or not they will investigate the rumors going on around town so that the citizens may know whether they are to be investigated by the council or not. If the council does not investigate the rumors going on around town they will appear to be afraid to do so. Communist Party Decide To Teach The Three R's Without Any Frills

The Communist party has decided to change the schools of so-called advanced and scientific teaching methods and to restore the old-fashioned schoolmaster with complete and unhapsted authority

The teaching of pedology which is to be abolished and all published books on that theory will be criticized severely by the official press

The party edict followed upon a meeting of its central committee, where scientific chambers of children" were accused of instituting an imported bourgeois system dressed up in Marxian phraseology

A published statement charged the purpose of their tactics was to attempt to carry out the theory of higher and lower classes and races based on the fatalistic idea that the success of children depends upon biological and social factors, and their heritage

Under the pedological system, the statement said thousands of normal children have been classified as backward and segregated in special schools

These schools are to be reorganized with the old type pupils returned to schools for normal children

The practice of imposing "countless" examinations and examinations upon school children and their parents also is to be discontinued, the statement added

Cannot Identify Soldier

Efforts Of Doctors For Nineteen Years Are Unsuccessful

What may be the last attempt to establish the identity of the "living unknown soldier" who has baffled scientists since he was taken to Washington D C after the World War is to be made by three eminent French psychologists Nineteen years ago the man whose name was believed to be Mangin was found wandering in the streets of Lyons France, dressed in a doctor's uniform He knew nothing about himself or his doings and could not remember his name Mangin was sent to an asylum where he was questioned by famous doctors for year after year Never did they get a bare statement from him Meanwhile, men and women from all parts of France have claimed him as husband or father or brother More than 300 letters have been received trying to identify him, but without success

U.S. Drought Conditions

Underground Water Supplies Shown To Be Seriously Lowered

Reports that the drought and seriously depleted underground water table an important source of moisture, prompted the United States geological survey to begin an intensive study of fluctuations in the Dakotas Montana and Wyoming.

George Parrell, western regional A A A director said on his return to Washington from an inspection tour of the parched area, that there had been a very serious drop in the water table

"The drought while covering much smaller territory than in 1934," he said is far more dry resulting in a very serious drop in the water table Work projects for distressed farm labor contemplate a system of small dams which will do a lot of good in conserving surface water"

There were unconfirmed reports that over-pumping for drinking water and irrigation had sunk the water table below the point of capillary attraction to the root zone in some areas

Oscar Meinzer, the geological survey a authority on underground water supplies, said field men in the drought area had been instructed to co-operate with army engineers in checking fluctuations

Approximately 15 papers prepared on the subject for the American Geophysical Union he said had been sent to the government printing office They are expected to disclose whether past reversions may have to be constructed because of a decline in underground water supplies

Greetings From Namesake

Halifax, England, Sends Parchment Roll To Nova Scotia City

Greetings extended by the borough of Halifax, in the west riding of York, England, to Halifax, Nova Scotia were received in the council chamber recently.

Artistically executed on parchment, the scroll was protected by a cylindrical leather case, and was presented to Mayor Cragg.

The address came to this country aboard the giant liner Queen Mary.

FORMER CABINET MINISTER

Hon Peter Veniot, member of House of Commons, who died at his home in Bathurst, N B.

Although the Empire State Building juts nearly a quarter of a mile into the air, it can be swayed only one-tenth of an inch in the strongest wind that will normally blow in New York, which is a gale of 110 miles an hour.

May Sell Buckingham Palace

Offices And Business Premises Now Erected Royal Residence

Buckingham Palace, home of England's kings and queens for many years, may be sold as a building site for $10,000,000.

Valuers have surveyed the palace and its 40 acres of grounds, and, if it is decided to sell, part of the Mall or it will be preserved as a public pleasure ground. It is understand a city of London syndicate is interested in the scheme.

Owing to the changing character of the neighborhood, the possibility of giving up the palace as a royal residence first was considered by the late King George. He announced that he was agreeable to the sale of the site for building purposes.

It is known that the King prefers his present bachelor home at York House, St. James.

If Buckingham Palace is sold, the "Court of St. James" would once more become an accomplished fact, and not, as now, merely a courtesy term.

A new business centre in late years has grown up around Buckingham Palace. Many offices and business premises virtually encircle it. Grosvenor Place, Grosvenor Gardens and Victoria Street are commercial.

Artistically executed on parchment, the scroll was protected by a cylindrical leather case, and was presented to Mayor Cragg.

The address came to this country aboard the giant liner Queen Mary.

Potatoes From Prairies

Potatoes from the prairie provinces are being marketed in Montreal, the shipments being made by rail into the city, at prices ranging from high prices prevailing. Ninety-pound bags of whites from Alberta realized $1.65 or somewhat lower than the prices paid for Maritime stock.

Hindenburg's Trips

Comment in British Press Over Airship Crossing Great Britain

Flights of the German airship Hindenburg over strategic areas of Britain and Canada were the topic of anxious comment in the British press.

On each of its four voyages so far, the Daily Express said, the Hindenburg has chosen different routes to cross Great Britain. After leaving the industrial area of the Midlands she took the naval shipyards along the coast of the channel.

When it was in Canada on a recent trip, the Express continued, the ship hovered for quite some time over Prince Edward Island, and the ports of Saint John and Halifax. These two ports, it was pointed out, have the only ice-free harbors in the Canadian coast, and both have dry-dock facilities capable of accommodating warships.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

Golden text: He himself said, It is more blessed to give than to receive. Acts 20:35.

Lesson: Acts 4:32-35; 6:1-7; 9:36-43; 11:27-30; I Corinthians 8:1-9; I John 3:13-18.

Devotional reading: Psalm 112: 5-10.

Explanations And Comments

Sharing Possessions. Acts 4:32-35. Commenting upon verse 32, Dr. John Gardner tells us not since his true discipleship have the things more precious than gold had been committed to the care of the apostles. "It was the Gospel of the Resurrection, the Gospel of life, of pardon, peace and joy, the Gospel of power, and how they gave as well as other things."

Among the members of the early Christian church was the greatest unity of spirit and purpose; as the proverbial expression has it: they were of one heart and soul; not one of them said that aught of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things in common. Not one of them considered anything his personal property, they shared all they had with one another, as Moffatt's translation. The giving was not extensive or voluntary (Acts 5:4) each regarded his property as held in trust for others.

It is interesting to recall here what the apostles told the Emperor Constantine about the Christians of those days: "They care for the orphan from him who does him violence, and he who has given to him who has not, without grudging. And if there is a man among them who is poor or needy, and they have not abundance of necessaries, they fast two or three days that they may supply the needy with their necessary food."

Care For The Poor. Such among them, those who had lands or houses sold them and brought the amount received to the apostles for them to distribute. "Laid them at the apostles' feet" is a figure of speech common which doubtless arose from the oriental custom of laying a gift at the feet of kings; it meant that the money was left in the apostles' control.

"There shall come a time from out this noise of strife and groaning A brotherhood without a name to claim, A deeper equality of aim, postponing A selfish seeking to the general good, There shall come a time when each shall to another Be as Christ would have him—brother unto brother"

(Lewis Morris)

Construction Work

Over Nine Million Dollars Expended On New Buildings In 1934

Although construction work in Canada, as in other countries, has been in the doldrums in recent years, a statement just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows that in 1934, at the very ebb of the depression, expenditures on new dwellings in Canada amounted to $9,207,913. If most of this expenditure was on modest homes, with an average value of five thousand dollars, it would account for 1,840 homes, and if these homes were built on fifty-foot lots, on both sides of the street, they would form an avenue of new buildings nearly nine miles long. More than half of this avenue would be occupied by Ontario homes: Quebec would come next, and British Columbia, Alberta, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, New Brunswick, and Saskatchewan would follow in the order stated.

Of the different classes of construction work in Canada in the year under review, that on streets and highways was much the largest, amounting to over $9 million dollars. The extension of roads to welcome the tourist to Canada are among the results of annual expenditures of this nature. Public utility construction classifications were factories and warehouses, government and municipal buildings, and churches, church halls, and schools. The total expenditure on new construction was nine million dollars and well over 70 million dollars were spent on alterations and repairs.

Importance Of Gold Production

At Rate Of Increase, May Soon Surpass Agricultural Products In Value

Hope that in another five years Canada's annual gold production would reach $200,000,000 was expressed by Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion minister of mines, who, with Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of railways and canals, addressed the Sault Ste Marie board of trade on a trip to the mining areas at Michipicoten and Goudreau.

Gold production in Canada last year amounted to $116,000,000 said Mr Crerar, while total value of the nation's mineral production, including both base and precious metals, was $227,000,000

Mining development in Ontario is helping to bridge the gap between eastern and western Canada he said, after being visited by Prof H E Simpson, formerly chief ship of the Conservative party in the House of Commons, who said he thought agriculture first among Canadian industries, in another 10 or 15 years, or perhaps sooner, mineral production might surpass it, Mr Crerar said.

Italy's Policy in Ethiopia

Experts To Study The Resources Of The New Empire

Italy's policy in Ethiopia will be "not a rude rush but slow, steady, well-planned concentration," Count Guido Guiseppe Volpi, charged by Premier Mussolini with organizing branches of industries in large groups, including technical, scientific and practical experts, to study the resources of the new empire.

His principles will govern the development, Count Volpi said. They are:

"Adequate preparation in advance as officers and money will not be wasted. Private enterprise will be protected but there will be no [illegible] to be harum-a-scarum business men. No black army will be set up The natives will be needed as workmen The Italian race will be kept pure and every effort will be made to prevent the mingling of the whites and blacks"

Count Volpi saw economic possibilities in coffee, cotton, wood and minerals.

Long Distance Conversation

Kelvin Rogers Speaks From Philadelphia To His Father In Australia

Kelvin Rogers, three who came to Philadelphia from Australia to see his father, who is dying, sent his voice 9 000 miles by wireless recently to greet his father and his dog at home

Speaking over short wave he told his father listening 150 miles from Melbourne that he was a good boy. Then he let out a lusty "cooee" to greet his dog, Briar, in the downunder manner.

To prove that the nail was really out, it was dropped on a metal salt tray and the sound was heard in Australia.

A leader of men is one who sees which way the crowd is going and then steps in ahead

From the rear platform of the Canadian Pacific Railway's 50th anniversary train, The Dominion (upper oval) H. J. Main, general superintendent, Manitoba district, speaks into the microphone to the crowds assembled to cheer the jubilee event. With him are Mayor John Queen (left), Hon. John Bracken, premier of Manitoba, Mo Hector, W. J. Tupper, K.C., Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, who spoke in reply, and W. M. Neal, vice-president of the company's western lines. In giving the welcoming address, Mr. Main followed the precedent set 50 years ago, when the general superintendents met the steely pioneer train on its trans-Canada journey.

Below are hundreds assembled in the Sir William Whyte park, opposite the station at Winnipeg, where Premier Bracken gave a brief congratulatory address where the Countess of Dufferin, C.P.R. engine No. 1, now already wreathed in flowers, hauled the train. In the left foreground can be distinguished Mayor Queen, Mr Bracken, Mr Neal and the Lieutenant-Governor and three old-time railroaders: James Goodfellow, who drove the first Canadian Pacific train from Calgary to Winnipeg in 1886; J. St. Leger Maginn and Andrew Murdoch, in 1886 all of Winnipeg.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA CRAIG

CHAPTER I.

The noisy blare of Fifth Avenue traffic merged into the city's brassy, blatant symphony. Blasts of motor horns; the raucous cries of taxi drivers, the occasional shrill metallic whistle blasted by an Argus-eyed traffic officer; the rating and failing monotonous obligato of newsboys calling their wares; laughter, chatter, voices merging; that indescribable swaying hum—the blazing, living symposium of sound that is New York!

To one, half-hearing, it all had dissolved into the deep-throated tones of an organ. Paying—it was doing march. And each note that pealed out stabbed deeper into a heart already wounded, and finally burst almost to an unconsciousness of pain.

The girl in the smart black tailleur that spelled Paris, which close inspection would have shown had been too often brushed and pressed, stood before the great plate glass show window of a Fifth Avenue shop, gazing with rapt attention at the tableau that was so meticulously and elaborately presented there for the observation of scores strolling. Realistic-looking wasan manikins, tricked out in the latest fobbies, portrayed there the drama of every girl's soul —a wedding ceremony. The shining black beetles of crawling cars in the street behind her were succeeded by the swell of a wedding march, each note distinct, aching!

There was the bride, a glamorous figure in ivory satin and old point lace. Satin that gleamed like a shroud of moonlight and a moonglow about her slender grace. Lace like cobwebs spun from the froth of clouds, and orchid and snow She carried a bouquet of life-like flowers in prinky clasped hands, and a misty veil was adjusted to the illusion of tender white tropical moonbeams clouded her silky yellow hair and spread out behind her in the deep maroon velvet of the simulated church aisle carpet White satin ribbons had been attached as train pew to pew, added to the illusion.

There were bridesmaids, too, starkly colorful images with wide, slimy hats and molded chiffon velvet gowns in lovely pastels. There was a tiny flower girl in the act of flinging her posies in the path of the goddess in white satin. There was even, as the correct climax behind the bride, the matron of honor, on whose flaxen features there seemed to be engraved the sweet serenity of happy cynicism as she listened to the strains of the wedding march that were real alone to the girl outside the window

As the girl watched she appeared to nod and felt no longer one of the models on whom the deep wells of her eyes rested, while slender gloved hands clenched tightly at her sides. Indeed, had the painted eyes of the posed damsels been possessed of the power of sight they would have observed that she stared through them rather than at them, and that in the dark pools of her eyes were visions which were beyond their understanding And a symposium of pain and wretchedness

They would not have understood. Who would have quite understood the mystery of that girl's eyes as she stared at the manikins, hearing that muted music which pealed from a strange, grand song the song of Life and Love to which she must not listen?

For here was no young bride-to-be making mental notes for her own trousseau or wedding, picturing herself as the central figure of some such pageant as that enacted by the wax-works. It was doubtful if she even saw the exquisite lines of their flowing gowns, save subconsciously, as that strange wedding march music beat on her mental ears.

It was the theatrical spectacle as a whole, symbolizing as it did the very spirit of romance which must be forever denied to her, which held the girl entranced with a deadly fascination. She was transported mentally into a mad maze of thought which would have astounded and horrified the busy shoppers who jostled by her slim body, or those languid riders in the purring black beetle cars that thronged the avenue

Any other girl in all the world, watching that waxen tableau could have dreamed. Any other girl in all the world could not have been denied her. Any girl of whatever station of life might have gazed at that bridal procession, sighed over the beauty of it, closed her eyes and imagined herself stepping into the dainty satin slippers of the train goddess, and whispered ecstatically "Some day!" And some day there would be! Some day Life was like that. For any other girl in the world.

But Starr Ellison must remain aloof from all the natural desires of her sex, must put from her their dreams, their longings and ambitions for romance. She knew it, and the knowledge was a castigating, bitter ache that seared her soul to the very most depths. One stern, corroding thought dominated her life—the little of life which was left to her. An eleventh—a most modern Lorelei!

"Thou watchoth, and sleeping, slumbereth not. When weary, it is not tired; when frightened, it is not disturbed; but like a vivid flame and a burning torch it mounteth upward and secretly passeth through all. Whoso loveth knoweth the cry of this voice."

"That could be love!" The love she was never to know, must never know because of that relentless commandment. "Like a flame and a burning torch ." She came to them, but they were not the flame or the torch of love. They were burning out her life, sweeping back all hope that love should ever pass their blazing, consuming barrier to reach her. Never, never for Starr Ellison, in life, whose merciless commandment was "Thou Shalt Not Love"

The simpering waxen faces inside their glassed enclosure faded The bridal veil—a cloudiness of wedding pageantry blurred. Instead Starr saw herself, as she had stood but a few months before in a doctor's office. A new doctor he was, a man she had never seen before. He would tell her the truth. It was the truth she wanted.

The picture that came to her, spread out for her own memory, was unreal, as unreal as its present representation in the middle of a busy New York thoroughfare

It had not been like the usual doctor's office of shiningly white things that spoke of antiseptic and human life. It had been a cheerful place that spoke of life White he had sat there, patient and calm and open-of—death. Unreal, all of it .

She remembered the sun streaming through the long blue velvet drapes at the window It fell in laughing, golden patches across the Chinese blue of the rug. There had been a tree in the little patch of garden behind that office on the ground floor of the old brownstone brownstone and outside in its branches a bird had suddenly sung. As if he hasn't sounded burst with the gladness of being alive on this beautiful day Alive! How had that word sprung to her eyes? How vividly it had leaped from the doctor's lips, even though they had [illegible] uncertainly, as he had pronounced large tracts of [illegible] other [illegible] words to her—words that had [illegible] like a sentence from which there was no appeal.

"It isn't fair!"

She had forgotten where she was and that she had spoken aloud. Starr stood in the midst of the seething, busy city, and rallied against the fate which condemned her, and in her spirit, one alone from the [illegible] laughing, careless, unthinking things who unintentionally passed her by.

There was so much she wanted of life! She wanted life then! And love! With her father and John Lowing it was different They had already lived their lives, lived to the full, known all its joys, long before the curse had swooped down on them Neither of them were young, for Henry Ellison had been past forty when he had married, and Starr was only twenty now. Twenty! And her life, too, was spent, was over, without ever having been lived!

Twenty—and not once had she ever had a chance to live as youth of this modern day, her own day, lived, or known life. Since the day she was graduated from high school her life had been with his invalid father, followed his expeditions which were the breath and substance of his life. She had been his companion, prepared his notes, taken the place, with heartfelt earnestness of the secretary whose stability of the companion he had lost when his young wife had died in giving birth to Starr, who had been the inciting motive in that busy routine for love affairs, or anything of living — except dreams.

Starr had dreamed. That had been her life. Love she had dreamed of and longed for, but had never known. Love was a [illegible] waiting in the misty, unopened pages of her future. That name love that she had seen in the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

CANADA'S PLACE EIGHTH IN THE WORLD'S TRADE

OTTAWA — Figures compiled by Canadian Bureau of Statistics show that for the calendar year 1935 Canada stood in sixth place among the nations in total international trade rising from ninth place in 1933 and eighth in 1934. In exports alone Canada held fifth place, and in imports ninth.

In total trade Canada was preceded by the United Kingdom, the United States, Germany, France and Japan and followed by Belgium, the Netherlands and British India. In exports the United States took first place, being followed in order by the United Kingdom, Germany, France, Canada, Dutch Belgium, British India and Argentina. The nine leading importing countries were United Kingdom (a rise), the U.S., Germany, Japan, France, Netherlands, Italy, Belgium and Canada.

In 1929 Canada stood in fourth place in international trade during the following decade to fifth or sixth place, dropped to seventh in 1931 and 1932, to ninth in 1933, and then the improvement began.

Disastrous Fire At Islay

Afternoon Blaze Destroys Hardware Store and Livery Barn

$20,000.00 LOSS

An afternoon blaze wrought havoc in Islay Friday afternoon, when fanned by a high wind, it completely destroyed the Islay Livery barn owned by Neil McEachearn, and the store of the Islay Hardware Co., containing a $12,000 stock. The livery barn cost in the neighborhood of $5000.00 when new. The hardware store, owned by Darwin Houston with its stock was valued at $11,000. the latter was well insured but no insurance was carried on the barn.

The fire started in the south or east end of the barn and was quickly whipped through the whole of the long building spreading rapidly to the hardware store next door. For a time it was feared that the whole west side of the village was doomed and calls for help were sent to neighboring towns. As no water was available just the chemical was sent later from Vermilion. By strenuous efforts the fire was restricted to the two buildings and some sheds.

Miss Jean Mcwilliams of Berberis was a recent visitor at the home of Miss Jean Fyfe. Miss Mcwilliams attended the U.S.A. reunion in Vermilion also.

John Matte was in attendance at the U.S.A. Alumni reunion in Vermilion this week.

YOUNG LOCAL LAD HAS BICYCLE STOLEN

New Wheel Lifted from Front Verandah of Home

Bernard Cooper, 15-year-old son of V. H. Cooper of the standard staff, had the misfortune to have his bicycle stolen from the verandah of his home on the early hours of Monday morning this week. He had been in the habit of parking it there each night for a couple of weeks or so, and was unaware that it was missing until he went to get it on Monday morning. The bike was a brand new C.M. Clement bicycle, purchased from Cooper's only a few days previously. The bike was a 1936 model, the serial number of the frame was X 22471. Besides the loss of his bicycle, young Cooper will be unable to ride to work for a couple of weeks or more, as the insurance company will not replace the machine until a period of two weeks has elapsed.

Loans For Agriculture

Appropriate was the warning issued recently to investment companies and brokers by E. P. Creech, K.C., chairman of the Local Government Board of Saskatchewan when he told the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada in session at Jasper, Alberta, that they could not expect to be collectors alone but must be prepared to continue to loan money.

At the same time, according to press reports of the convention, Mr. Creech told the bond dealers that they "must be quick to offer concessions and help in debt adjustment if investors are to retain their status and the protection they now have"

It is generally well known that many of the loan companies, if not all of them, have shut down on loans in the prairie provinces and particularly in this province. Many of the loans that they have on their books are in default and prospects of repayment on maturing dates exceptionally good the mortgage companies are accepting a limited number of "risks" in the cities, but little if any loan money is available to the western farmers just now, no matter what their record, how good the security they have to offer or how excellent the character of the prospective borrower.

Thus the farmer and the agricultural industry generally in the west is in somewhat parlous condition when it comes to securing credit to make needed improvements or to carry on operations. It is true that there are governmental bonds to a staggering amount for the purpose of making agricultural loans but these institutions have either no money available or such a small amount in comparison with the needs of the day that they are obliged to restrict their activities to a few select loans

In the very few instances where mortgage corporations are prepared to advance money they are still insisting on a return of seven per cent. for their investment and this is a higher rate of interest than borrowers can afford to pay in the light of income from ordinary revenue sources

It is admitted, of course, that there are two sides to this story as with most stories. Loan company managers say that as custodians of private funds they cannot afford to loan money in the prairie provinces at the present time and particularly they cannot afford to run the risks of making loans in agricultural districts. They point to the past four years of combined general economic and agricultural depression, the latter resulting from drought, surplus stocks of wheat and low prices for agricultural produce as an excellent reason why they should keep their purse strings tightly drawn when the farmer asks for a loan.

But more particularly do they inveigh against what they regard as repressive legislation enacted by the provincial governments in the form of a potent reason for withholding credit from the farmers, legislation which has been placed on the statute books in the belief of the sponsors that they are protecting debtors at a time when they know not which way to turn to escape from almost intolerable burdens.

Possibly the loan companies themselves are not altogether without blame for this state of legislation in at least some instances. If Mr Creech's diagnosis of the cause of it is correct, for he is reported to have declared his belief that "one of the chief reasons for placing upon the statute books legislation which limits the rights of loan companies is to be found in the fact that some companies have adopted an attitude of drift and desire to wait until something turns up with the result that the debtor gets in touch with a member of the legislature and demands all sorts of drastic legislation against loan companies."

One cannot get away from the fact that in the past four or five years, because of depression, conditions under which loan companies operate have been allowed to run down at heels, due to the impossibility of renovating or replacing worn out equipment in anything like the degree necessary to enable them to operate on an economic scale or to provide new implements to meet changed methods necessitated by changing conditions.

Almost every farmer knows by experience that this is the case and that he is unable to secure the loans he requires to enable him to replace his worn out tools of his trade and to purchase new equipment necessary for economic operation, the day when he is going to be able to pay his past indebtedness is further deferred and the loan company and the farmer alike suffer as a result.

Since the entire western country is still largely dependent upon agriculture for its future and for its present welfare, it would appear to be good business for the loan companies to offer concessions in the matter of debt adjustment to a feasible limit and continue to loan money at a reasonable rate for agricultural purposes where the security is satisfactory. Such a course would appear to be in their own interests in the interests of the clients whom they represent, in the interests of the farmers and in the interests of the country to do so.

Park System In B.C.

Acres Of Show Gardens Being Planned For Province

Six million acres of show gardens are being planned for British Columbia. Provincial and federal ministers are putting their legislative heads together to push immediate development of scenic parks in the coast province Some are already well finished; others still a pencilled outline on the map.

Out of $2,000,000 expected to go into public works, a considerable lump will be used in grooming parks and building roads to make them easily accessible. The province, however, would hand over to the Dominion parks on which development has already started and concentrate upon new ventures, including the 2,000,000-acre tract named for Canada's governor-general

At present the province looks after five of its parks and has mapped out four more for development. The Dominion has four more, completing a chain of seven national parks—a park and garden for every inhabitant of British Columbia and more than half an acre for every person in the Dominion

The 972 square miles of Garibaldi Park will be brought closer to trunk highways with completion of a $4,000,000 suspension bridge spanning Burrard Inlet and joining Vancouver with its northern suburbs. Preliminary work on the giant bridge already has begun.

Up until now Garibaldi Park, cradled in the coast range, has been inaccessible to motorists. Game abounds in the mountains, glaciers in the Alpine lakes and on the slopes of one of the volcanic fountains that dot the park's area is a "ski-run."

The province is keeping Tweedsmuir Park for its own. This, a vast garden land of 5,000,000 acres, has rivers, mountains and lakes in largest of all. At present the undeveloped area is accessible by canada. Development of roads will be considered under a public works plan carried by provincial and federal governments.

Maple Syrup Crop

Quebec Produced Largest Quantity This Year Since 1922

One of Canada's foremost industries, the maple crop, this year reached the highest proportions since 1922, 1,831,620 gallons of syrup and 3,747,900 pounds of sugar, a major portion of which was shipped to the United States The largest crop since 1922, the maple sap produced a revenue of $2,827,800, as against $1,911,800 in 1934.

More than 60 per cent. of Quebec province's output is exported, much being bought by cigarette manufacturers in the United States, officials say. Montreal, French Canada's largest city, is experimenting on the possibility of using maple sap in the production of alcohol.

Request Cheese

More Than 25,000,000 Pounds Are Manufactured Annually

More than 25,000,000 pounds of Roquefort cheese are manufactured annually in the town of Roquefort, village. For more than 11 centuries this cheese has been manufactured in a commercial basis, but Roquefort cheese, itself, goes back even farther in history, as it is mentioned by Pliny the Elder, who wrote in the early decades of the Christian era.

More than 300,000 persons, working on 25,000 farms, are employed in the manufacture of this cheese, each farmer living directly from the cheese industry. Milk is contributed by 170,000 sheep, tended by 10,000 shepherds.

Servants Of English Earl Did Not Like His Democracy

Many years ago we used to correspond with Auberon Herbert, the son of the fourth Earl of Carnarvon, who, although a vigorous opponent of socialism, was one of the most democratic of aristocrats. He was so democratic that he insisted on his servants sitting at table with him and his wife. His servants disliked this arrangement so much that at the end of a week they gave him notice that they were going to quit this Argument.

This stunt was revealed by an official of an important bank, victimized by the perpetrators, who since have been arrested . . . Two partners, constantly operating a legitimate business, opened a check account and deposited $10,000. Within a few months they had increased the fund to $22,000, making the deposits in person, and getting to know the bank tellers . . . Then one partner then appeared, asking to cash a partnership check in the sum of $39,456.57. The teller recognized the signature, okayed it, and then—as is customary—used the tel-autograph to ascertain whether a sufficient balance was on hand.

Simultaneously, the other partner appeared at another teller's window, asking to cash a $29,456.57 check. This teller also used the telautograph, and the official upstairs wrote in reply: "Okay, okay. I told you it's okay. . . . The lors was more than $27,000.—New York Post.

Eliminate Fire Hazard

Automatic Extinguisher For Airplanes Has Been Perfected

Fire is to be banished from aviation, according to British experts who have been working for a long time on a new blaze-prevention system for airplanes. Reports received in London say an automatic fire-extinguishing arrangement has been perfected which makes it almost impossible for a machine to catch fire, either in the air or after impact with the ground. Extinguishers, installed in vital parts, on the gasoline tanks, with jets leading to the gasoline pipes, over the engines, in the passenger cabins spring-operated automatic nozzles, and on the fuselages, with spring-operated automatic nozzles which act if a bump exceeds the pressure at which the spring is set. Immediately liquid is sprayed even before fire can start and no flames can survive the action of this liquid.

Hypnotic Suggestion

Lecturer Claims It Is Wonderful Help In Dentistry

Students of the Royal Dental Hospital in London have had their teeth cracked, chipped, filled and extracted, all without anaesthetics—and all without pain. It's done by hypnotic suggestion.

"There is nothing mysterious about it," claims William Brevis, who is lecturing on "hypnotic dentistry" in several large London hospitals. "It is a perfectly natural process and is no way harmful.

"A suggestible patient—and 70 per cent. are—can be given such suggestions for anaesthesia and his own control to the forceps or drill. Sometimes I give him these suggestions for either at the time or afterwards"

Experience with 2,000 cases, he says, has convinced him that there are the possibilities for hypnotism in modern medicine are enormous.

Using New Ceremony

Dominions To Have Special Part In King's Coronation

The British Dominions will have a special part in the crowning of the King, a cable to the New York Times from London, said. It adds that following the coronation next May, King Edward VIII. will make a tour of the Dominions.

"When Edward is crowned in Westminster Abbey on May 12, 1387," it says, "Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand will receive positions in the ceremonies emphasizing their new importance as self-governing nations under the Statute of Westminster, enacted since the last coronation.

"In accordance with this statute, the King becomes not only ruler of the British Empire as a whole, but separately and distinctly King of the Dominions. A new ceremony will be prepared stressing this concept as of the King as the direct head of each Dominion. Through the Dominion Office conversations have reached an advanced stage regarding the exact part the Dominions will play. Youth reversing all the rule in this new form will be the prelude to a royal tour of the Dominions."

ROLLED NUT WAFERS

½ cup "Crown Brand" corn syrup
½ cup butter
1 cup brand flour
¼ cup sugar
½ cup chopped walnuts, or pecans

Heat the "Crown Brand" corn syrup to the boiling point, remove from heat and add butter. Then, slowly and stirring all the time, add the flour which has been mixed and sifted with the sugar. Now add the chopped nuts. Drop small portions from the tip of a spoon on a greased cookie sheet, 3 inches apart. Bake in a slow oven. These cookies can be rolled or just left plain.

Gliding in Stratosphere

Working On Anti-Fog Ray

Marconi Is Busy Trying To Perfect New Invention

Were Charles Darwin alive, he would not agree with the dissipation of the dank vapor which assails Great Britain mainly during cold weather, for the famous naturalist's delight of London was founded in a fog.

He gloried in its "grandeur", as he said, and always looked forward to wintering in the metropolis, attracted by the prospect of a smoky mist. Although the origin of the species of town fog is the deadly rascals, manager of ill health, the Victorians suffered these visitations with hope of a "cure"; but today scientists are having promising results.

Recently there have been many attempts to find the best method, and the outcome seems to be that future research will be centred around the aeroplane. The basis of experiments has been to spray chemicals down on the fog, and the mist will vanish if sufficient anti-fog mixture is used. Already good work has been made, but the drawbacks at present are the cost and lack of facilities, for a huge fleet of planes would be necessary to remove a yellow "pea-souper."

The most recent anti-fog development is based on the spray idea, however; in the midst of "war-ray" talk and the "mystery beam," which detects aircraft and hostile aircraft fifty miles away, comes the report that Marchese Marconi is perfecting a ray that will stop fog.

When, or whether, this ray will mature cannot be said; but it would seem that a definite fog-dispelling invention of wide application will be available. It may be a ray, a powder, or chemicals. Everything depends upon the scientists.

Economic Victory

Mussolini Pleased With Surrender Of Sanctioned Countries

Rome.—Premier Mussolini, addressing an enthusiastic crowd in the Piazza Venezia, said: "The white flag has been hoisted today on mercilessness bastions."

Lifting of sanctions against Italy, effective by League of Nations order, "represents the surrender of those who would deny us victory," he declared.

Smiling and gay, Il Duce asserted the "economic victory" was due to the Italian people, who, he said, were ready for every sacrifice.

The crowd responded en masse: "No, to you."

Premier Mussolini concluded by saying: "Justice and civilization triumphed in African and Europe."

Amid a fire-works ceremony in mark the end of sanctions, Mussolini moved into a period of intense collaboration with an Adriatic neighbor he once treated coolly—King Zog of Albania.

The King-Dictator of Albania and other nations which refrained from sanctions, Il Duce's Popolo d'Italia said: "The Italian people will not forget this."

ATTEMPT IS MADE TO ENDANGER LIFE OF KING EDWARD

London.—The stately pomp of a ceremonial military procession along Constitution hill was interrupted dramatically when a stocky, chubfaced man in his 30's crossed through the crowd and aimed a revolver at the king.

The revolver, which was loaded, was knocked out of the man's hand and fell in the roadway beneath the feet of the horse which His Majesty was riding.

While the man who held it was seized by police the king rode coolly ahead as if nothing had happened.

A woman in grey, whose name was not made public by the authorities, was the heroine of the occasion. She knocked the revolver out of the hand of the would-be assassant and sent it spinning to the ground.

Police closed in promptly and seized the man. He was identified as George Andrew McMahon, a Scotsman, about 34, who had lived in London for many years.

McMahon, described as a journalist, was arraigned in police court before Sir Rollo Campbell Grey. He was charged with unlawful possession of firearms with intent to endanger life, and remanded for eight days.

Reuters learned that McMahon's real name was Jerome Bannigan. He was born in Tyrone, Ireland, the agency added. His wife and two children live with his parents in the Govan district of Glasgow.

The whole incident was over so quickly few of the thousands in the crowd knew what had happened. But the story quickly spread and consternation was felt throughout London and the entire country. Newspaper extra editions were sold on crowds seeking to learn the latest details.

The king himself was the coolest person in the hectic excitement. He gazed steadfastly into the crowd as the point where the commotion occurred. When the revolver spun through the air and landed beneath his horse, he rode ahead.

McMahon was sentenced in a year's imprisonment in May of 1932 for allegedly libelling the police. But he won an appeal and the conviction was quashed. Until recently it was stated, he was editor of a paper called the "Human Gazette."

The apparent attempt on the king's life came just after the crowd-mad had passed under the Wellington arch at the top of Constitution hill. Nearby spectators heard a scuffle at the back of the crowd. Then a revolver, gleaming in the sunlight flashed through the air and fell to the ground beneath the feet of the king's horse.

SANCTIONS ON ITALY HEAVY LOSS TO BRITISH TRADE

London.—Sanctions cost Great Britain £4,000,000 ($20,000,000) worth of exports to Italy during the first half of the year, Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, told the House of Commons.

Reviewing Britain's trade position for the past year, the minister said that British exporters' hopes of increased trade were centred on expansion of trade with the empire and with the rest of the sterling area. World trade, he said, however, revealed encouraging features.

Runciman said he hoped the lost British export trade with Italy would be regained and told the house steps were being taken to get in close touch with the authorities in Rome in order that obstacles might be removed as soon as possible.

"There has been a year of marked progress in nearly all the principal industries, with the notable exception of coal and cotton," he said. "Progress has been especially good in those industries which supply the home market."

Improvement has been widespread and is best illustrated by the unemployment figures, he continued. Halfway receipts were nearly £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) higher in the first quarter of 1936, despite rural and coal competition. Besides this, he said, there was an increase in the postal receipts of £400,000 ($20,000,000).

Exports had increased during the period by £2,000,000 ($10,000,000) but imports had increased to an even greater degree, Runciman told the members.

There was no cause for alarm, he said, at the speed at which imports increased, provided that year by year they could be absorbed without undue strain on the exchequer and the goods were required for industries.

London.—Winston Churchill, who as first lord of the admiralty set the British fleet in motion in 1914, told a crowd at Epping:

"I wish to make it quite clear that the royal navy is adequate at the present time for any demand that may be made upon it.

"It is incomparably stronger than any combination of navies which could conceivably be formed against the states of Europe."

Lord Strickland, a native of Malta and owner of newspapers there, demanded in the house of lords that the government "let us have peace gas by the ton stored in Malta."

By this means, he declared, the Mediterranean is and would become a base "as strong in defence and counter-attack that there would be no war."

Premier King Officiates

Lays Corner Stone Of New French Legation In Ottawa

Ottawa.—Premier Mackenzie King laid the corner-stone of the new French legation here on Bastille day, July 14, the national holiday of France. It will stand on the high cliffs of the Ottawa river below the Chateau.

Representatives of foreign nations took part in the ceremony, which included an address by the French minister to Canada, referring to the many ties binding his country to Canada.

End Of Drouth

Chicago Man Predicts End Of Hot, Dry Weather

Chicago.—An immediate end to the drouth, with its crop ruin and threats of rising food prices, was forecast by the man who predicted the hot, dry weather six months before it arrived.

There would be "no more damage from drouth," he asserted, although it might take the country 10 days to accept the fact. By the end of the week, he added, there would be so much rain that "everyone is going to see that the drouth danger is ended."

The man was Selby Maxwell, astronomer-meteorologist, who said he had the good news in the wobblings of the moon.

Maxwell predicted the drouth's end in the same way he predicted with which he warned of its coming around Christmas time in 1935. At that time he planned to base his crop forecasting charts—based on the distance the moon wobbles in its orbit—a good year ahead.

That January and February would have heavy snow, and that drouth would develop during March, April and May and do its worst in June and July.

Guarantee Of Support

Withdrawal Of British Fleet From Mediterranean Is Questioned

London. — Withdrawal of certain units of the British fleet from the Mediterranean does not affect Britain's guarantee of support in the event of attack given to certain Mediterranean powers, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons

Eden referred to the "mutual assistance" agreements entered into by Great Britain, France, Yugoslavia and Greece when sanctions were being enforced against Italy and an Italian attack on the British fleet seemed possible.

The foreign secretary's statement was made in reply to a question by Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, who asked whether the withdrawal of fleet units affected the "staff plans" between the four countries for mutual support in the event of attack.

The French government, Eden said, regarded the mutual assurances exchanged between Britain and France as cancelled on the withdrawal of sanctions

Mander asked whether the other assurances remained in full force Eden replied that as regards the British assurances the position remained as outlined in his speech

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal, asked Yugoslavia and Greece disputed "

Eden: "I referred to my speech to your own agreement and not to that of other countries."

Inaugurating Air Service

Imperial Airways Directing Trips From Bermuda To New York

London—A weekly air service between Bermuda and New York will be inaugurated during the coming autumn, it has been learned

The service will be directed by Imperial Airways, subsidiary of the $12 capital grant of £4,500 (about $172,500), to provide a flying boat similar to the new type intended for main airline routes of the same company

Also there will be an annual maximum subsidy of £18,000 ($90,-000), to which the Bermuda government will contribute £3,500 ($18,-000), for five years. Otherwise the subsidies will be paid by the colonial office

U. S. IS AROUSED OVER LEAKAGE OF NAVAL SECRETS

Washington Admiral William H Standley, acting secretary of the United States navy, said espionage agents of foreign governments will make necessary a revision of confidential navy documents and instructions.

Standley made his statement at a press conference in which the arrest of John S. Farnsworth, former lieutenant-commander in the navy, on charges of selling confidential naval information to an agent of the imperial Japanese navy, was discussed

Confirming reports of increased espionage Standley said that "when there are increased naval activities, there is always an increased effort to obtain information

The navy has a building 79 new warships, many of new design

Major Geoffry St. Barbe, former Lieut commander John S Farnsworth, ex-navy ranger high lighted the opening of the trial on this the beginning of a wholesale round-up of foreign spies, it was believed Washington navy secrets to foreign powers.

THE VERMILION FAIR

For thirty one years Lloydminster, one of the Vermilion Agricultural Society's best given of their time and energy to the success of Vermilion's annual fair. This year's exhibition will surely uphold the high standard set by its thirty predecessors. Agriculture is the foundation of any community which may come to this province and to this district and the annual fair is the place where the agricultural achievements of the farmers in the district are brought together and shown to the public. This Fair is an agricultural show, a place for the best to exhibit, or to judge, in this area. Agriculture is the basic industry in this province and all of its activities are built on and to that development the Vermilion Fairs have for their purpose.

For the past several years, through the co-operation of the Provincial and Federal departments of Agriculture, the Fair has had a Boys' and Girls' Camp where the younger men and women may be gathered and receive instruction in the habits and methods of the best farmers. The Fair is the annual gathering place and meeting ground of the entire district. Its success depends on the unstinting co-operation in bringing producers, consumers and distributors together. Without the co-operation of the business men the Fair would be a failure. Without the co-operation of the farmers in bringing their products to the Fair, and by their presence, the Fair would be a failure. Without the co-operation of the women in the home and in the various activities, the Fair would be a failure. Without the co-operation of the children in their many contributions, the Fair would be a failure. Without the co-operation of the press in publicizing the Fair, it would be a failure. Without the co-operation of the directors, it would be a failure. The Fair is the result of the co-operation of all of these and it is the duty of all to support it.

Pioneer Of Western Canada

Oldest Man In Saskatchewan Dies At 106th Year

Murdoch McLean, Saskatchewan's oldest man died at the farm home of his son John, in Moosomin district Saturday July 11 in his 106th year. Born at Loch Tralie, Scotland, Feb. 20, 1831, he emigrated to Canada while still a young man. He married Annabel McKenzie 53 years ago and settled on the Loch district southeast of Moosomin, one year after his wedding. Thirteen years later he had all his possessions in a fire. Shortly after he retired and moved to Moosomin. Last year he and Mrs. McLean took up residence with their only son on his farm near Moosomin. Though his eyesight was failing and he failed in recent years he took a keen interest in national and local affairs up to the very end.

In the old land Mr McLean was a fisherman. Born during the reign of George IV, he lived during the reigns of William IV, Queen Victoria, Edward VII, George V and at the time of his death was a loyal subject of Edward VIII. He was a life-long adherent of the Presbyterian church and at the last election cast his vote for the Liberal party. He neither smoked nor drank.

Ministry Of Sports

National Sports May Be Under Government Supervision

An act to create in Canada a ministry of sports likely will be brought down at the next session of parliament, according to a statement by Hon. C. G. Power, minister of health.

The question of a national sports ministry or government supervision has been discussed at Ottawa for some time the minister said. It was first mentioned by Tommy Church, Toronto M.P., the idea presumably being born. Mr. Power said, by the success of Canada's Olympic hockey team at the winter Olympics.

Another Toronto member and a former Argonaut hockey star, Hugh Plaxton has a bill prepared for the next session, providing for an act of parliament bringing all amateur and professional sport under the ministry of health Mr Power stated.

Man Paid Back Money Which Lender Had Forgotten

Robert Sturgus, optician of Troy, New York, said his faith in humanity is justified. Nine years ago a man came into his business office and was fitted with glasses. Three weeks later he came back to borrow fifty dollars to get a friend out of jail. He proposed to repay the money "at the first opportunity."

Just recently a stranger walked into the store and told Sturgus, "I've come to pay you for the money I borrowed." It took a lot of explanation but finally Sturgus recalled the loan.

Assisting Nature

By JACK MINER

Jack Miner, the Canadian Naturalist, sets out in this article the fact that man has, "Dominion over all."

During the past year I have read a number of articles, both in magazines and newspapers, as well as many letters that have crossed my desk, on the subject of "Nature's Balance," decrying actions or systems on the part of man which the writers described as "Interfering with Nature", "Upsetting Nature's Balance," and so on. To all who adopt this attitude I should like to put myself on record to the effect that, personally, I am unable to credited balancing of Nature was left entirely with man, and that I believe in assisting Nature for the benefit of humanity God created everything, every thing, and then He created man "in His own likeness and gave him dominion over all": that is, as I understand it, the power and authority to manage everything here on earth

Look, for instance, at the animal world. Take the stock in the farmer's barnyard as example. Did God create the Jersey cow, and the Holstein, and the Hereford? No. He gave man the original stock and then God, through man's instrumentality, developed such a breed as the high cream content of their milk, some to produce the greatest quantity of meat that grow the best beef cattle All have been on the earth a long time, yet through their differences are the result of man's ingenuity. And I remember, man had to interfere with Nature to develop them

Much the same thing is true of the horses different strains being cultivated for particular purposes such as the Clydesdales and Percherons for heavy draught work and the blue-blooded descendants of several kinds of wild stock for speed.

Recently I was in some of the southern United States where the character of the farm work to be done is too heavy for the common mule yet where the animals must be warm to permit of the horse doing his best In order to get the combination, therefore, man has crossed the mule with our heavy horses and produced a beast that withstands the heat and is also strong enough for the work of filling the soil Yes, he has developed the mule. But God made the hicked and, so far as I know, has gone no further

In poultry, if you trace back the various species it is very easy to see that it is by our interference that man has developed the different breeds. Leghorns, Rhode Island Reds, Plymouth Rocks, and so on, some of which are particularly valuable as layers, and others as food. Other species existed before, but were nowhere nor less than the wild turkey, in size and improvement.

Seventy-five years ago our Canadian North West was grazed by millions of wild buffalo ('Bos bison). Then Canada's railway builders began to tap the value of the fertile soil, established a park where a herd was placed to preserve the species from extinction, slaughtered the great roaming herds until there was only a couple dozen, made it into one of the greatest wheat-fields, with towns and cities and stately governmental buildings dotted here and there. Was that Nature's original purpose? though, that in order to bring about this state of things, man had to "assist Nature" as some would call it

And speaking of wheat-fields, wheat has been grown in the Peace River country for centuries. Yet wheat, even as it was being grown in Canada in ordinary seasons, was subject to occasional weaknesses, it had to be planted in the fall and not always survived the severity of the western winter. It was left to producing at a standstill as seemed desirable: it did not mature rapidly enough always to escape the early Autumn frosts. Then came to our aid Marquis wheat, developed by Charles Saunders, now Sir Charles Saunders, cerealist, of Ottawa, and by study, experimentation and the rigid selection of choice grains, developed a wheat that could be planted in the spring, that would yield several bushels more per acre than had been the rule previously, that matured within a certain period of time, and that yet retained all its other qualities. We have today Marquis and the Garnet and other species of wheat, developed by man, God created the original, the germ; but man was given, and has used the power to develop, manage and control it.

Or if you will consider your flower garden, look at the iris. Gave gave to me in America a little, insignificant flower growing along the banks of streams, which we called, commonly, the "flag". From it man has developed irises that grow four or four feet in height, varied in color, and some giving out an exquisite fragrance But man had to interfere with Nature to accomplish this. Or take the rose. Did God create the American Beauty rose? No, He gave man the brains, and a little old wild rose which served as the germ to spread. Today through the efforts of outstanding botanists, man has given forth many kinds of rose fragrance, as the Creator intended it should be done.

But let us look at another side of the question At the same time that God created the little wild rose, He created also the Canadian Thistle. But He gave to man the brains and the means of controlling that also, so that they may be restricted from encroaching on the farm.

If you are raising poultry, or other kind like, you have to contend with hawks, owls, weasels and other vermin who begin to destroy and live on you, and you fail to take a gun and shoot these pests, then you are not using the brain God gave you.

As for me, I thank God for all he made, for the many materials He gave us with which to work: that He made us in His own likeness, after His own image, and endowed us with sufficient brains to develop these raw materials and keep on discovering and developing resources of us all the blessings He created.

Loafer Do Not Wear Hats In Hotel Dining Rooms

"You can't wear that hat here!" said the head waiter at one of London's most fashionable hotels. He pointed to a notice on the door, reputedly one of the best dressed women in Hollywood, looked up in astonishment. "Why not?" she demanded, hastily feeling the offending bonnet to find out if something had fallen off it. "It isn't done, over England," said the arbiter of decorum. "No hats in the dining room." "Well," she said, afterwards. "Hats are the rage for evening in America. They're bound to be here sooner or later." But Hedy had to take it off.

The Canada Year Book 1936

Deals With Every Phase Of The National Life Of The Dominion

The publication of the 1936 edition of the Canada Year Book is announced by the General Statistician Branch of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The Canada Year Book is the official statistical annual of the country and contains a thoroughly up-to-date account of the natural resources of the Dominion and their development, the history of the country, its institutions, its demography, the different branches of production, trade, transportation, finance, education, etc in brief, a comprehensive study within the limits of a single volume of the social and economic condition of the Dominion. The new edition has been thoroughly revised throughout and includes in all its chapters the latest information available up to the date of going to press.

The 1936 Canada Year Book extends to over 1,150 pages, dealing with every phase of the national life and many especially with those susceptible of statistical measurement. Attention may be called to some of the special features of the present volume. The statistical summary, included in the Introductory matter has been extended this year. A special article, "Canada on Wayfarer Ridge", prepared by Colonel A. Fortescue Duguid, D.S.O., M.C., R.C.A., Director of the Historical Section (G.S.) Department of National Defence, has been included in Chapter II. This is apropos in the year of the Coronation of Edward VIII and the official unveiling of the Vimy Memorial arranged to take place this month. New material on fertility of the human race, which we, Canadians, have added to Chapter V. Interfor as statistics are available, the immigration tables of Chapter VI. have been revised and brought up to date to facilitate international comparison. Statistics covering the construction industry in Canada have been made available in the Bureau recently, and are published for the first time in Chapter XV., amplifying the information on contracts awarded and building permits, statistics of which have appeared regularly in the past. The information in the Social Welfare Chapter (XVI.) has been revised by the inclusion of an abstract of the rules and quantum of relief in force in the various municipalities of the province. Old municipal taxation and the estimate of national wealth, 1933, with revised comparable figures for 1929—the latter giving a picture at the peak of domestic prosperity while the 1933 figures reflect the world-wide down of values resulting from the depression. Several of the statistical series in the Chapter XVII. have been broken by the creation of the Bank of Canada, but effects it will be some time before other series can be begun on the new basis, a comparable basis has been temporarily made. Improvement has also been effected in the presentation of the financial statistics of the provincially-controlled schools of Canada by the collection of data on a more comparable basis from all cities and towns not presented in Chapter XXV., Tables 8 and 9. Chapter XXVI. has been revised to include dealing with the public health activities of Dominion and of provincial health authorities and a brief sketch of the work and growth of the different classes of institutions in Canada have been included.

The death of His Majesty King George V. on Jan. 20, 1936, received with deep sorrow throughout the Empire and with world-wide regret and the succession of His Majesty Edward VIII. to the Throne, have been appropriately marked by the proclamation, as frontispiece, of the official photographs, obtained through His Majesty's kindness, respective court photographers.

The volume is illustrated by many maps and diagrams, and a list of these available data are everywhere indicated.

Owing to the urgent need for economy in the distribution of government publications, it has become necessary to make a charge to all individuals receiving the Canada Year Book. Persons requiring the Year Book may obtain from the King's Printer, Ottawa, on being the supply lasts, at the price of $1.50 which covers merely the cost of paper, printing and binding. By a special concession, ministers of religion, book-sellers and school teachers may obtain paper-bound copies at the nominal price of 50c

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION

Golden text: Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life. Revelation 2:10.

Lesson: Acts 7:54-8:4; 11 19-21; 26 9-11; I. Peter 4:12-19.

Devotional reading: I. Peter 1 3-9.

Explanations And Comments

The Martyrdom of Stephen," Acts 7 :50-8 1. Stephen was one of the seven deacons chosen to relieve the apostles of the task of ministering to the poor. Read in Acts 6:8 to 7:38 the story of his successful preaching, his enemies and his arrest, a description and its effect upon his enemies, his vision, his stoning and death

On the cross Jesus had cried, "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit," and Stephen, forgiving them, they know not what they do." So Stephen called upon the Lord saying, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," and "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." "What did God do for Stephen?" Dr Parker was asked and he replied, "He wrote that miracle of forgiveness in the spirit of the murderous man, God did more for Stephen than if he had sent a legion of angels to protect him from the ruffianism which wrought his death." When he was dying, he fell asleep, —a beautiful expression for "he died."

Christianity Spread by Persecution, Acts 8:1-4; 11 19-21; 26 9-11. "Stephen's martyrdom seems like the first taste of blood on a wild beast." Martin Conneta. A great persecution arose that day led by Paul who said words to the church, entered into every house and dragging out men and women committed them to prison. Compare his own confessional in Acts 22 19-21; Gal. 1:13-23; I. Cor. 15-9; Phil. 3:6; I. Tim 1 13 He thought then that he was doing right for the glory of the Christian, he tells us (read Acts 26:9-11), but that was not the end of the matter of his life.

All except the apostles were driven from Jerusalem by the persecution, and went throughout Judea and Samaria, and as far as Phoenicia and Cyprus and Antioch (Acts 11 19) preaching the word.

Philip's Work Meet Bearing Persecution, 1 Peter 4:12-16 Beloved, do not wonder at hard to endure a fierce trial, for it comes to prove you. Rejoice in so much as you are partaking of the sufferings of Christ's sufferings and glory "that glory which is surrounding you even now, though unseen by you. Be blessed are you when reproached for the name of Christ, because the Spirit (which is the Spirit of glory and the Spirit of God) rests upon you.

Canada, it was disclosed, will co-operate with the United States in the intensive observations of the upper air with a view to increasing accuracy of weather forecasts

Arrangements will be made from Fort Smith, N.W.T. on the Slave river Planes will carry observers who will work at altitudes of about 17 000 feet

The work will be under direction of Dr John Patterson Patterson, chief of the Dominion meteorological service, department of marine It is expected that observations will provide information adding to the safety of aircraft operation Farming Requires Ability!

Speaking in the House of Commons, Agnes MacPhail M.P., said "People think that any fool can farm. They think that all a farmer has to do is to scratch the earth and sow some seed. Actually a successful farmer must be a good administrator. He has to know everything. He must be a good horticulturist, & cerealist, and a stock breeder Running a farm is no job for an amateur.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
HERBERT HELM

Starr had not realized that her temperament would have been spoken about until the man's voice interrupted It was a crisp, pleasant voice, with a lazy, amused drawl to it She whirled around to face him, hands gripping her handbag tightly as she neared the door.

The man had detached himself from the careless crowds, and stood not far from her with his shoulder leaning against a corner of the show window frame. He was looking down on her with quizzical gray eyes that held a glint of humor in their depths. For that first startled moment Starr's composure was not filled with him. He was tall, handsome in a bronzed, broad-shouldered slim-waisted way. Starr felt vaguely that bespoke the owner's pride of its possession in its care. He wore dark, smartly tailored clothes which were unerringly placed in their category of good taste. Money, too, of course. That in the circumstances of the case to the air he breathed was in his slightly arrogant features, features which had chiseled lines of hardness to give him an air of interesting masterfulness.

The smile of her interest—or was it condescending?—amusement curved his lips more widely as he looked straight into Starr Ellison's upturned face, from which the eagerness of her passionate pies had not fled

"So you want to play, do you?" he repeated, with maddeningly slow emphasis

Starr could not understand why on the instant she was not annoyed at his intrusion, or his very appearent piing Such a short time ago the Starr Ellison she had always known would have thought furiously "Master" and one look would have been a crushing retort to him.

Today it did not matter Such things were of so small moment Nothing mattered, anyway Everything was an affair of relativity. Things were important only because of the bearing they had on your future. With barely six months to live, which could be considered practically no future at all, what did it matter what she might say or do? What anyone else in the world might say or do?

Even though she was surprised at herself, steadily Starr returned the contemplative scrutiny of the gray eyes that were eminently regarding her. She placed him. Readily. The man before her represented that gay, smart world she had never known, for which she had yearned—the other half of the world which knew how to play. He had taken advantage of the opportunity. He stood for all she had lost in life and could never hope to attain.

She cried out at him suddenly, her eyes blazing at him as though all of the woes, through him, hurling her defy to earth and heaven:

"Yes, if you must have it! More than anything else in this wide, wide world, I want to play!"

The smile in his eyes was taunting, his voice was gay, as he drawled:

"That, I should imagine, should be something not too hard to arrange—"

But, aghast at herself, Starr was backing away, long lashes dropped over her confused eyes. What had she done? Unnoticed she had come into a passerby. The gray-eyed man's hand went out to touch her arm.

"Wait a minute," he said. "We ought to talk this over a bit, don't you? There's no hurry ..." His smile was friendly. "The Arabs, you know, have a saying: 'What is there to hurry for?' We ought to be using the same way. Why should we try to pass one another? Let us enjoy today, for today we have decided come again ..." Of course this isn't Egypt, but—"

He stopped short at the look of blazing fury in the depths of the girl's dark, mysterious eyes. Her face was a flame at him.

"I hate Egypt!"

Then she was gone, flying up the avenue, leaving herself in the crowds, never looking back. Michael Fairborne stood staring after her. Then he grinned and shrugged as he lighted a cigarette and moved carelessly along the street.

"Seems to have dubbed my shot again, eh?" he murmured. Then he glanced along the street as he again sewing the black-eyed girl with the camelia skin. "Still, I'm wondering a little—"

CHAPTER II.

There was no good reason for Starr Ellison to be on Fifth Avenue that cheerful early Autumn mid-day Only that it was not Black Avenue Nor was there along it any employment office, wordlessly insisting on her need for job hunting in the nordidnest

After her visit to the doctor, with whose smiling assistance she had accidentally, left the greater part of her small remaining store of cash for the privilege of being told she had only six months more of life such small and distasteful matters as searching for a job appeared to be small moment. Especially when there were no jobs Why keep on looking for one by which she could merely keep the breath of life in her body for six months more? It hardly seemed worth while

Such thoughts were in Starr's mind as she fled along the street after her first impetuously stirred rebellion against Fate in the atmosphere of the prosperous Avenue Nevertheless, the mechanism functioned at the next corner and sought the Street made clamorous by the El overhead, and headed for the agencies which were on her list and not already tried that day. She couldn't be a quitter entirely, she supposed, even if she had no short a time to fight Work was most necessary at the moment Finally, for she had a most distasteful memory of her seance that morning with the keeper of her records, a dowdy, hopeless kind of place it was, but Mrs Maloney who kept it had made it quite plain to Miss Ellison that she had waited for her rent quite long enough, and that while she was right sorry that Miss Ellison couldn't get a job, there were plenty of other people in the same fix. After all, Mrs. Maloney's was not an eleemosynary institution. In other words, Mrs. Maloney had conveyed to Starr that if she was prepared to pay her three weeks' arrears of rent she could have her clothes. Otherwise—

Mone too pleasant a prospect, and it was beginning to look like a rough ride ahead for a girl who, at noon had in her purse only enough for lodging for a night, and that with where without baggage. Even if she were going to pass out in six months, in the meantime, she supposed, she would have to sleep somewhere

A wry smile crossed Starr Ellison's lips as she rushed along. She—she! —who didn't know where she was going to sleep that night, had been wasting her time on Fifth Avenue, rebelling against not having a taste of life. She had been wanting to play!

She didn't know that noon had come, and forgot that her breakfast had been a doughnut and a cup of coffee until she suddenly realized that the crowds who were jostling her, whirling her, were making their way into the rows of eating places that sat cheek by jowl along the cross street. She stopped still before one of them, drawn irresistibly by the sight of the good things to eat tantalizingly displayed. Another show window!

She forgot that she was hurrying to look for a job, forgot she had wanted to play, forgot even for that minute what that doctor had told her, as her eyes feasted at sight of the food, and then swept on further to the people at the tables. In her mind's eye the expression of looking upon some amazingly absorbing scene, but it was no more upon which she gazed than the vista of food and warmth that spread out in one of those restaurants which not long ago Miss Ellison, naturally, have bothered to give a passing glance.

Such prosperous looking business girls were having their luncheon near the window — a substantial meal, from a steak that was simply oozing butter gravy, new peas and the crispest looking salad.

Chicken Sexers

Japanese Experts Can Determine Sex Of Day Old Chicks

Although only 24 years old, Shogo Uyeda is one of the most accomplished chick-sexers, of whom there are said to be only 20 in all the world, six being Japanese trained in Canada.

During fulfilment of his three-month contract at Edmonton, he determined the sex of 150,000 day-old chicks.

So proficient is he that he can sex from 1,000 to 1,200 birds at the rate of 1,000 an hour.

Probably the outstanding feature in the growth of standards of sexing commercially by the Japanese experts in the Dominion, is the fact that the average standard required, 97 per cent. Mr. Uryu claims white students of the art have not yet been able to attain proficiency equalling this.

He explains it required five years study and after handling Japanese experts before he was "ready" to sell his services.

Mr. Uryu said this science beneficial in that they can eliminate cockerels from among baby chicks ordered, raising only the best pullets.

Work Faster Than Men

Monkeys Trained To Pick Coconuts In British Malaya

Monkeys are replacing men in coconut-pickers on plantations in Kelantan, British Malaya.

Trained to climb with a variety known as "broke", can pick nuts as fast as 1,000 a day. This greatly exceeds the output of a man.

A Malay keeper at the foot of a coconut palm sends the brok up with a trunk rope. The rope tied round the animal's waist. If the monkey attempts to pick a nut that looks too green, the rope is given a jerk that unceremoniously stirred it to come down to reap the nuts on another palm, the Malay given the rope to the monkey is weaned.

The broks are brought from Singapore, the centre of the animal trade in Malaya. They are very expensive, great patience and they are first taught to pick up nutshells off the ground.

A trained brok is of great value to an owner. He is let out on coconut days, and earns his keep many times over. Food is cheap in the tropics and the cost of feeding him each day is practically nothing.

Likes Canadian Kitchens

England Behind in That Respect States Woman From Wales

Kitchens of Canada and the United States had been a revelation to many country-women from across the seas, Mrs. Frank Cronham, of Wales a delegate to the recent convention in Toronto of the Associated Country Women of the World, commented as she passed through Montreal en route for her home.

Mrs. Cronham said that in English kitchens old pans and old ways were the rule, whereas in kitchens plaining was still too much "an idea only." "It is nonsense to say we have nothing to learn from other countries," she remarked.

"How would you like your egg served, sir?"

"Is there any difference in price?"

"None whatever, sir."

"Then serve it on a thick slice of ham."

The Big Nickel

Loonie Large On The Collection Plate, And As Is Common As Sin

"One of the hardest things the church has to face is the big silver dollar," Rt. Rev. John Lyons, lord bishop of Ontario, said at the unveiling of a tablet in St James Memorial hall at Joyceville, near Kingston, Ont

The big nickel is as widespread and as common as sin itself," he said. "It is often a matter of worship in the church service and I detect no money People contribute adequately without complaint to assessments but frequently these people fully realized the problems of the church, they would be of greater assistance."

Horseback Trail

Will Be 3,500 Miles Long, Extending From Canada To Mexico

Plans for a horseback Pacific coast trail, extending from Canada to Mexico, have been announced by the National Park Service

It will be 2,500 miles in length and will be continuous on all the higher mountain trails on the route. It also will connect all interesting national parks

Nearly all of the work is to be done by the C.C.C. and the trail is expected to be completed this year

Metal signs will mark the entire route for the benefit of horseback riders or hikers.

Little Helps For This Week

That good thing which was committed to thee, keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us. 2 Timothy 1 14

Oh! that the Comforter would come.
Nor visit as a transient guest.
But in me His constant home.
And keep possession of my breast!
My soul makes my soul His loved abode,
The temple of indwelling God

The real progress of your soul in the divine life is a tender plant. It requires stillness, meekness, and the unity of the heart totally given up to the unknown workings of the Spirit of God, which will do all His work in the calm soul that has no hunger or desire but to escape out of the mire of its earthly life into a life with God. It is not wise to yield to an eagerness of many things which although they seem innocent will divide and weaken the workings of the divine life within you.

Advance In Television

Expected To Be Offered To The Public By Next Year

Television seems certain to come out of its hiding place this summer A large-scale experimental broadcasting station is being constructed on top of the Empire State building in New York city, and official announcements from the Radio Corporation of America say that it will be ready for operation within a few months. R.C.A.'s chief rival, Farnsworth Television, whose system has been adopted for trial by the British and German governments and is now undergoing best constructions in those countries, is also showing great activity at its headquarters in Philadelphia. Both these systems employ the electrical-scanning principle, which practically renders obsolete all previous mechanical-scanning systems.

The Federal Communications Commission is now holding a series of hearings to establish uniform standards so that a given television receiving set will operate interchangably on either an R.C.A. or Farnsworth sending signal. Unlike sound broadcasting, in television any change in procedure will render useless existing receiving sets, so that any setting up of standards immediately "freezes" development of both sending and receiving while the standards remain in force

This is but one of the almost infinitely complicated technical problems that face television. Scientists agree that the development of television will be vastly slower than the development of sound broadcasting. So far, plans call for the distribution of only a limited number of receiving sets, to be given out by the television companies largely to their own staffs and used for experimental purposes

Television possibly will be offered to the general public next year. The size of the image developed by home receiving sets thus far is ten by fourteen inches New Republic, New York

Wrigley's Inaugurate Pension Plan

Company Contributes Nearly $100,000 To Start Plan For Employees

Over two hundred members of the Wm. Wrigley Jr. Co. Limited of Canada join with 3,000 employees of the company in the United States in a pension plan recently announced. The plan went into effect in Canada on July 1st, 1935.

Under the plan the amount of pensions depends on the workers' wages and the length of service with the Wrigley Company. Wrigley's have always been interested in the welfare and security of their employees and have always manifested the interest to the fullest extent.

In order to credit employees who have been with the company for many years before the start of the plan, Wrigley's have made a past contribution to the fund of almost $100,000 to cover these years of previous service. Thus any employee who has been with the Wrigley Company for 25 years and whose salary is now $200 a month, would have an annual pension of $80.50 a month

On the average, the company and the employees pay into the fund an equal amount each month The employees' contribution amounts to about four cents on every dollar earned. The retirement age is set at 65 years. Employees is entitled at 13 years above age 65. However in the event of death, or discontinuance in the employment of the Wrigley Company, or in the case of early retirement, employees may withdraw the funds which they have paid into the plans, plus interest compounded at 3% annually. Payments and pensions are all based on a percentage of wage multiplied by the number of years with the company

As an example for employees long with the company, a man who has now been with Wrigley's for 25 years earning a salary of $200 monthly, would if he continues with the company for twenty more years, earn a pension of $11190 per month And if he lives out the normal expectancy of 12 years he will have withdrawn a total of $15,840.00 although his contributions would amount to only $12,920.00.

That the Wrigley Company is acting in perfect good faith is evidenced by the tremendous amount of cash it has set aside in the fund in order to ensure fair treatment to old employees Fifty aware of the moral responsibility of the employer to life long employees Wrigley's have assumed the responsibility realizing that the welfare of the community is as important to corporations as it is to individuals

New War Weapon

British Have Devised Anti-Aircraft Gun With Eight Barrels

The British have devised an anti-aircraft gun, with eight barrels which can fire 1,000 shells a minute four miles high. It throws explosive shells, incendiary shells, tracer bullets and shrapnel. With this, it is claimed, a barrage can be set up in the sky through which please cannot pass. But there are many considerations. Shells must explode at the right height, they must explode in the right place, and it takes some moments for a shell to rise, the wind must be allowed for, and the plane is a moving object, which can rise higher, or drop lower, change direction at will, and is a difficult target to handle. The assurance in this case may rest on the fact of the gun being able to throw such a stream of shell into the air, that, altogether different from a few scattered shots, the plane is unable to judge which way to turn for escape, and falls a victim to the gunner. Whatever the gun must be allowed for, and the plane to be said, that it is infinitely superior to the old anti-aircraft gun, said is an instrument of defence.—Halifax Chronicle.

Goes To Italy

First U.S. Minister To Go To Rome Selected To Go To Rome

William Phillips, United States under-secretary of state, has been selected as the new ambassador to Rome by his country, Mr. Phillips was the first United States minister to Canada.

Mr. Phillips will face two distinct problems in his new appointment, it is said in diplomatic circles. First, and most direct, is the course of Italo-American relations complicated by the inability of the United States to recognize the conquest of Ethiopia. Considerable tension for some time to come is expected.

Secondly, and far greater importance, it is said however, is the problem of analyzing Italy's probable future course of action, and keeping the United States fully informed. For remote as Italy may seem from the United States, what course she pursues in Europe has a vital effect on affairs in the Far East, where the United States is directly concerned.

Some Cities Show Increase

But Building Permits Lower Than Same Period Last Year

Value of building permits in 56 Canadian cities was more than 10 per cent. lower last June than in June, 1935, the Dominion bureau of statistics reported recently. The value was $4,560,740, up $414,902 over the previous month but $536,115 below the level of June a year before.

The bureau said the value of the building authorized in the first six months of this year was $17,500,420, more than the $24,645,511 reported in the first half of January-June, 1935.

Cities reporting improvement over May, 1936 and June, 1935, were Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Vancouver, New Westminster and North Vancouver.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

AUGUST 2

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS

Golden text: They therefore that were scattered abroad went about preaching the word. Acts 8:4.

Lesson: Acts 8:5-40.

Devotional reading: Matthew 13: 18-9.

Explanations And Comments

The First African Convert, Acts 8:25-40. In the midst of his labors in Samaria, Philip was suddenly directed to leave that field and go South on the road that led from Jerusalem to Gaza. Our text says that an angel of the Lord gave him this commission, but this does not tell us who was the chosen messenger. "A vision, a dream, a human agent, some natural circumstance or instrument, all these are in Holy Scripture or in contemporary literature styled God's angels or messengers."

Philip obeyed the divine compulsion, and met a man of great authority, the treasurer of Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who was returning from Jerusalem where he had been to worship.

The Ethiopian was reading aloud, as was the way with orientals. Philip approached his chariot and said to him, "Understandest thou what thou readest?"

"How can I except some one guide me?" was the Ethiopian's answer to Philip's question, as he invited Philip to enter his chariot and sit with him. The passage which he was reading was Isaiah 53:7 and 8, and he asked, "I pray whom speaketh the prophet this?"

And Philip opened his mouth (this is a Hewbrew expression indicating that the words following were not spoken by chance but with definite aim or purpose), and beginning from this Scripture, preached unto him Jesus.

The Ethiopian asked to be baptized when they reached a pool, and Gentile and Negro though he was, Philip did so, and the Ethiopian went on his way rejoicing.

Philip went on to Azotus and then to Caesarea. As he passed through village after village he preached everywhere that "This Jesus is the Christ." Twenty years later he became to Caesarea and received a hearty welcome at Philip's house from Philip himself and from his four daughters who were active church workers there.

South African City Supplies Native Help Through Council

The City of Johannesburg, South Africa, has announced that it can supply native housewives with boy and janitresses to those who seek such help. At its Native Women's Hostel, Johannesburg, native girls can earn their living by doing laundry work or going to homes to do washing or housecleaning. To help them in their laundry enterprises the city has installed electric irons and a telephone.

Anything For Style

A young Canadian band visited London to spend a holiday with a relative.

His clothing being decidedly rustic in appearance, his host suggested that he should get a suit from a Fifth tailor, to which the young man agreed.

"What about a small deposit, sir?" asked the tailor, when measurements had been taken.

"Just as you like," replied the other; "put one in if they're fashionable."

A pair of shoes with feet in them used as a paper weight will, in time, ruin any business. Just bear in mind that you can't leave footprints on the minds of time sitting down.

Field Of Regulation Limited

Extract From Address By Minister Of Public Works And Highways Of Ontario, Before A Meeting Of Ontario Motor Leagues

"It is hard to conceive that from the safety point of view we can approach much nearer perfection in public control by statute and regulation. This field is positively limited. Human reflexes can only be slightly affected by public control. Sometimes I feel ashamed of the number of regulations we have, and I can tell you there is no more unpleasant part of my duties than the enforcement of them. The public, who have clamoured for enactment, invariably resent their enforcement. There is no doubt this Item contributing to public safety is of very limited effectiveness.

"The main and principal factor is good manners, and we seem to be extremely bad-mannered people. Added to this is the fact that a man may be a mild, inoffensive little fellow at home, soundly hen-pecked, with his sides well galled by the harness of domestic discipline. He creeps from his door in the morning, enters his car, surrounds himself with the beauty and luxury of modern coachwork, and immediately he becomes an emperor—that is, if his wife is not with him—and from that time onward, at least while he is in the car, he is continually making a nuisance of himself all day, until he arrives home in the evening, disembarks and becomes a normal person again. I want to say emphatically that that man is not the responsibility of my department. I have no more manners in a motor car, than I have in a street. That is the person the public has to deal with. His bad manners cause more accidents which are outside of law and regulation. He is not the problem of this department, and we might as well tell you frankly that we do not take any responsibility for him."

Japan's Cheap Textiles

Are Made Possible By Child Workers Working Small Pay

It is common knowledge that Japan is able to undersell the rest of the world in many things, especially in textiles, and an article in the Chicago Daily News by its correspondent in Japan, Frank Brothers, who recently toured a textile factory in Osaka, gives the reason.

Brothers walked through with the manager, seeing many hundreds of children, boys and girls, at work in what is supposed to be a model institution. As they walked along each child and woman paused to bow a sweeping reward to the guest. These children are taken from poor homes, mostly from small farms, and are apprenticed to the company for one year, the contract being renewable from time to time. This may be a blessing in disguise according to Japanese ideas, for hiring these child workers and keeping them under the domination of masters they are seldom allowed outside the factory except for occasional visit home—but even by comparison with men's wages which average about $18 a month—they pay is low. The dormitory children average about two and a half to three cents a day, plus their board. The wages of adult women are about six cents a day, including food.

The hours in the factory and at the labor in textile factories is female, it can readily been seen why Japan can undersell by more than the industry.- St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Valuable Military Asset

Powerful Underground Radio Station Being Built In Germany

An underground radio broadcasting station, only one of its kind and second only powerful in Europe, will be ready for use in Germany by 1937.

Strict secrecy veils the construction of this subterranean transmitter, which will replace the present Deutschlandsender. It is located northeast of Zeitgin, near Berlin, on the Elbe.

Invisible from the ground and with a transmitting power of 300 kilowatts, the station can be turned overnight into a tremendously valuable military asset, thus greatly aiding Germany in touch with the outside world in spite of any contrary outside efforts

It is assumed that underground aerials will be used, with which the German army experimented extensively during the world war

Railway Centenary

Celebrations In Montreal Mark 100 Years Of Progress

Canadian railways must keep step with mechanical developments like trucks, busses and aeroplanes or "become a gradually lessening influence in a field which for many years was peculiarly their own," Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of transport warned.

The transport minister joined with Premier Mackenzie King in congratulating the railways of Canada in completing 100 years of operations. Their messages were directed to celebrations in Montreal, marking the centenary of the first railway in Canada, which operated between La Prairie and St. Johns', Quebec.

On the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the establishment in Canada of transportation by rail, the prime minister's message read: "I desire to extend heartiest congratulations to the officials and men of the Canadian National Railways, within whose system is included the original line over which the first train in Canada made its journey, and my cordial greetings to all who are engaged in providing for the community safe and efficient railway service. During the century which has elapsed since the first train operated between La Prairie and St. Johns' the steam railway has played an essential and all important part both in the formation and in the development of our Dominion.

"I should like to avail myself of this centenary occasion to convey to the Canadian National and to the railways of Canada as a whole my best wishes for continued opportunities of national service and for their prosperity in the years that lie ahead."

The transport minister traced the development of railways in Canada from the 16 miles between La Prairie and St. Johns' now part of the Canadian National system, 100 years ago to 42,000 miles today.

Speeding Up Photos

Mobile Darkroom Aids Scotland Yard Experts In Tracing Clews

Scotland Yard's expert cameramen, who nowadays take numerous photographs at the scene of every big crime in the Metropolitan area, are looking forward to the delivery shortly of their new mobile darkroom.

The introduction of this vehicle—literally a laboratory on wheels—promises a big saving of time in the early stages of crime detection

At present photographers are rushed to the scene of a crime as quickly as possible, but their plates have to be brought back to Scotland Yard for developing. At times the pictures prove unsatisfactory and more have to be taken often when on-the-spot conditions have changed considerably

Photographers using the new van, therefore, will not only save time, but also achieve better results

In addition to the dark room, with its tanks and other developing apparatus, the van will also have a finger-print compartment, in which experts will be able to examine finger-prints as soon as they are found and determine without delay whether they are of value.

The vehicle is being given an extra strong chassis to fit it for travel over rough ground, while a special driving system will enable the photographic experts to work while the van is in motion

Germany's Latest Novelty

Glass Tr[illegible]rs Good

A "glass" train is the latest novelty for travellers on German railways. The upper part of the train is almost entirely of glass and offers passengers an uninterrupted view of the surrounding scenery. In hilly and mountainous country the improvement is especially attractive. It will be put into regular service for special excursions from Munich to a different destination each day. The "Glass Train" is the third important break-away from conventional train design that German engineers have made recently - the other two being steam lined locomotives and double-decker carriages.

"I do a great deal of my thinking while playing golf," says a clergyman, and only the fact that he is a clergyman prevents him from putting his thoughts into words.

Heliogabalus, Roman emperor, gave dinners that required extensive travelling by the guests. The diners had to go to a different part of the city for each course

"They'll spoil their figures," Starr told herself, and knew she was laughing at herself, too. She was getting a lot for just such a meal. Starr Ellison—hungry!

She turned sharply when some one touched her arm, looked up to see a girl of about her own age standing timidly before her. She was not well dressed as Starr was, with her carefully preserved tailleur. There had been a pitiful attempt to "look nice," Starr could see that, but how could any girl look nice in clothing that was frayed almost past the wearing point? And her cheeks were gaunt, pale beneath the spots of rouge

"I—I hope you won't mind me—speaking to you, Miss," she said huskily. "But I've been looking for somebody— Oh, I can't stand it any longer—being so hungry. . . I've been looking and looking for a job, but—" Her voice broke. The palsette girl did not need to explain to Starr that she was not a regular feminine panhandler.

The irony of it! But of course, Starr understood at once. She had forgotten, for the time being that to the casual observer she still looked like a girl used to ermines and orchids.

"I'm so sorry!" she said impotently. "But you see, I can't—" The dying of hope in the girl's eyes, her painful confusion, were too much. "Wait a minute!" she said, as her gloved hands fumbled at her purse, a smart looking purse that she had picked up in Cairo on that last dreadful trip and was using now because it was the last one left. She took a quick inventory of its contents, and handed the girl a quarter. That would leave—she didn't dare count the thin wad of dollar bills. But they would keep her going for a night or two.

The girl was choking her thanks "You won't be sorry," she said as she took the coin with trembling fingers. "And I hope you'll never know, Miss—"

Starr was not hearing her. She was hastily hailing a taxi from the cross street—toward the employment agencies. She dared not look back at the girl. She was sure she might be herself before long unless. . .

"There may be worse things in the world than," she was momentarily musing, "than having only six months to live."

Yet, and there was a bit of comfort in the thought that there might be better things than having an opportunity to go back to Mrs. Mahoney's rooming house that night—even if she could—that unspeakably drab place. Would she ever forget, could she, how often she had sat on the edge of her narrow, rickety bed back there, staring at the faded wall paper, the bureau with the ragged-edged scarf that was never clean, the dingy, hopeless-looking unquilted curtains, and thought—of so much that she wanted to forget and could not?

Determinedly Starr marched on and turned down Sixth Avenue toward the agencies. What she could she do? That was all that life had resolved itself into in the past weeks, making the rounds of them day after day, or hoping, desperately, that the next day a job would materialize or something happen to break her luck, the luck that had pursued her so long, ever since her father had been established with taking her father from her, but finally had broken his last rest, too, until now his daughter was—his doomed daughter! was here alone in a strange town. She was trying to make a go of what was left of her own life, far from their friends in the home town where Starr had feared some of them might insist on helping her. That would have been the last straw. Starr's pride had come to her rescue.

It was the same old story, and the afternoon had almost slipped by, with Starr feeling that her feet must be all blisters, when she reached the place she always left to the last—the worst agency of them all. Even in her desperation she hesitated in the dingy doorway, staring at the dirty arrow that pointed her way upward to the place from which she cringed. But taking her courage in her hands, she climbed the steps and went into the dusty, half-lighted room where the same henna blonde woman, with apparently the same mascara and heavy rouge she had worn since the first day Starr had been here, sat behind the clutter-ed desk. The woman glanced up at her and shook her head.

"Nothin'," she said wearily, and then her shoulders shrugged. "Tryin' you're wastin' your time and mine comin' here, dearie. We—"

"But there must be something—surely!" Starr burst out desperately. "I told you I was a good secretary—I am!—but I'll do anything. Anything!"

The woman's rouged lips were smiling oddly as she glanced up at the girl, that glance calculating, as if wondering just how much this well dressed girl, of so obviously a different type to those to whom she was accustomed, meant what she said. Starr's pale face was flushed, eager.

"Well, whyn't you say so, in the first place?" the woman asked, her tone a bit exasperated. "Here I been thinkin' maybe you was a little too nice for our jobs, dearie, and—"

"But I told you!" Starr cut in, and felt her body shiver at the calculating glance and the queer laugh of the agency woman. The latter lowered her voice to say:

"You're a swell lookin' skirt, at that, an' say, baby, I got just the job. . . Swell guy, but he's plenty particular the kind we send him—Oh, you know, I reckon. . . . You'd have to be real sweet and nice to him, dearie, and—"

"Of course, I'd be nice!" Starr said breathlessly. "I never thought of being—"

The woman laughed again, her eyes crinkling in the rouged crevasse of her cheeks, then slowly drew to-ward her a card index file.

"The fee," she said, "will be a little steep, maybe, but y' understand, a girl don't get a chance at bein' nice to big shots that'll maybe plaster her with jools, do they like her, spee, and five from men are cheap at the price, see? But you got to be nice. . . ."

It was not so much the woman's words as her smirk. Suddenly Starr understood. She thought she was going to be sick. She didn't know what to say. But the five dollars answered the question for her.

"I—I haven't that much with me," she stammered. "I—I'll be back tomorrow."

"Okay, baby, an' you'll be gettin' a bargain."

Starr didn't know how she got out of the place, nor how far she had walked in an effort to get away from it until she saw the shrubbery of Central Park looming up ahead. She still felt nauseated. She, Starr Ellison, must have fallen pretty low. To be offered a job like that! She hadn't thought it possible And yet—and yet. . . . What difference did it make, after all, except that she still had pride enough to resent the thought that she looked like a girl who would even for a minute consider anything of that kind?

Still— What that agency woman had held out had offered her life, of a sort, and a chance to play. She hadn't thought of it in that light, though. She would not. Just be-fore noon she had run across a man she felt sure, if she had given him the slightest chance, would have offered her a little chance to play. She had seen it in the eyes of that man before the Fifth Avenue show window. If she had waited just a minute more, the invitation would have been on his lips. But she had run away. Now she was offered, instead of a chance to play with a man of her own sort—

She shivered at the thought and hurried on through the lower edge of the Park. She had no desire right now to see people of leisure driving by in their rich limousines.

For the second time that day she found herself on Fifth Avenue, presently, but it was far to the north of the shopping district. The high stone wall of the Park was on one side of her, the trees shading the sidewalk from the rich autumnal sun with shades. Across the street, loomed tall sky scrapers where people lived in luxury—rooms apartments. Sitting care roped by, arguing the right of way to the street with the topheavy green busses. She walked on northward.

There was no scheme in Starr's mind, only the desire to keep on walking. Certainly there was nothing better to do, and the Avenue was a pleasant place; always interesting.

She had walked farther than she realized, and was almost opposite the Metropolitan Museum when she saw him.

There was no mistaking him, the bronzed good looks of the man who had spoken to her that noon, the set of his dark head on his wide shoulders, and the careless almost disinterested way, certain of his own masterfulness, with which he drove his maroon roadster.

He saw her at almost the exact moment she saw him. There was surprise in his eyes the moment their eyes met over the heads of the scattered walkers and the cars between. Then he grinned, straight at her, and Starr caught her breath. He was slowing down! Stopping at the next corner! He would be coming back!

How queer people could be, she thought in a breath. There, just a moment before, she had been regretting having run away from him, and right this minute there was no other thought in her mind but of doing the same thing again. Just why, she had no idea. She only knew that she must. On that single thought she had whirled as quickly as the car was brought almost to a stop. She sped up the steps of the Museum and into the safety of its mass of rooms, with a grateful sigh at recognition of the fact that she was not waiting day and the chains were down.

She was wondering if he really meant to, when she was cut as she wound her way through room after room, familiar with them all from many visits with her father. She smiled a little. Well, he would have a nice chase.

But Michael Fairbourne was doing no chasing. At the curb where he had pulled up for a moment, he sat and looked back. The girl was nowhere in sight. It did not occur to him she could have gone into the Museum. Nobody he had ever known ever had. His brow was wrinkled thoughtfully as he chewed on his lips for a moment, reflectively. He took off his hat and ran his fingers through his thick hair.

"Umm, funny. . . . And almost like a hunch, but I'm not going chasing after her. . . . If I see that girl again one more time, I'm going to take a shot in the dark. . . . Just the type—just the type."

Amateur Receives Praise

Garage Mechanic Astronomer Makes His Fifth Star Discovery

The mechanic's workbench was visible late in July was discovered by a "grunge mechanic astronomer" in Cairo on that "dreadful night."

Other facts concerning Leslie Peltiers were discovered recently at Fayetteville, N.Y., where Harlow Shapley, discoverer of the "Shapley Centre" of the Milky Way and director of the Harvard observatory, said he is the best equipped astronomical laboratories in the world.

Shapley, world scientist praised "backyard" astronomers for contributing much to the development of knowledge. "And I hope you'll never know. Mine—"

Peltiers is the champion variable star observer of the country," he said. "Today in the United States he has discovered in his cornfield observatory outside the village of Delaware."

"They say the rabbits can jump through the cracks between the boards of the fences, but I took his telescope He prefers overalls to academic robes, and is called the garage mechanic astronomer.

"An amateur, but in his early 30's he already has discovered and accurately reported five hitherto unknown asteroids. Such a man looks like a first-rate astronomer to many, how ever simple his instruments and methods."

Not as spectacular as Halley's comet, Peltiers' is the only variable star that progresses now living will ever see, Dr. Shapley explained

Gasoline From Coal

A Chain Of Plants May Be Erected In England

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin speaking before 5,000 persons at Cardiff, Wales, envisaged a chain of great plants for making gasoline from coal, safe from attack

He cited the $27,000,000 plant of Imperial Chemical Industries at Billingham-on-Tees, which produces daily 120,000 gallons of gasoline from coal

"If the results continue as expected," he said, "it is up to the government to build sure-fire plants more free from possible attack in case of war."

Used To Be Different

Only Three Lawyers Are Prime Ministers In Canada

There was a time when there were more lawyers holding the position of provincial premier than members of any other profession Just now it is very different. There are only three lawyer Prime Ministers in the provinces and they are all in the Maritimes. Ontario has a farmer as premier and the Conservatives in that province have chosen a farmer to lead them Quebec has its first farmer premier though he probably should be classed as a farmer-teacher, ranking in that category along with Mr Bracken, Manitoba's premier, who was a teacher in an agricultural college before he went into politics Saskatchewan has an insurance man as premier who succeeded a farmer, Mr Gardiner, and Alberta's Mr Aberhart was a school teacher and he followed a farmer Mr Reid Mr Patullo of British Columbia isn't a lawyer but he followed a farmer, Mr Tolmie and the C.C.F. leader in that province is a clergyman and the new Conservative leader a physician Lethbridge Herald

Little Helps For This Week

Say not then, I will hide myself from the Lord, I shall not be remembered among so many people; for what is my soul among such an infinite number of creatures? Ecc. 16 17.

Among so many, can He care?
Can special love be everywhere?
A myriad homes, a myriad ways,
And I, oh? eye over every place?
I asked; and then I thought of this—
In just that very place of His
Where He hath put and keepeth you,
God hath no other thing to do.

Give free play to those instincts of the heart which believe that the Creator must care for the creatures He has made, and that the only real effective care for them must be that which takes each of them into His love, and knowing it separately surrounds it with His separate sympathy There is no one Life Giver loses out of His sight, not one who sins so that He casts it away, not one who is not so no Him that whatever touches them touches Him with sorrow or with joy

PREMIER ABERHART AND SOCIAL CREDIT STILL GREAT ATTRACTION

Premier Aberhart continues to be a draw by himself when it comes to attracting crowds. About one-year ago today he visited Vermilion and chose to greet people gathered in the town to hear him speak. On Tuesday evening he again spoke in Vermilion and although the meeting was not given great publicity a crowd conservatively estimated at three-over filled the building and out on to the lawns. The reception given the premier and the Hon W.A. Fallow was more enthusiastic than ever before.

WHAT TO THINK — WHAT to THINK

The drubbing in being a news paper man is in reading the reports in different papers regarding the same incident. For instance a week or so ago one Edmonton paper carried a large headline that four unemployed single men had marched on and taken possession of the parliament building. The second Edmonton daily had a small item which stated that 2 or single unemployed had stagged a march on the Social Credit strong hold. Then only last Monday in in reporting the same utterances the Edmonton headline told us that we were going to have dividends within six weeks our publisher was quickly disposed however on opening the other paper and seeing that the time had been changed to twelve months.

AUBURNDALE

The Auburndale Young People's Society held a successful picnic at Sunset Lake on Wednesday, July 22, when there was fine and plenty of drink and ice cream was consumed. People were present from every district and all had a fine time. Mrs. Mrs. Sedgwick was present although she is still not able to walk without the aid of a crutch and cane, caused by the accident, when Mr. Frank Eyles a little boy recently got his thumb almost torn off by having a car door jammed on it. He was taken immediately to the doctor in Vermilion and it is expected that his thumb will heal up all right.

The Auburn Local 317 Group held a meeting on Monday night July 1 at Auburndale School. The next local meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Sedgwick on Monday evening August 3. A cordial welcome.

WEDDING BELLS

Le ROSSIGNOL—McKELVEY

A pretty wedding took place at Holy Name church Vermilion on Monday morning July 27 when Bridget Anne, daughter of the late James McKelvey and Mrs. Mary McKelvey of Vermilion, was solemnly united in Alexander Joseph Le Rossignol of Wainwright. After the nuptial mass, celebrated by Very Rev. J. O'Sullivan, the happy bride and groom and immediate friends of the family adjourned to the former's home where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served. The bride looked charming in a gown of shimmering white satin cut on princess lines, she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses. She was assisted at the altar by Miss Marie Antoine, who looked very dainty in a long white organdie dress with corsage hat to match. Mr Jim McKelvey, brother of the bride acted as best man. Mr and Mrs Le Rossignol leave in a few days for Wainwright where they will take up their residence.

ISLAND HILL

The hail storm which passed over a couple of miles north of here on the 26th wreaked terrible havoc. There is not even a piece of straw on some of the farms to tell the tale. Coming as it did after the destruction of the crop through rust last fall, the prospect for many of the sufferers during the coming winter is not a rosy one. One man whose crop was badly stricken area told us the hail was as large as a hen egg.

A branch of the British Settlers will be established at Campbell Lake school tonight 2nd at 2 p.m. Secretary Boyd please note.

It we mistake not we spied a member of the Standard staff picking berries during the week close to the hotel here. We hope, as a result he will not encounter any unpleasant dreams.

The greatest compliment ever paid us was when a hospital nurse (who is personally unknown to us) told a patient that she enjoyed reading the Island Hill notes and there and then ordered her Standard and read aloud the items. What these notes are we enjoyed by a lady who performs such onerous duties and thinks our attempts at writing will soothe the nerves of the sick, it is indeed, with all due modesty, a compliment of a distinct nature

Wild Berries, Island Hill, could only make you dream of wild men and wild deeds if you "hooked upon the wine when it was red" but as for us when we went to gather in the raisins, walnuts and marbles fell here last week but did no damage to speak of but the drought is taking its toll. A rain soon would still not be too late to bring crops along.

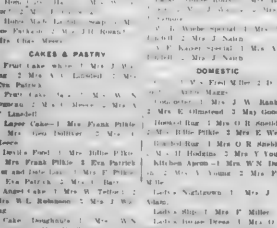
Welcome First Train



The cowcatcher of old Engine 374 makes a fitting platform for those occupants of the 50's attending ladies of 1936 who took part in the pageant at Port Moody, July 3, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the first C P R train from Montreal to the Pacific. The old engine, driven by the original engineer, hauled into Port Moody a string of six old-style wooden cars handled by the original conductor of the first train in a colorful re-enactment of the event. More than 2000 visitors including scores of rail veterans in service in '86, flocked to Port Moody for the celebration

Railway Pioneers' Hopes far Exceeded

Speaking at the recent celebration of Canada's railway centenary held at St. Johns, Quebec, the southern terminus of the Champlain and St. Lawrence, the first line in the Dominion, R. J. Hungerford, president of the Canadian National Railways, outlined the tremendous strides that had been made in railroading since he entered the railway business 30 years ago.

"I can see in all truth that which has been accomplished has truly avoided the vision of the pioneers", Mr. Hungerford said. "Those who planned the Champlain and St. Lawrence and brought it into being no matter how optimistic they might have been, could hardly have foreseen what a mighty instrument of national welfare the railway was to be in Canada. The railway has been, and is the mightiest single factor in the welding together of Canada and in the preservation of it as a nation. It is a mighty friend of the people. When this railway was converted there was likewise brought into being that chain of communications which led to the formation of the Canadian National Railways, with its ten lines to every province of the Dominion. It is the son of the Canadian National Railways, the largest railway system on the North American continent, still to be in the vanguard of progress; to be a worthy instrument in the development of this great nation."

At the ceremony at St. Johns, Quebec, commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the operation of the first Canadian passenger train, a full-sized model of the "Dorchester", the first Canadian engine, was shown in comparison with one of the new 6400 type of the Canadian National Railways, the largest streamlined locomotive in the world. The "Dorchester", with tender, was 21 feet long; the 6400, with tender, 94 feet 7½ inches. The 6400 is longer than the entire passenger train of 1836.

PRINTERS' INK AND THE FARM

Canada is the chief producer of carbon black in the British Empire and most of the carbon mentioned in statistics as originating in Empire countries is in fact from Canada. This carbon is used for many purposes but principally in the printers' ink trade and the rubber industry. Printers' ink of other days, in common with many other important articles of commerce, was originally an agricultural product. The inks of the very early ages were prepared from charcoal or soot mixed with gum, glue, or varnish, much after the style of the ordinary black printing ink of today, the principal constituent of which are lampblack and thick linseed oil.

The Chinese ascribe the invention of ink to Tien Tcheo who lived before 2697 B. C. and 2597 B. C., and it is known that the finest egyptians prepared and used inks at a very early date. An Egyptian document—a papyrus—with written characters of the date 2560 B. C. is still in existence. Two thousand years later the emperor of Greece and of Rome were wont to sign their decrees with a flourish in purple ink. Since those days the numbers and kinds of ink have been many, and today some of the finest inks in the world are manufactured in Canada

The Basic National Problem

Much food for thought is contained in a series of interviews with leading citizens scattered across the Dominion on the subject of the five major national problems which Canada faces and must solve if recovery from depression conditions is to be placed on a firm foundation and made permanent, published by the Financial Post during the spring months and later reproduced in booklet form.

The interviewed comprised leaders of great Canadian industries, public men, heads of public utilities, professors and students of economics, leaders in women's work, prominent journalists, heads of corporations and other well known figures in the national realm, both east and west. They were asked to name what they considered the five major problems facing the country today and their proposed solutions.

A symposium of these interviews reveals a lack of unanimity, not only as to what courses should be pursued to consolidate the gains which have been made in the last 18 months to ensure a continued upward trend of the national economic graph, but even as to what constitute the paramount problems which have to be faced and dealt with.

Among the interviewed over 20 issues were raised as the most important impediments to speedy or even complete recovery but it is interesting to note that nearly one half rated relief and unemployment as the No. 1 problem, with the necessity of developing new markets for Canadian commodities and services both abroad and at home ranking in second place. From that point a wider divergence of opinion as to order of priority is noted on such problems as currency, cost of government, the railway and transportation problem, Canada's international relationships, immigration, public health matters, a renaissance of Christian principles and business and moral ethics and so on.

While the predicament of the agricultural industry and the plight of the farmer is given some attention by a number of the interviewed leaders, including some of the Eastern industrial magnates, it is somewhat disappointing to find that its position as the keystone of the economic arch is not given the recognition that it deserves and it remains for Professor J. E. Lattimer of Macdonald College P.Q. to give the question its proper relationship to the entire national outlook.

Professor Lattimer lists the five major problems of the country as: 1. National credit; 2. Unbalanced budgets; 3. Transportation; 4. Unemployment and Relief, 5. Agriculture, but not necessarily in that order of importance for he says in words worthy of repetition:

"Few discussions leave agriculture entirely off the list. Yet so seldom has the position of agriculture in the national economy been discussed in detail that further treatment of this point is warranted. Another reason why agriculture should be treated in some detail is that the problems enumerated are interdependent. The persistence of depression and unemployment is the discrepancy which has prevailed for six years between the prices of farm products and the prices of some other goods resulting in the low purchasing power of farmers in general. Hence it is almost correct to say that instead of five major problems there is only one, out of which the four others emerge.

"Depressions do not cause unemployment. It is unemployment which causes depressions. This is bound to occur in an era of specialization. Production by specialists increases volume in the aggregate but necessitates a price relationship allowing goods to be exchanged in such quantities that employment is general.

"When farming is prosperous employment is more regular, relief lists have ceased to trade more briskly, freight movements are increased, more money is in circulation and the national credit more secure. This is the way that the other four problems emerge from the chief difficulty—the discrepancy in prices."

While few in Western Canada will disagree with the foregoing conclusions as enunciated by the professor of agricultural economics at Macdonald College, Prof. Lattimer stops on more debatable ground when he offers for his solution for the problem. He points out there are two alternatives, one, to raise the prices of farm products to the level of other goods and the other, by reduction of the prices of those goods now on the high level in order to lower the cost of farm products and thus enable these goods to compete in the export market," and forthwith pronounces himself in favor of the last course.

In thus committing himself the worthy professor is allying himself with the "low price" school of thought, a theory which, whether economically sound or not, is not by any means a popular conception of the solution of this problem and moreover a solution which is open to question.

Boston Boy: "That's hard to say, Sir. According to my latest school tests, I have a psychological age of 11 and a mental age of 10. Antisocially, I'm 7; mentally, I'm 9. But I suppose you refer to my chronological age. That's 8 - but nobody pays any attention to that these days."

Vimy Memorial

Million Dollar Edifice Designed By Canadian Artist

The great white expanse of the Vimy Ridge battlefield, with its pylons rearing 138 feet into the sky, has been designed by Walter Allward, Canadian sculptor-architect, who sketched it in two minutes on the back of an envelope 14 years ago and brought it to completion with the aid of thousands of skilled artisans.

Huge blocks of stone, on which are enrolled the names of 11,000 Canadian soldiers still listed as "missing" were brought from the ancient quarry of Spalato, Yugoslavia, where the Roman emperor Diocletian ordained materials for building his palaces in 300 A.D.

The main figure of the memorial is an allegorical group depicting "Canada mourning her dead," while eight figures representing Truth, Justice, Knowledge, Peace and the Spirit of Sacrifice stand guard over the sloping mound burned in the surrounding battle fields of 30 years ago.

Higher Education is Placed Within Reach of All

Some things they do better in Japan. One is public education. There the best education is given by the public authorities. The son of the rich man and the son of the poor man mingle. "Who go'es must by the contest you can figure out for yourself. University fees amount to £12 a year. That places higher education within the range of all. The Japanese workman beats his English competitor with something besides low wages. Education may be "the something."—London Daily Herald.

Deep Sea Mystery

Strange Disappearance Of Ship That Set Sail From Scotland To Canada

An inquiry opened at Newcastle-on-Tyne into one of the strangest sea mysteries of modern times.

Built on the Tyneside for service on the Great Lakes, the motorship Joseph Medill sailed for Canada last August in the wake of unusual dangers, being all-welded. She had a practically flat bottom. She carried no rudder, but a small rectangular vane, for picking up weather reports.

The Joseph Medill, en route to Toronto, was specially exempted from carrying a wireless transmitter in view of the nature of the voyages for which she was designed.

Two days after the Joseph Medill left the Tyne she was reported off Caithness. Five days later she passed the Stavanger Fjord bound for Bergen, Norway. Neither the master of the Stavanger Fjord nor any of his officers noticed anything unusual about the Medill.

But that was the last heard of again and 16 people disappeared with her.

Before the court of inquiry O. L. Hatton, appearing for the board of trade, suggested a possible explanation for the loss of the vessel. In order of improbability they were:

Collision: It was highly improbable that two vessels should sink without any report, he said.

Fire: The possibility was remote, as a fire at sea, especially in the Atlantic ocean, was almost certain to be sighted.

Wreck: The Newfoundland and Labrador coasts are sparsely populated and little frequented.

Ice: This the board of trade considered the most probable as an iceberg was reported by passengers of a ship.

Chalk River Boys' Band

Interesting Story Of The Leader Who Trained Juvenile Aggregation

When the Chalk River, Ont., Boys' Band appeared in competition at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto it will be led by its founder, a former relief worker, Fred Ormiston, working last summer at relief project 60 at nearby Petawawa camp. The latter is obliged to live at work to this town and play an musical instrument anyone would bring him. He can play about a dozen instruments.

Small boys liked him and were interested in his playing. Ormiston suggested a boy's band, but the boys' fathers shrugged their shoulders. Ormiston suggested, cost money and they had none to spare. Ormiston told his personal belongings, bought a boy's cornet city hall in Toronto and came back with $2,000 worth of instruments. He had talked a company executive into believing he could sell them.

He trained his band, 24 boys, the youngest eight, and started giving concerts. Next year, Ormiston, himself, bought the instruments as Ormiston had predicted. The band, trained in-structed for a year, will go to Toronto in the fall, confident of making a good showing. Ormiston is now a paid bandmaster.

Debt Adjustment

Statement By T. C. Davis, Attorney-General, Announces

A pamphlet re:ative to debt adjustment and the disposal of the 1936 crop of Saskatchewan has been published by the Government. The following statement relative thereto has been issued by Hon. T. C. Davis, Attorney-General.

The Debt Adjustment Board of the Province of Saskatchewan maintains an office in each Judicial Centre of each Judicial District. Representatives of the board are, therefore, available in every district in the province.

If any person desires to make application for debt adjustment or requires the services of the Board or any of its officials, facilities of which are free, such services will be furnished upon request directed to the Board by letter or otherwise, either to the Judge in Region or to its representative in the district.

The government believes that the sooner business conditions generally get back to normal the better it will be for all and, having this objective in view, it earnestly desires to assist every debtor who has a case to submit all who are in distress to return to a self-supporting basis as quickly as possible.

Disposal Of 1936 Crop

It is the desire of the government of Saskatchewan, therefore, that, from the present crop of the 1936 crop, there should be paid first, the exemption in connection with harvesting the same; second, seed grain advance in respect to the 1936 crop; third, the farmer should provide for the maintenance of himself and his family until next harvest; therefore, he should provide for feed requirements and his seed grain operations until next harvest. After he has done this, he should improve his own credit to the fullest possible extent by taking care of his obligations.

Law With Respect To Disposal Of The 1936 Crop

The law of the province provides that, notwithstanding the terms of any agreement for sale or mortgages or any lease entered into based upon an agreement for sale or mortgage, the farmer is obliged to live only a one-third share of the crop, from which share he is entitled to pay one-third of the seed. This restriction does not apply to leases where one person owns land and rents it to another, either for a cash rental or upon a share of crop basis. The last mentioned type of share of crop lease is governed by the provisions of The Crop Payments Act.

General Powers Of The Board

If any person in the province desires any additional relief along the lines that already provided for by the law as herein referred to, such person should apply to the Judge in Chambers or to one of the Debt Adjustment Board sitting, the circumstances surrounding his case and the relief he desires to obtain. The Board will deal with every case upon its merits.

The Board has been instructed the fact that crop conditions in the Province of Saskatchewan this year are far from favourable in many sections there will be no crop at all; in other sections there will be a very limited crop; in many districts a good course crop conditions will be normal.

Conditions of this character are sure to produce very difficulties and the Government urgently desires to establish security against hardship in every case requiring such assistance.

Last year a statement respecting the disposition of the 1935 crop was issued on behalf of the government. Once again this year, a similar statement is being issued copies of which are available at the office of the local municipal secretary in Saskatchewan, the office of each representative of the Debt Adjustment Board in every Judicial Centre. In Local Improvement Districts copies may be secured from the office of the Department of Municipal Affairs. They may be obtained also from representatives of the Department of Agriculture, or from any department of the government.

The government requests that all parties concerned secure copies of this circular and urges all persons who may be in doubt with respect to any matter whatsoever relating to debt adjustment, disposal of the crop, etc., to get into contact immediately with representative of the Board. The service is free and necessary steps representatives of the Board will be sent to the individual farmer for the purpose of discussing his problems with them.—T. C. Davis, Attorney-General.

Has Oldest Living Thing

Age Of Tree In Australia Said To Be 15,000 Years

Queensland, Australia, claims to have the oldest living thing on earth. It is a macrozamia tree about twenty feet in height and estimated to be more than 12,000 years old.

In the Tamborine Mountain reserve there is a whole grove of macrozamias, the youngest of them being three feet in height and 2,000 years old. When Professor Chamberlain, of College University, was appointed to collect data concerning macrozamia in various parts of the world, he travelled all over the globe, and the largest specimen he had seen prior to coming to Queensland was between six and seven feet in height and was found in South Africa.

He was amazed therefore, when he found in the Tamborine Mountain reserve a grove of macrozamia which measured over twenty feet in height, and whose ages he estimated to be between 12,000 and 15,000 years The largest macrozamia which Professor Chamberlain had ever seen, and weighing eighty-five pounds, as against the South African record of sixty-four, was estimated to be 121 seeds, and these were sent to America. One seed was planted in each of America's 121 national parks. Now each of the seeds has germinated, so that a descendant of Queensland's macrozamia is now growing in each of the national parks of America.

Customs Exemption Law

Canadians Purchasing Goods In U.S. Under Free Entry Must Stay 72 Hours

Dissatisfaction and irritation on the part of Canadians purchasing goods in the United States and seeking free entry under the $100 exemption law has come to the attention of Hon. J. L. Ilsley, minister of national revenue. The minister was informed some Americans have had advised Canadian customers they could bring in any goods not prohibited without the necessity of a 48-hour stay in the United States

The Canadian tariff requires advance from Canada of 48 hours before such purchases may be brought in free of duty and customs officers at the border are bound to enforce this provision.

Their competition is plenty stiff now, but as recently as 1926 there wasn't a single industrial company in the Japanese empire, not an electric wire, an insurance policy, a bank building or a printing press.

LABOR MEMBERS CAUSE UPROAR IN BRITISH COMMONS

London. — Three left-wing Labor members of the House of Commons were suspended following a wild uproar which arose when several members accused Home Secretary Sir John Simon of lying.

The suspended trio was Geo. Buchanan, Campbell Stephen and Jack McGovern, all from Glasgow seats and members of the Independent Labor party. In the midst of the uproar the house was suspended for 15 minutes.

Government supporters held to the lobbies amid shouts of "baby starvers' and 'dirty rats." After the vote was announced Labor members rose in their seats and sang the "Red Flag."

In the midst of the excitement a newspaperman dropped dead in the press gallery. He was James Johnston, parliamentary reporter for a Midland newspaper.

Previously Buchanan had thrown the house into turmoil with the remark: "Why doesn't the king support his son?" He must be a despicable individual."

Interruption came when Sir John was discussing the responsibility of children in supporting their parents.

The suspensions came during an extended session of the commons, in the course of debate on the government's new unemployment assistance regulations.

Sir John Simon was defending the new regulations in face of shouting from the opposition benches. Suddenly Buchanan rose in his seat, stretched out, and loudly shouted:

"You are not telling the truth; you are lying."

The deputy speaker immediately rose and sternly asked Buchanan to withdraw the unparliamentary expression. Pealing mounted high as Buchanan persisted in his accusation Amid strong turmoil, the deputy speaker of the "ginger group" refused several opportunities to withdraw his remark.

The deputy speaker then warned Buchanan it would be his duty to "name" him to the house unless he withdrew. Buchanan's face reddened and his temper rose as he refused again to do so.

In accordance with custom in such cases, the deputy speaker then "named the honorable member for Gorbals," following which Sir John Simon moved the customary motion for suspension.

At this point an unrestrained uproar broke out.

Campbell Stephen protested against the suspension of Buchanan. He hurled abuse at Conservative members.

"I hope every member of the Labor party will refuse to allow this debate to go on Why should he listen to this lie from anybody?" he declared Stephen. He cried alternately, "That lying scoundrel! That dirty little rat!"

Stephen, protesting Buchanan's suspension, said he was being punished by those to whom he had given "rebukes and murderers of the working class and the unemployed."

When the uproar showed no sign of subsiding, the deputy speaker suspended the sitting. It had then been in progress for more than 27 hours without a break.

Feed Shortage

Old Straw Stacks Commend High Value In Alberta

Lethbridge, Alta. - Old straw stacks, which in good crop years usually are worthless, are commanding a premium in southern Alberta.

Stockmen, their pasture lands dried up by drought, were willing purchasers, paying as high as $80 a stack for feed for their grass-famished cattle There were few stacks to be had even at the high bid price.

Shells Fall On Gibraltar

British Warn That Fire May Be Opened

Gibraltar. — British authorities warned the commanders of Spanish warships that the guns of Gibraltar, one of the world's mightiest fortresses, were ready for instant action.

The British officials declared that if further shells fall on the great rock as a result of the warfare between Spanish rebels and loyalists, the fire would be returned by British artillery.

Anti-aircraft shells burst high over the famous rock and hundreds fled for shelter from a raging air-sea battle between loyal Spanish warships and a rebel fleet of aeroplanes.

Exploding shells menaced the British city. Residents and refugees were panicky. Splinters crashing at Europa, southernmost point of the rock; a "dud" plumped into the sea near a commercial coal mole; a shell fell in the street over the Catholic cathedral; shrapnel fell near the luxurious Rock hotel, high on the west side of the rock.

After the last planes headed back across the straits to north Africa from Tetuan, headquarters of the rebel General Francisco Franco, reports of bombs dropped by exploding shells.

The warships, lying off the rebel strongholds of Algeciras and Los Linos, trained guns on the bombarding planes as the flyers dodged low over the water to swallows to escape the vicious fire.

Taking Census Of Jobless

Registration Officers Have Been Named For Each Province

Ottawa. — Plans for embarking on the task of re-registering all recipients of unemployment relief in Canada, including government officers conferred with the national employment commission here to discuss procedure and arrangements for a speedy compilation of the returns.

The commission invited each province to name an officer to conduct the registration and to prepare forms for the purpose. Practically all of the provinces have named registration officials and these officials were invited to Ottawa for the conference.

The proposed registration will take place as of August 1 and will be designed to cover all persons on relief or going on relief on that date. Returns will be completed before the end of August.

ACTION TO BE TAKEN TO ASSIST LIVESTOCK MEN

Ottawa. — The Dominion government is giving serious consideration to the plight of western livestock farmers arising from the widespread drouth conditions, but will not favor feed relief in the form of distribution of animals in order to relieve the situation.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the government had devoted considerable time in cabinet council to discussing the matter, and the course of action to be adopted will await further discussions with the provincial premiers.

Finance Minister Charles Cockroft of Alberta is in Ottawa and said the problem before Hon. J. G. Elliott, acting minister of agriculture, and other government officials, was to find ways and means of transporting feed and stock from the affected areas in Alberta alone

The prime minister indicated the government would endeavor to cooperate with the provinces in connection with this problem. Whether they would take the form of importing feed or shipping farmers to less arid sections of western Canada also both remained to be decided. He said it might be necessary to limit the destruction of herds merely for the purpose of getting rid of the problem.

The possibility of bonusing would be given immediate consideration requiring conferences not only with the government departments but with the livestock organizations

Mr Cockroft, in Ottawa to tell the government ministers about drouth conditions in his province, said the situation had grown rapidly more serious during the last three weeks.

Arid conditions depleting the supply of feed for cattle, were spreading northward, he declared and the drouth area had crept within 30 or 40 miles of Edmonton.

He could give no estimate of the extent of the loss he said because conditions had changed rapidly and completely since last fall.

Security Of Empire

Financial Burdens Of British Navy Lays Heavy Hand On Taxpayer

London. — The financial burden which the navy lays on the shoulders of the British taxpayer was called to the attention of an informal conference of the Empire Parliamentary Association by Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty.

"The very deep interest which the other peoples of the empire have in this matter may suggest to them ways of sharing the burden," he said.

The solidarity of the British commonwealth upon the sea was the theme of Sir Samuel's address. He said this was once more demonstrated by the co-operation with the British fleet in the recent Mediterranean crisis of two Australian cruisers and one New Zealand cruiser. The sum rely was grateful for this co-operation, he said, as a symbol of the unity of purpose in spring the empire.

There was one direction in which other parts of the empire can help lighten the mother country's naval burden, he suggested was in the matter of local defence. In taking adequate measures in this regard they would be making a real contribution to the general security of the commonwealth.

"Next year we shall have a welcome and appropriate opportunity of discussing at the imperial conference all matters connected with our naval defence," Sir Samuel continued.

"Centuries of experience," he said "Confirm our conviction that a strong British empire is the greatest guarantee of the peace of the world."

Visit Appears Doubtful

Report That King Edward Will Visit Canada After Coronation Not Confirmed

Ottawa. - While he hoped King Edward would find it possible to visit Canada following his coronation next spring, Prime Minister Mackenzie King said he doubted if His Majesty had yet considered the prospect of such a tour.

No information had been given the Dominion government that would support the rumor now current that the sovereign would visit Canada next year.

In an interview following the weekly cabinet council, Mr. Mackenzie King said he would be in Geneva for the League of Nations assembly meeting Sept. 21, but it would be "exceedingly difficult" for him to realize his hope of visiting Vancouver for that city's 50th anniversary celebration

Queried on reports Hon. L. A. Taschereau, former premier of Quebec, would be appointed to the senate vacancy for Levis, the prime minister said no appointment to the red chamber would be made until the eve of the next session of parliament

No decision has been reached on personnel of the delegation which will accompany the prime minister to Geneva. It has been the King Mackenzie King's custom to take strong delegations to the league meetings and it is expected he will be accompanied by several of his ministers.

CONSIDER PLANS FOR INCREASE IN USE OF WHEAT

London —The international wheat advisory committee, established by the world wheat conference in 1933, devoted itself in the course of its eighth session to the problem of increasing wheat consumption

Before the session opened, the secretariat forecasting an upward jump in world net exports of wheat next for the 1936-37 season.

F. L. McDougall presided at the meeting at which 19 countries are represented, including Canada, the United States, and Argentina, three of the biggest wheat-producing countries.

Augustin Edwards, Chilean ambassador in London, opened the debate. He said if new crops in the southern hemisphere were about average in size, it appeared probable that world wheat stocks in August, 1937, would be of only moderate proportions or roughly about 450 000 000 bushels less than the peak reached in August, 1934

Edwards said, however, that at the present level of consumption the danger of accumulation of large surpluses had not been averaged but merely postponed

He suggested that to increase the consumption of wheat seemed a policy that would enlist the sympathies of both producers and consumers. Edwards suggested that the committee should start an inquiry to ascertain the possibilities of creating an international reserving wheat reserve He proposed this be considered and financed by an international body and that its reserves be drawn in from time to time to meet the needs of regions and countries which could not afford to pay current commercial prices

If the committee decided to start the proposal, Edwards suggested three things

First Visit To Britain

Maharajah Of Mysore Making Unofficial Tour To London

The Maharajah of Mysore, whose fortune is estimated at [illegible] ($400,000,000) and who smokes, drinks nor eats meat, is visiting London.

A room in the Indian prince's hotel was prepared as a temple for the worship of the Maharajah's god-dess, Chamundeswari. A small gold figure of the goddess had been placed in the room, and priests accompanying the Maharajah will perform daily rites.

This is HH Maharajah's first visit to Great Britain, and, indeed his first departure from his own kingdom since his accession at the age of 11 in 1868.

His visit is unofficial, but he almost certainly will be received by the King who visited him in 1922 as Prince of Wales. At that time the Maharajah beat the Prince at squash.

The Maharajah was greeted at the station by representatives of the government and of the Indian people. He was accompanied by a retinue of 30. After a short trip to the continent the party will return to India in September.

Should Hold Seed Wheat

Alberta Farmers Warned Against Excess Marketing Across The Border

Alberta farmers were warned by Hon. W. H. Chant, minister of agriculture against the excess marketing of seed wheat across the international border despite the lure of premiums paid there.

He also advised farmers in sections of the province where there might be a feed shortage to conserve their supplies as much as possible.

"It has come to the notice of this department that wheat is being marketed in truck across the border where the premium has reached a substantial amount" said Mr Chant

It would be wise for farmers in the dry area to retain sufficient grain for seed as the policy for the coming season will not permit the distribution of relief seed grain in cases where farmers have threshed grain that is suitable for seed," he added.

New Ceramic Process

One Of The Few Advances Made In This Art In 3,000 Years

A new type of porcelain, its makers claim, is "not fool," one of the few advances in 3,000 years of the ceramics art, was announced at the color conference at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology

The "not fool" is real. It is metallic formed when metals freeze at temperatures around 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit. The metallic frost has all the patterns of frost on the window pane, and can have all the colors of the rainbow.

The metallic frost is lustrous its surface smooth. Unlike the frost on winter windows, the metallic kind can grow crystals of any size. It resembles pictures of flowers painted in metal.

The new ceramic was developed at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, in the laboratory of Professor F. H. Norton, who described it to the conference. It grew out of new methods of controlling precisely the rate of heat and cooling products of making ceramic colors.

This old process produces color by mixing metallic oxides just underneath the surface glaze. The substances which make the crystals are chosen because they will not mix in themselves possess any color. The shape of the crystals and the material which they combine to do is to absorb part of the light, leaving the rest to the rays to be reflected as brilliant color.

South Africa Takes Census

Used Old Method Of Cutting Notches On Sticks

The old simple method of tallying by means of cutting notches on sticks was one of the unusual features in the general census of South Africa, held recently.

Heads of families in Rehoboth were ordered to cooperate at the nearest dipping tank (these tanks are used for the eradication of ticks to enable) for the purpose of counting all those related on them.

They brought to the summerstere sticks, on one side of which were carved notches corresponding to the number of males and on the other the number of females in the family.

This method of counting has been in use for years with raw natives who desire to keep a check on the number of dags they work for a single master.

More than 8,000 enumerators were engaged for the census, which is the first taken for 10 years, and although the motor car was largely used for transport in the outlying districts, the horse, donkey and even the old Cape cart were found necessary in some parts where roads do not exist.

Had Narrow Escape

Aviator Struck High Tension Wires Carrying 70,000 Volts

Lost in the confusion of a violent storm a British amateur pilot, Mr Phil Avery, when taking an accidental delivery at Hoole Barracks, Hoole, struck and severed the high-tension wires over Belfort Portcast, on the French frontier. The wires were carrying 70,000 volts. Mr. Avery miraculously escaped unburned and safely landed the crippled aeroplane.

One Thing Lacking

Not for the first time the Englishman was belittling Scotland and everything to do with it. As he drained his second glass of whiskey he turned to his companion

"Why" he said "your country has never produced a really great man. You say Walter Scott." Pooh! If I had decided to do it, I could write as good stuff as ever Scot did."

"Then why don't you?" queried the patient Scot. "All that ye want is the mind."

Old Sheet Copper Found

A small cylinder of sheet copper believed to have been left by Captain James Strange when he took possession of the Queen Charlotte islands for Great Britain 150 years ago, has been unearthed on one of the islands W H Halliday, author-ity on the north mid-coast region of the Queen Charlottes said B A McArthur Victoria newspaper editor reported the find on their return to Victoria with the cylinder.

For some months, unknown to the thousands passing along the Thames Embankment, workmen have been busily engaged in erecting across under the Water Gate Arch, erecting a memorial to the late King George V. The monument, designed by Sir Edwin Cooper, was commissioned by the Port of London Authority. It is to commemorate the famous "King's Reach" which was given to the stretch of the Thames between London and Westminster Bridges, on the occasion of King George's Silver Jubilee. Lady Michin unveiled the memorial, and we see her above with Lord Ritchie standing on the deck of a launch after the unveiling ceremony.

Long Arctic Flight

Soviet Pilots Cover 5,586 Miles Without A Stop

A long Arctic flight by Soviet pilots was hailed as an official peace as an accomplishment which "will confuse our enemies."

Moscow newspapers described the plane trip of Pilots Chelnakoff and Baidukoff as one of the most difficult ever made.

The flyers, accompanied by Navigator Beliakoff, spent 56 hours and 30 minutes in the air and landed near Micolaiswik, Siberia, covering 5,586 miles without a stop.

(Their plane, it was disclosed by the commissariat for heavy industry, which sponsored the trial, was only brought to earth when they were threatened by head winds and a gasoline shortage.)

On recommendation of high Soviet officials, the three men participating in the flight are to be awarded the title of "hero."

In recognition of their accomplishment the flyers also will receive cash grants from the government.

Glider Touring Japan

To Arouse Interest In That Type Of Aviation

To arouse interest in glider aviation, a German glider, manned by a well-known Omaha pilot, is touring Japan. It is being towed by an airplane and is covering 2,500 miles in its flight, which touches all large and many small cities. The glider is the practically identical with the one used by Wolf Hirth, the German master glider pilot who pioneered gliding men last year. It is the best machine of the kind in the country and that owned by many air forces.

Back From Nature

Members Of French Nudist Colony Now Wearing Clothes

Nudists at the French "Naturalist colony on Heliopolis Island, in the Seine, about 25 miles from Paris, have returned to clothes. Only babies and those under the age of six remain entirely unclad. On the island are hundreds of tiny tents and small prefabricated cabins. The island is practically identical with the one used by Wolf Hirth, the German master glider pilot who pioneered gliding men last year. It is the best machine of the kind in the country and that owned by many air forces.

Kittens at Play in Dainty Crochet

PATTERN 5072

When you take Baby for his airings, bundle him in with this adorable carriage set pillow and cover. You'll find it content of the easy to do, in just plain row bet, and most appealing in white with blue or pink, or in two shades of one color. It's glorious fun to watch those playful kittens appear one by one as the sunpa stitches mount up. Use Germantown wool, for it is both light-weight and warm. In pattern 5072 you will find complete instructions and charts for making the set shown; an illustration of it and of the stitch-has needed, material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 20 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Needlework Arts Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave, Winnipeg.

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMISSIONED

Golden text: I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision. Acts 26:19.

Lesson: Acts 9:1-31; 22-3-21; Galatians 1:11-17; 1 Timothy 1:13-17.

Devotional reading: Isaiah 6:1-8.

Explanations And Comments

The Persecutor Becomes a Convert. Acts 9:1-19. But, while Philip and other disciples "scattered abroad" were busy in extending the kingdom, Paul with equal zeal was persecuting the Christians at Jerusalem. He was "breathing threatening and slaughter against the Christians," we are told; he lived, as it were, in an atmosphere of hatred, fury and destruction. The words "breathing out" are expressive often of a deep, hating emotion, such as we then breathe more rapidly and even violently in order to supply the oxygen needed to supply the exhausted vitality consumed by the emotion. It is thus expressive of "violent anger" (Albert Barnes).

As Paul was approaching Damascus there suddenly shone round about him a dazzling light, brighter than the Syrian sun. He fell to the earth and heard a voice calling him: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" "Who art thou, Lord?" he questioned in return and the solemn answer came, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest; but rise and enter the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do."

Before Paul found the new life some severe warm-hearted believer must be found who would go to him, pray with him and lead him into the fellowship. It took courage for a Christian to face the man who had come to put the Christians to death, but such a man was Ananias, a devout man according to the law, and reported by all the Jews that dwelt at Damascus (Acts 22:12). Perhaps Ananias was one of those of the little Christian Church at Damascus. He is known only for his service to the great Saul, and how well Paul was in sore need of a brother. And so Paul is found in Straight street of Damascus called Straight, but when he saw and heard Ananias his knew that fears were needless. Tenderly he put his hands upon Paul and called him with gentle sympathy "Brother Saul," saying, "the Lord hath sent me that thou mayest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Spirit." Ananias healed Paul's eyes. He baptised him. He became a brother.

No word ever came to Paul at a more critical time. A task was his and a brotherly greeting—who can tell what it meant to him in the life of the movement that was to carry the gospel to the regions beyond?

Self-Sufficiency Program

Remain Now Intends To Buy Less And Sell More

Russia now intends going to buy less and borrow less, sell more and save more—towards the goal of self-sufficiency.

Furthermore, Foreign Trade Commissar Archibad Rosenigloks told the conference for foreign trade that it won't be necessary to send so many Soviet salesmen abroad—the buyers will be coming to them.

The reason for the self-sufficiency program, he asserted, is clear: "In the present period of the intensified military dangers, the necessity to prepare for defence and the significance of increasing gold reserves is apparent.

"Reduction of imports will be continued and increased in the second, third and current five-year plan by which Soviet Russia maps its future, Rosenigloks said. In almost all we have entirely united. On the island are hundreds of tiny tents and small prefabricated cabins. The island is practically identical with the one used by Wolf Hirth, the German master glider pilot who pioneered gliding men last year. It is the best machine of the kind in the country and that owned by many air forces.

High Salaries

Many Big Industrialists In United States Receive Huge Pay

The Toronto Star cites five big industrial men in the United States with salaries of $250,000 a year and over, and nineteen others with salaries of over $100,000 per year. In all cases, the high pay is the reward for assembling thousands and hundreds of men into an organization of production, succeeding in the world, and as a highly debatable point whether the salaries of such men are justified when compared with standard wages in industries which provide them. Comparatively movie and baseball stars are paid more and contribute no effort for the enjoyment of large numbers of other people with dependent families. The system of high reward for creative effort and exceptional skill may be all wrong on the line of collective system to replace it" St. Catharines Standard

Australian Aborigines

Aborigines are becoming as scarce in Australia as Indians in the United States, according to the latest census data received by the Commonwealth Statistician at Canberra. Those show that there still remain only 60,000 full-blooded aborigines in the country, of whom 34,000 were either in employment or were living in supervised camps. The remaining 26,000 are nomadic.

More than 7,000,000 members are enrolled in athletic clubs in Germany.

Some Strange Foods

Unusual Things Found By Those Who Search For Them

Snails are not exclusively a French dish. They have been eaten for generation in Swindon, Wiltshire, where, even now, if you are lucky, you may find a dish on the public-house bar counter.

Stranger menus can be found by those who search for them between Land's End and John o' Groats.

In Radnorshire they eat rabbits and fishes' eyes, while epicures who can afford trouts' cheeks find it takes fifty fish to fill a small saucer with this delicacy.

Brown Gooch, a North of England specialist, is made from bran, while Cornish pasties and pilchard pie compete with the neighboring Devonshire squab pie, in which apples, mutton, onions and pastry are the ingredients.

Candied rose leaves, nettles in salad and cream tree berries, which look so poisonous but make wonderful jelly, and cockles and cream vie with the delicacy of the gentle fare of the Yorkshire dales.

Jellied eels, spotted dog, and tiled in the hole are everyday dishes everywhere, but in the dales and Ireland they eat renweed and sea-slug soup.

The names "Singin Hinney" and "Fat Rascal" are just aliases for thick griddle cakes

Of New York's latest is hot chocolate is an American invention which made a fortune for its sponsor.

Egypt, though — Starr shuddered when she thought of it — and all things Egyptian, had been his hobby. A love which had eventually led him to his death; had led his only daughter to her present death and a distressing poverty to precede it.

Ever since she could remember Starr had been familiar with Egyptian kings and queens and princesses. As a child they had fascinated her, and she had made her own stories about the lovely almond-eyed beings of a by-gone day who filled her father's cherished books and walked at her with their long eyes from his paintings, his vases and bas-reliefs lovely chastity-swathed bodies and crumbs were sinuous and whose eyes held mystery. As Starr's own eyes held mystery, so she had been told. Often she had wondered if the proximity to those pictured and sculptured treasures of Egypt could have had anything to do with her own eyes. With all she now had learned—in bitterness—she prayed and hoped not.

She had no objective in her stroll through the Museum, realizing that she could not remain long, that it soon would be closing time. It did not matter. She would merely walk around, look at a few sculptures, perhaps distract her mind from her woes

She could not have told how it was certainly by no intention of her own but before she realized it she was in the very centre of the Egyptian room, the one place in all that vast storehouse of the world's treasures of all-age culture which she wished to avoid. And yet she had been drawn here, it seemed, as if by some invisible magnet.

Her first horrified recognition of familiar figures on wall and in cases made her want to run. Oddly her feet were rooted to the floor. Her teeth clenched as a mad emotion all but overcame her, and then her will power came to the fore

"I won't run away!" she said between set teeth. "I won't! I'll see what I've been doing too long. What good has it done? No! They've already done all they can for me! I'll stay! Right here! I'll sit down and stare them all out of countenance every Egyptian and Egyptian shoe them that at least I'm not—afraid!"

To Starr, as she sat down on a stone bench, grimly setting her teeth, the bas-relief figures and the paintings of the Egyptian women with the long eyes and their queer headdress did not seem like representations. They seemed real. One in particular. She clenched her hands, set beside her gloves, as she stared. That priestess on the tall centre vase She was like—

Suddenly the room in which she sat, the paintings and vases and bas-reliefs and murals all faded and she was back, back with the living horror which even now tortured her, turned her dreams into nightmares. That smell—that odor of a centuries-sealed tomb, a desecrated tomb—was in her nostrils again. Like nothing she had ever known before or since. The awful, dank, musty, smothering smell of a tomb which had been sealed for nearly three thousand years. A veritable palace of the dead! In a great, deep silence that could almost be heard!

That love in Egypt was to have made her father famous. Through all the expeditions that had occupied the man who was becoming known as an archeologist none had held for him any of the importance of the particular journey which had been planned for years. He and John Lessing, both intense students of Egyptian history and Egyptology in all its aspects, had planned with deep intensity for this one special trip. With one great objective in mind.

It was inevitable that Starr went along. She always had. She took a great help to her father who, like so many students, was inclined to be absent-minded, and single-purposed as though he would work painstakingly at his books, he too often would neglect taking his meals on the spot, trusting to a memory not infallible. Star kept his notes, tabulated all his findings

Their objective was the secret tomb of Tut-Amen-Ra, whose forbidden name, "Ame-Sen," was on the temple virgin, had incurred the wrath of the high priests. Contrary to the popular belief, the curse of Professor Ellison believed that the ancient lovers were buried together. To prove that belief was right was the one ambition of his life.

Naturally there was a long period of hard work, as there always is for any real explorer, and it was during those times, as well as from her earlier observations that Starr had gained the various expert experiences of her life. She had been so sure that she, too, had come to love Egypt, that she was enamored of the world, not with the love of a student, of course, and she told herself she was only being silly.

But it was a long day dragged through the feeling persisted. There was a strange sunset that night, and it did not help. Though she could not understand what they said, she realised that it also had its effect on the natives, for there was an uneasiness, uneasy, forgetting that calm and fatalism that characterized them.

Before the sunsets had all been of gorgeous radiance. This day, as evening came on, there appeared in the blue sky the whiteness of one of the horizon clouds—a white sky, as if with a mirage, and Starr knew that it was going to happen, a sky that looked down pityingly, then had its whiteness shot with blood-red streaks, and then, below, one that was not gold, but tarnished, while from across the desert there came a sound such as she had never heard before, like the scratching of a million rats.

BEE FIELD DAY AT LACOMBE

The annual Bee Keepers' Field Day will be held at the Dominion Experimental Station, Lacombe, on Monday, August 10th.

Every year more farmers are taking up bee-keeping as a profitable sideline, and the increasing interest in this phase of agriculture has been reflected in the letters received at the Experimental Station. This Field Day will provide an opportunity for novices to secure an introduction to the subject, and for the more experienced to further their knowledge.

Talks and demonstrations on different phases of bee-keeping will be given by C.B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist, Ottawa, S.G. Hilliard, Provincial Apiarist Edmonton, and F. R. Walker Apiarist at the Lacombe Station.

Coffee cream sugar cups and spoons will be provided for a basket lunch at noon. The programme will commence at 1:30 p.m.

GARDEN SLUGS CAN BE CONTROLLED

Garden slugs are frequently numerous on heavy land where they do considerable damage to beans, [illegible] cauliflowers and other [illegible] Like other pests, the slugs may be successfully controlled if intensive measures are given before they become a [illegible] infested plants and slugs should be dusted with by dusted lime in the evening after the rain has fallen and feeding has commenced Care should be taken to [illegible] the upper and the lower surfaces of the leaves and the soil immediately surrounding the plants

Hydrated lime is effective only when in the form of a light dry powder. It becomes hard when subjected to moisture, and in that condition it is not injurious to slugs. For this reason a few light applications of lime at intervals of three or four days are more effective than one heavy dose.

Another method of control frequently recommended is to spray the infested plants thoroughly with Bordeaux mixture The material is expensive to make and if the foliage of the plant is completely covered many of the slugs will confine their attention to weeds growing in adjacent fields.

The Standard noted the following: 13 heads of beautiful carrots, 2 or 3 of beans, a couple of red cabbage. 2 or 3 of beets, peas and lettuce, magnificent corn in which the ear is far advanced cabbages cauliflower and 27 rows of as healthy a patch of potatoes as one would desire to see This large garden is as clean as a reception room and has been supplying early vegetables to the owners for the past two or three weeks. It is well worth taking a stroll over to this plot and enjoying the pleasure of having a good look at it.

ISLAND HILL

We will have to be careful—Winks is on our track—one good mule of life is when you find too many attaching you try to make friends with some of them. This we will attempt to do. See paper boiled.

But before we proceed we have a real bit of news for Winks, we met her once—almost. Standing at the counter in the Standard office two ago her approach accompanied by the editor, whatever came over us I don't know but we suddenly made a dash behind some of the machinery and there lay in ambush until we thought all danger was past. It was not free for we know it not. On second thought was it not lucky that we went into ambush for had Winks barried us out in the presence of the whole staff we would have simply dropped in our tracks

United church folks have had a busy week here. All the children attended the school and were taught things that tend to make them good citizens of Canada.

BY-PRODUCTS OF HOGS GIVE A BIG INCOME

In modern days very little of the hog is wasted. In Canada alone, by products of the hog that were previously considered dead treasure and waste now represent millions or dollars of additional income to the live stock industry. The by products of the hog include skins, from which are manufactured bristles, pig-skin, hair, curled hair, upholstering, plaster reinforcement, felt, glue, sausage, gelatine, gloves, belts, straps, pocket books and shoe counters

From the fats are manufactured lard, oleomargarine, hemogenated lard mixes, cosmetics, emulsions, poultry and animal foods, fertilizer, tankage, grease, lard oil, stearine, stearic acid, grease oil, lubricants, medicine oil, lanolin, gelatin, glycerin, red oil, wool finishers, fatty acid, tar for roofing, and paving purposes, metal polish and soap Among the many other miscellaneous by products are pharmaceutical preparations such as pepsin medicinal tablets, suppositories and insulin. TRAGEDY STALKS IN THE WEST

(From Alberta Wheat Pool Budget)

Every Canadian with any knowledge of events, understands that a disaster of the first magnitude has occurred in Western Canada in the way of crop damage through drouth. It is doubtful, however, if the extent of the calamity is generally realized. For nearly six weeks no general rain has been experienced in any large area of the west, and the crops with even fair crops are few and far between.

The collapse of the wheat crop, upon which the west always relies to a greater extent than anything else, is the great tragedy of course. But added to this is the wide spread failure of feed crops and pastures. The west is threatened with a dire famine of live stock procedure.

There are thousands of farmers in Western Canada who will not have a bushel or wheat to sell this fall. There are thousands more who will have a relatively small quantity. Wheat is the cash crop of the bulk of western farmers, and so multitudes of these farm people will have to become at all, or very little to carry them over to the new growing season. Many people do not realize the tragedy that is developing right now, and the greater tragedy of want which is bound to come later on.

The western fair has been the butt of the depression. He has been ridiculed for every effort his organizations made to get a little better prices for his commodities. He has been told that his wheat must go at world prices. He has been admonished that one a bushel was enough for him to make both ends meet. Every passing hireling of vested interests has been ridiculing the efforts of farm organizations to get living wages for the working farmers.

Four ago the west had something like 475 million bushels of wheat in store or in prospective supply from the current crop. A number of supposedly keen business executives urged that the whole amount be thrown on world markets regardless of price or any other consequences. By the end of this month a bare 175 million bushels will be left.

The Wheat Pools have urged upon governments for years that the sensible policy was to sell in world markets only that surplus supply which importers really wanted, and that at reasonable prices. The balance, it was urged, should be stored right in the farmer's bins to tide over bad years which come at irregular intervals.

Today the farm bins are empty and the bulk of surplus wheat supplies have been sold at ruinous bonfiltrops to give anything further to the wheat farmers.

Of course, the "wise men" say that the market is now in a healthy condition and big traders now feel free to take on large commitments. and that everything is going along smoothly. But how will that help the farmers who have no wheat? What good is a high price to them when they have to buy feed grains for their live stock, and possibly seed wheat for next spring?

A number of the States of the U. S. A. have suffered from drouth this year. The worst affected are Montana, North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Nebraska, Oklahoma and the eastern half of Kansas. The governments of the United States have already grappled energetically with the problem and is prepared to spend $5 million dollars as a starter in looking after and re-habilitating the farm families who have suffered.

What the United States government has made arrangements to supply 15,000 jobs in the "dust bowl," make loans to at least 50,000 persons, buy up one million head of cattle, and to finance such schemes as soil conservation shelter belt development irrigation and dam projects. And resettlement schemes to help the afflicted areas

What is going to be done for Canada in the emergency? An awful thing to be raised about the face of 5 million dollars to grain stabilization (which in this years crop) [illegible] have averted) what [illegible] years of that operation [illegible] Canadian spirit will be low indeed in the face of the calamity which is befalling the west.

Western agriculture is a [illegible] very little today which could easily crash into a disaster which would shake Canada to [illegible] foundations for [illegible] Canada's economy is based on [illegible] culture.

In the current issue of The Farm and Ranch Review C. W. Peterson says, "Canada, in spite of her [illegible] dependence on her agricultural [illegible]

WEDDING BELLS

The following account of the wedding of Mr. Louis Heard will prove interesting to many here as the groom was accountant at the school of Agriculture for the past year.

HEARD—BENSON

A quiet pretty wedding took place last Saturday evening, July 25 at All Saints cathedral Edmonton when Jacqueline Edna Benson, B.N., daughter of the late Mr and Mrs. H. E. Benson of Edmonton was united in marriage to Louis Wesley Heard, son of Mrs R. Heard of Placid, Saskatchewan Rev. Percy Gooding officiated. The bride was particularly lovely in a white crepe wedding dress with white accessories and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Helen Patricia Benson was her winsome bridesmaid She chose a beautiful blue and pink flowered taffeta with picture hat and white accessories and carried [illegible] shades of sweet peas. The bride was given away by her brother in law Mr. V. C. Christenson of Inwood Alta. The groom was supported by his friend Mr. H. H. Rivers of Camrose Alta Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the Corona hotel after which [illegible] continued to the home of a [illegible] friend of the bride's Mr and Mrs. Bert Sleeman for entertainment.

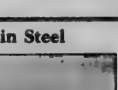
New Locomotives Poems in Steel



Canada's newest railway locomotives are poems in steel, graceful, light-weight, semi-streamlined, for maximum capable of 110 miles an hour.

Radical departures in construction have been made in the Canadian Pacific Railway's five new "2000" engines, the first of which was taken over on Monday, July 27, at a brilliant ceremony which was broadcast on a nation-wide radio net-work through the facilities of the company's Communications Department, and which included addresses by Sir Edward Beatty, G.B.E., K.C., LL.D., chairman and president, Canadian Pacific Railway; His Worship Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal; William C. Dickerman, president of the Montreal Locomotive Company, where the new locomotive was built; and J. N. Burns, Canadian Pacific veteran.

The new Jubilee Locomotives, so named because they will go into operation in the Jubilee year of the company's transcontinental passenger service, will pull a completely new type of train, lighter than the ordinary, semi-streamlined, and comfortable. The new coaches are under construction.

PRESERVE HEALTH WHEN YOU CAN

Fruits and vegetables every day in the year and every month in the day are necessary to perfect health. To ensure this we must look after and prepare for the coming winter. Canning is one of the luxury of the home which gives results and conserves food preservation depends on destruction or barring yeasts and moulds, and prevention of further decomposition. To accomplish this the food must be thoroughly heated to destroy the organisms and must be kept sealed and air tight to prevent the entry of other organisms.

Sugar, salt, vinegar are all aids to preservation of foods but yeasts or other organisms have shown that storing the food in jars or cans in which it is to be stored is the most successful method of home canning. This is really an easier method of canning than the old open kettle method also the product keeps its natural colour, shape and flavour better. Elaborate equipment is unnecessary if care is exercised. Some housewives use a steamer, others like the heat controlled oven, still others prefer to use the water bath. Of course the pressure cooker is quickest and surest, but every housewife does not possess one.

There are a few points which should be emphasized, rather than discussed "details."

1. Use fresh products

2. Handle small quantities at a time, pack and sterilize as soon as possible after blanching or pre-cooking.

3. Test all jars before using

4. Buy new rubbers each year, soak one before using. Be sure that the rubbers fit the type or jar. Most rubbers for screw top jars narrow ones for screw top jars

5. If the water bath is used keep jars covered with water—2 inches over the top.

6. Keep the water boiling or the steam heat regular

7. Be supplied methods and allow full time for sterilization

8. Remove the jars as the cool required period

9. Seal jars tightly at once to When cool, store in a dry, cool, dark place.

Full directions for canning are given in the new Bulletin 534 "Canning Fruits and Vegetables," which is in the press and will be available in a few weeks time from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa and Extension Branch, Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

SOCIAL SERVICE TAX SEVERELY CRITICISED

Municipal Convention Deals With District Matters

The municipal convention held at Vermilion last Friday was attended by delegates representing the various municipalities in the north eastern section of the province. The meeting took place at the Legion hall and among the guest speakers were A. Smith, the deputy minister of municipal affairs; William Howbert, supervisor of seed grain and John Renshaw chief inspector of the department of municipal affairs. The new acts and amendments as affecting the work of municipal districts were reviewed by Mr. Souter and the other speakers from the department. The convention also went on record as being definitely opposed to the social service tax and it also severely criticised the way in which the government has legislated with respect to its sales. The convention sent a wire to the Minister must now be had to every move made under the tax recovery act.

SUMMER SCHOOL NEARS END

Classes of the summer session of the provincial department of education at the University of Alberta entered their final week today and Friday lectures will be Friday when the 1,300 students in this branch of summer school will begin their homes scattered over the entire province. AUBURNDALE

The United Farmer picnic held under the auspices of the Pastel local of the U.F.A. on the banks of the Battle River on July 29 just south of the Auburndale bridge was a most successful affair. There was a large gathering of people there from every direction. Quite a number of motorists could anyone find more beautiful camp site than the one at Watson's on the river. Bathing, baseball, horseshoe pitching and a picnic supper all helped to complete a very enjoyable day. Music was supplied by the Vermilion orchestra and a splendid one it was too. Those who were in charge of the supper were Mrs. Watson, Mrs. Bert Smith, Mrs. Ed Gordon, Mrs. Ed Bowcott and Mrs. Ed Bowcott. Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Ed Gordon presided over the tables and those who were in charge of the ice cream and soft drinks were Mrs. Ed Bowcott and Mrs. Ed Gordon. Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Ed Gordon. Unearthing Hidden Wealth

Almost daily new testimony of the great potentialities of hidden wealth in the form of natural gas and petroleum as well as metallic minerals of great value awaiting exploration and development somewhere beneath the surface soil of the three prairie provinces, and possibly in enormous quantities, is brought to light.

Evidence of the existence of untold mineral riches from the foothills of the Rocky Mountains to the mud flats bordering the large lakes of Manitoba and from the international boundary to the Arctic circle and beyond is revealed from time to time in seepages and sparse outcroppings, in the results of geological surveys and in the findings of experts who are sounding and tapping the terrain and compiling data in increasing numbers from year to year.

In this great search for new wealth which is now going on over this vast area the advance of scientific knowledge is destined to play an increasingly important role and will probably hasten the day when much of this hidden wealth will be uncovered and converted to the use of mankind for the benefit of these three provinces and their peoples

The use of the aeroplane in the past two or three years is speeding up the work of mapping out the most likely areas and this is being followed up by trained men equipped with the most modern scientific instruments in unprecedented efforts to locate great veins of gold and silver, copper and zinc and huge pools of oil and big deposits of gas and other forms of mineral wealth.

Even before these modern methods of locating and wresting wealth from unseen depths were made available, concrete indications of its existence were evident in such discoveries as the Turner Valley oil and gas fields in Alberta, copper and gold in Manitoba and the more recent finds of gold in the Athabasca Lake region in Saskatchewan, to mention only a few of these.

Some of these deposits have already been developed and others are being turned into production, but even in these known fields cumulative evidence points to the probability that only the surface has yet been scratched, as witness the recent discovery of the existence of oil presumably in large quantities, at hitherto untapped depths just beyond the outskirts of the known Turner Valley field.

And outside the known and already productive fields is a vast territory which, if credence is to be given the weight of evidence and belief of scientific authorities, has perhaps even greater possibilities.

The discovery by Major Howard, Winnipeg geologist, of definite finding of ash strata in south western Manitoba recently prompted Duncan Hager of New York, a geologist of international repute and author of standard works on field geology, to express his conviction that there is every reason to suppose that the whole of Saskatchewan, the greater part of Alberta and part of Manitoba are sitting over a vast potential oil and gas field.

Such a possibility has been suspected for some time but Mr. Hager wisely drew attention to the difficulties which must be encountered before this great wealth can be tapped with any degree of reasonable certainty and intimated that recovery of these riches will call for untold large expenditures of capital because of the peculiar geological conformation of the country.

For example, Mr. Hager pointed out that the residents of the Lloydminster district on the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary who were fortunate enough to strike gas in commercial quantities on the strength of sketchy geological reports compiled in Ottawa from data available with odds of 500 to one against them and that "even where a dome or anticline is located in a known field by experienced men the chances are only one in three that oil or gas will be found in commercial quantities."

The difficulties of locating hidden mineral wealth are great enough in countries where exposed outcroppings are frequent and where geological sub-strata is regular but these handicaps are multiplied a hundredfold in a territory overlain by glacial drift and where the sub-strata is subjected to frequent faults as in the prairie provinces.

All of which is tantamount to saying that the search for mineral wealth in Western Canada is essentially a rich man's game and that the great need for successful prosecution of the search is available capital in considerable quantities. This is also another way of saying it is a shoe string are playing against great odds.

Dominion Representatives Met With Coronation Commission For First Time

For the first time in history, representatives of the dominions attended a meeting of a coronation commission. The historic meeting was held in St. James' Palace when dominions' representatives were present to discuss what part the dominions will take in the coronation ceremony next May.

The prime ministers and high commissioners of the dominions were appointed by the king July 30 to serve on the coronation commission.

The meeting was private but the attending representing the dominions were Stanley Bruce, and Charles Foster high commissioners in London for Australia and South Africa respectively

Special Stamps Issued

French Government Commemorated Dedication of Vimy Memorial

Dedication of Canada's war memorial on Vimy Ridge was commemorated in the special stamps issued by the French government. A special postal and telegraphic service was in operation at Vimy during the dedication, and letters and postcards mailed from there July 26 bore a special stamp with the inscription: "Vimy, France. Canadian Memorial, July 26, 1936."

Abbe de Pontevez French sculptor, has presented the Canadian Legion official party with a Vimy memorial medal. One side shows the commissioners in its entirety with the inscription "In Memoriam," while the other gives another aspect of the memorial with the words "Canada-France."

The medal, executed in gold, will be presented to the King; one to Mayor to Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Canadian Minister of Justice, and one to Premier Marshal Henri Petain.

How Japan Is Acquiring Huge Slice Of Chinese Territory

Chinese territory comprising an area of 154,185 square miles and a population of about 50 000,000 has passed from control of the Nanking government to that of Japan so quietly that it apparently slipped the notice of the world.

Hopei province alone, which is the most literate and one of the richest provinces in China, has a population of 30,000 000 as compared with 10,-000,000 in all Ethiopia. Foreign trade controlled by the Nanking government amounts to $173,000,000 annually as compared with Ethiopia's $18,000,-000. The provincial capital, Hopei's export and export business is with the United States.

Hopei has an autonomous government. This has been achieved without a shot being fired, except "by smoke" in Tangku and without attracting much attention from the other powers.

Students were the only group which voiced any open objection to what has been going on and that movement seemingly will fall at an early date.

Japan has learned a lesson how to acquire new territory without attracting "easy-bodies" like the Lytton commissioners who investigated the Manchurian adventure. As soon as Hopei and Chahar have been made to be consolidated there is little doubt Japan intends to see what can be done about all of the Chinese provinces north of the Yellow river.

Japanese advisers sit in every office in the provincial government council and the provincial bureaus and no step is taken without first consulting the little men from the Island Empire.

Distinctively British

English People Again Prove They Are Eccentric

The French, they tell us, are "volatile"; the Spaniards, "romantic"; the English, "eccentric." We carry these shop-worn stereotypes of thought with us. Often they are misleading, but sometimes they are well-based. Oddly, it took an attempted assassination of King Edward to bring out, in full flavor, that remarkable English eccentricity which is distinctively British. In any other country in Europe the assassin would have been shot dead on the spot. What happened in London? This McMahon, his gun knocked down his hand, was quietly taken away, with little disturbance. Edward immediately minimized the affair. Then, when the new bishop of the capital charge of treason The police were careful to point out that though the revolver was loaded, the uppermost bullet chamber, the one in the firing line, was empty—New York Post.

Giving Work To Thousands

Coronation Next Year Already Of Benefit To Unemployed

People in different parts of the Empire are already booking passages to London, and seats along the procession route for the Coronation next May

It is estimated, says Reuter, that at least 1,500 seats will be reserved by Australians and New Zealanders. There will be hundreds of princes, rich landlords, and millionaire merchants from India

The Coronation will find work for thousands of unemployed. Already many people in Yorkshire have been found jobs in the making of commemorative mugs and jugs London Daily Mail

Just A Slight Error

William S. Merchant, Winston-Salem, N.C., knows how it feels to be a millionaire for a day Merchant received a dividend check from a company in which he owns a small block of stock. It was made out for $1,000,014.36, and properly signed by all necessary officials. It should have been for $14.36. He returned the change.

Building Up Navy

Britain Will Continue To Launch More Battleships

There is no evidence that the bombing plane has made the battleship obsolete as the backbone of the British navy.

That, it is understood, will be the finding of the government's "Battleship versus Bomber" committee, which will complete its report very soon. Tests have been made to ascertain the vulnerability of battleships from the air.

Battleship building will continue, and tenders will be invited for two 17,500,000 super-dreadnoughts without delay.

The will be followed at the end of the year by invitations to tender for four more.

The districts likely to be asked to build them are Barrow-in-Furness, the Clyde, the Tyne and Belfast.

The committee's views may be summed up thus:

Though the development of the plane has added a new terror to the battleship's task, that the plane would be able to score enough direct hits on a ship to sink it.

Decks are now being so heavily armored that a bomb would not penetrate far enough.

Anti-aircraft developments have been made recently in anti-aircraft guns, which can fire 1,000 shells a minute.

The number of planes for the naval air arm is being increased so that air attackers may be beaten off.

Bounty For Wolves

Increasing In Numbers And Becoming Menace In Northwest

Wolves are so numerous in the far-northern districts that hunting and big games animals have been slaughtered by them that the government has reintroduced a bounty for their pelts.

The Dominion government used to pay a bounty of $20 for every wolf pelt. It was reduced to $20 in 1923 and dropped the following year. Then, when they have increased in numbers throughout the northern territories and in provinces flanking the northern border lands to such an extent they have become a real menace.

The new regulations call for a bounty of $5 for each pelt with the trapper keeping the skin for sale. This follows the practice of most provinces in contrast to the old regulations under which the Dominion retained the skin for sale.

Wanted A Companion

Man Gave Odd Reason For Stealing Valuable Cloak

Elmer Koch, 24, reposed in a Chicago cell, where he was confined by days and there are no cuckoo clocks. He was charged with stealing a fur-lined overcoat valued at $100, hard carved. Swiss made, and three weighted), from a curiosity shop on Michigan avenue. "I got homesick sitting around home all day while my wife works," Elmer explained. "I got to thinking about the cuckoo clock in this store. I thought how companionable it would be, and I figured it would be much a real mess. I'm going to get it." The judge said 30 days.

How Gadget For Trunks

Perhaps this gadget will aid motorists to pass trucks more easily on the highway; a sound-absorbing device at the rear of the truck to carry the sound of an approaching car to the driver through a tube. The Province of Quebec Safety League is going to suggest this device to truck owners.

Leaves Odd Will

Teacher Gave Instructions For Burial In Old Way

A will instructing that its writer be buried in the old way without silk or white cotton and with a pillow of wood shavings covered with some other white cloth has been probated in Sudbury, Ont.

The will, drawn up in 1938, was that of Calixte Charbonneau, school teacher, who died in February. She ordered no embalming be performed and her body be dressed and placed in the casket "only by members of her own sex."

The value of the estate was $16,-000, the majority of which will later for church purposes after setting aside an income for her brother and amounts for nieces and nephews. Her furniture was to be divided equally among those attending the funeral.

Very Likely Would

There is a story concerning a clergyman who, at dinner, had to listen to a talkative young man who had much to say on Darwin

"I can't see," bowled the youth, "what difference it would make to me if my grandfather was an ape."

"No," skirmished the clergyman, "I can't see that it would. But it must have made a great difference to your grandmother."

Appointed Soil Specialist

Dr. Alfred Leahey Of Edmonton Has Had Wide Experience

Dr. Alfred Leahey of Edmonton, Alberta, has been appointed Soil Specialist to succeed the late Sidney Barnes who had charge of soils investigations for Western Canada under the Dominion Field Husbandman, Experimental Farms Branch, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The splendid work which was done by the late Mr. Barnes on the moisture requirements of plants, soil moisture conservation, and soil drifting investigations is well-known throughout the Prairie Provinces. Dr. Leahey with his special training and experience is well qualified to carry on the investigations on Dominion Experimental Farms, Stations and Substations, as well as in the new Soil Research Laboratory at Swift Current, Sask.

Dr. Leahey attended primary and secondary schools in Alberta, graduated with the degree of B.Sc. in Agriculture from the University of Alberta, obtained his M.Sc from the same University, and his Phd from the University of Wisconsin. For the past ten years as a member of the staff of the University of Alberta and the Research Council of Alberta, he has had wide practical experience in soil survey, soil analysis, and field experiments with fertilizers in Alberta.

Trifles Make Perfection

Great Italian Sculptor Knew Value Of Small Things

The great Italian sculptor, Michelangelo, was once visited by an acquaintance, who remarked, on entering his studio. "Why, you have done nothing to that figure since I was here last." "Yes," was the reply; "I have softened this expression, touched off that projection, and made other improvements." "Oh!" said the visitor, "those are mere trifles." "True," answered Michelangelo, "but remember that trifles make perfection, and perfection is no trifle."

Fish, it is said, tends to give a fine tone. We heard the other day of a meek little boardinghouse diner speaking up and asking for another sardine on his toast.

OPPOSITION IN MANITOBA HAS THIRTY SEATS

Winnipeg. — Further ballot counting in the Manitoba election brought the combined opposition strength in the legislature to 30 against a total of 21 government candidates elected.

With two seats in doubt and two with deferred voting Premier John Bracken and his Liberal-Progressive followers were definitely placed as the largest group in the next legislature by a short of a working majority. Second largest group is the Conservatives with 16 members under Errick Wilton, youthful newly chosen leader.

Candidates declared elected on later count were James McLenaghen, in Kildonan-St. Andrews, and C. Renouf in Swan River, Conservatives; H. J. Lawrence in St. Boniface, C.C.F., and H. H. Wright in Emerson, Independent.

The party lineup was: Liberal-Progressives, 21; Conservatives, 16; C.C.F., five; Independents, three; Communist, one, and Social Credit, five. Liberal-Progressives were leading in one of the two remaining seats, C.C.F. in the other.

Re-election of Mr. McLenaghen in Kildonan-St. Andrews had been almost a foregone conclusion for he had piled up a substantial lead on the first count over C. E. Fillmore, Liberal-Progressive. The final count gave the Conservative a member a majority of 500.

Speculation as to a possible alignment of Liberal-Progressives with one of the smaller groups was rife but the government gave no indication as to its plans.

Government Gain

Shown To Be On Upgrade In Five Provinces

Ottawa.—Employment is on the upgrade in Canada, and each of the five economic areas showed a gain in the number of persons on the pay-roll during the month of July, as compared with June 1 and also in comparison with July 1, 1935, according to a report issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics.

Of the eight cities for which figures are available manufacturing alone was shown in Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, Winnipeg and Vancouver, while Montreal, Quebec and Windsor, Ont., showed declines.

Reports from 9,744 employers show 847,950 persons at work on July 1 compared with 963,401 the preceding month. On July 1, last year, 832,821 persons were employed. The gain of 24,504 was the biggest increase between June 1 and July 1 in the past seven years.

Contrary to the usual trend at July 1, employment in manufacturing showed a slight increase, 1,-000 persons, over the previous month with most of the gain recorded in the food, lumber and pulp and paper groups. Mining with the exception of coal, communications services, transportation and construction and maintenance also showed considerable improvement All the increases, with the exception of that in construction, exceeded the average gains from June 1 to July 1 for the past 15 years

At the same time seasonal declines were recorded in logging and in the factory group recessions were shown in leather, textile and iron and steel plants.

Has Chartered Yacht

King Edward To Cruise Along Dalmatian Coast For Few Weeks

London King Edward has chartered the yacht Nahlin for a three or four weeks' cruise along the Dalmatian coast. It was announced at Buckingham palace

The king will probably join the yacht in about 10 days at Dubrovnik Yugoslavia. He will be accompanied by three or four friends.

The vessel is the property of Lady Yule widow of Sir David Yule, former Anglo-Indian merchant. It is a twin screw schooner, originally costing $1,500 000, and is registered from Glasgow

The cruise will replace a projected vacation at Cannes, France, which was cancelled after the outbreak of the Spanish rebellion.

Bringing Gifts To Canada

London When Sir Percy Vincent, lord mayor of London, leaves here to attend the jubilee celebrations in Vancouver, he will take with him numerous gifts, including a massive silver relief of 18th century London, presented to Vancouver by the citizens of London, and a picture of the tomb in Petersham cemetery of Captain George Vancouver, after whom the Canadian city was named.

Appointed Freighter Resold

Montreal The Canadian Leader, a freighter sold by the Canadian government in the Montreal-Australian-New Zealand line, has been resold by that firm to the Tower Steamship Company of London, Eng. The 8,492 ton ship, laid up at present at Halifax, will be reconditioned and taken across the Atlantic in the next few weeks.

Build More Ships

Britain Plans Construction Of Two New Battleships

London.—Plans for construction of two new battleships included in the 1937 naval rearmament program were announced in the House of Commons by Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty.

Sir Samuel said construction would begin in January, 1937, with final details as to the cost to be negotiated later with the contractors.

"Arrangements for laying down these ships," the first lord told the commons, "are being made in full accord with the declared policy of His Majesty's government to press on with naval replacement and the new construction program with all possible speed."

The five-power Washington naval treaty with its limitations on defence, lapses at the end of this year and a tri-power accord comes into effect.

Under it wide latitude is provided the signatories Britain, France, and the United States with the power they exchange information on plans before construction is begun.

Japan is not a signatory of the new pact.

Sixteen-inch guns will be used on the two battleships under construction announced plans, in the hope other countries will follow that example in their policies.

Orders for the new men-of-war were given to Vickers, Armstrong, Ltd., at Barrow-in-Furness and the Cammell Laird Co., at Birkenhead.

Obtain Leave To Appeal

Privy Council Grants Petition Of The Canadian Government

London. — The judicial committee of the privy council has granted the petition of the Canadian government for leave to appeal to that body concerning the validity of several acts dealing with labor and employment passed by the Bennett government last year.

C. P. Plaxton represented the Dominion government. Ontario and British Columbia joined in petitioning for leave to appeal. Attorney-General Roebuck represented Ontario and J. E. deh Farris the Pacific coast province.

The Dominion petitions concern the validity of the act providing for one day's rest in seven; the act providing for a 48-hour week; the Minimum Wage Act and the Employment and Social Insurance Act The supreme court of Canada held the first three of these partly valid and the last one unconstitutional.

May Buy Cattle

Nova Scotia May Re-Stock Herds With Western Canadian Livestock

Halifax Hon. John A. McDonald, Nova Scotia minister of agriculture, said that the government had under consideration a plan to replenish the province's depleted herds with cattle from Western Canada's drouth lands.

"Cattle have been materially reduced in this province, especially in the eastern portion from the drouth of two years ago and a smaller-than-average crop last year, said Mr. McDonald

"We could pay as much as the abattoirs for the cattle, and if we could get the freight rates down it would prove of some benefit to our farmers," he added

Mr McDonald said Nova Scotia had exported the largest beef and forage crop "in many years" and desire for more cattle had been expressed by many farmers

Urges Help For Defence

Bristol Eng Stanley M Bruce Australian high commissioner in London and former prime minister of the commonwealth, in a speech here urged that the British dominions make a larger contribution toward the defence of the Empire

BALDWIN VOICES HOPE FOR PEACE OF THE WORLD

London.—Canadian veterans hated the British prime minister declared that if no better means than war can be found to settle disputes "the world deserves to perish." The last page of the Canadian Legion Magazine, which was published here by the Canadian Legion, was filled by a broad him outline a hope for the future on the evidence of comradeship existing today between men of the Great War's opposing armies, and attitude many of the world's present leaders, in the case of young potential leaders in war.

Prime Minister Baldwin, meeting the Canadian Vimy pilgrims in Westminster Hall, 700-year-old repository of present parliaments, greeted them after a brief illness from the grip of "the side of Britain" in the great crisis of 1914-1918.

Later the pilgrims veterans and their kin of those who died in the front—held service before the cenotaph in Whitehall, the service under Rt. Rev. Winnington Ingram, Bishop of London, beginning with "O Canada," and continuing with prayers, and the strain of "O God Our Help in Ages Past."

The deep tones of Big Ben struck once as Legion Standard Bearer "The Last Post." The banners of the legion, raises dipped in salute, and for a moment the great throng stood in silence. Then came reveille and the service ended with "God Save the King."

At Westminster Abbey a group of veterans paid tribute to Britain's unknown soldier. There the wreath was laid by Mrs. T. Wade Woods, of Winnipeg, mother of 11 sons who served in the war, five of whom did not return when "cease fire" was sounded.

Prime Minister Baldwin spoke briefly of the legion's large and fine organization, of the splendid manner for such an occasion as that delivered at the ceremony at Vimy Ridge Wednesday of morning, and the tumult of acclamation he held up his hand for silence. In a voice carry-ing to the remotest parts of the hall, he said:

"Old comrades and friends from Canada I am one who was present at the wonderful ceremony at Vimy can ever possibly forget it. For me personally it was an occasion I always be glad to have it brought back to me. I shall never forget it. I shall never forget the scene within my mind. I shall never forget the impression it made upon me. I shall never forget the feeling of the vast multitude assembled there. I shall never forget the feeling of the war but also of the peace that followed it

NEW COMMUNITY HALL IS OPENED AT ISLAY

ISLAY, Aug. 13—The new Islay community hall was officially opened last night when upwards of 250 people gathered on the first affair in the building, a very enjoyable dance. Practically every business man of the town assisted in making the event a decided success. The hall is one of the finest of its kind in rural Alberta, having facilities for all town activities including a fine maple floor, large stage, dressing rooms, cloak rooms and kitchen equipment.

Brothers Meet Here After 45 Years

Each Had Thought Other Died Some Years Ago

A surprise meeting took place in Vermilion last week when Charles Atkinson of Tyler, Texas, motored to Vermilion and here met his brother, Norman. They had not seen each other since 1891 and for the past number of years each had thought the other dead. The incident leading to this reunion after 45 years separation, occurred at Niagara Falls in July when Atkinson of Texas chanced in on Island gas well driller was engaged in drilling a well at Niagara Falls and here he accidentally met Charlie Atkinson of Vermilion, a son of Norman and his own nephew, who was relaying time overseas. Recalling this incident the Texas driller had to spend his vacation motoring this way and to visit Uncle Charlie. It was a real surprise on arriving, to find his brother Norman still hale and hearty, as well he imagined. Mr. Atkinson was accompanied by his wife. They spent an enjoyable week visiting Norman Atkinson and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Atkinson.

Board of Trade Endorses British Settler Movement

Resolution Passed at Regular Luncheon Held Last Week

Two weeks ago a delegation from the Alberta British Settlers Association waited on the Vermilion Board of Trade asking for a letter endorsing the action being taken by the A. B. S. body. A special committee was appointed by the board to inquire into the matter and at Monday's luncheon a week ago the following resolution was submitted by J. W. S. Mollison, and was passed unanimously by the members.

"That this board, having considered the representations made by officers of the Alberta British Settlers Association as representing settlers placed on land in the Vermilion district through different colonization schemes within the past ten years or so, with government assistance in one form or another, and without deciding on the merits or demerits of the grievances emphasized by those settlers through their spokesmen, feels, in justice to the district that an investigation be made at the instance of the British government either direct or through the Dominion government at Ottawa into the condition of these people as well as into the financial arrangements made and provided at the time of their settlement."

Preparations Made For Registration August 15 and 22

Polling Booths of Last Provincial Election to Be Used

Registration for the Vermilion constituency people for social credit dividends will take place on August 15 and August 22. The official in charge of the work for the entire Vermilion riding is Gilbert S. Shane. Places of registration are the polling booths of the provincial election of August 1935.

A registrar and assistants will be in attendance at each poll on Saturday August 15 so that anyone wishing to register may obtain the questionnaire and correct forms for the purpose of taking them home and studying them. These are to be filled out at home but not signed. On Saturday August 22, just one year after the Social Credit victory, these forms are to be taken back to the polls and signed in the presence of the registrar. Those booths on both the days Aug. 15 and Aug. 22, will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Furthermore there will be assistants at each polling place to help fill in the forms should anyone encounter difficulty with them.

Get your form on Saturday August 15, take it home and fill it in, return it on Saturday August 22 and sign it in the presence of the registrar.

Any person who fails to obtain the questionnaire form on August 15 may obtain one any time during the week following by applying to those in charge of the booths.

Offer of Utility Co. Is Not Considered

Vermilion Electric Light Plant Will Not Be Sold

No steps will be taken by the Town council looking to the sale of the electric light, power and steam heat plant to the Canadian Utilities company. This was decided upon at a special meeting held on Monday evening of this week. As announced in the Standard a few weeks ago the company submitted an offer to purchase the system for $50,000. The council took time to enquire into the matter and invited the company to send representatives to interview the members Monday night. The officials present Messrs McGregor and Hill outlined their proposal for purchase intimating there would be a reduction in the rates and changes effected in the street lighting pole lines and the plant with the purpose of giving greater efficiency and of bringing the plant up to the standard of other units operated by this company. There would be men kept employed in the year round and particularly in the winter time when the steam end would be in operation. They asked for permission to make a survey of the entire system and would then submit terms and conditions of purchase which they would be prepared to accept to the Utility Commission. The council gave the representations some serious thought after a good deal of discussion came to the conclusion that the plant was too valuable a source of revenue to the town to be disposed of and declined to give permission to the company to make the preliminary survey asked for.

Honor German War Dead

Canadian Olympians Place Wreath On Grave Of Unknown

(Canadian Press)

Canadian Olympians paid tribute to Germany's war dead, placing a wreath of maple leaves on the grave of the unknown soldier.

The ceremony, held in what was once the palace of Frederick the Great, attracted thousands promenading Unter Den Linden. It was the first in which an official Canadian party had honored the war dead of Germany since the armistice

Dr Josef Muller director of medical services for the department of persons and national health, represented the Canadian parliamentary Groupsd around the memorial with 30 members of the Dominion's Olympic team were represented also of the German foreign office and the British embassy

The Canadian athletes, both men and women, travelled downtown by bus and paraded the last two blocks to the memorial Wilhelm "Torchy" Peden, world famous professional bicycle racer from Victoria, and Tom Albans, coach of the Canadian rowing team, marched at the head of the parade carrying the wreaths.

A Remarkable Woman

Social Reform Worker In England Dies At 85

One of the most remarkable women of modern times died in London recently, at the age of 85, just when a great scheme of social reform which she started 30 years ago was coming to triumphant completion.

She was Dame Henrietta Barnett, foun of Hampstead Garden Suburb, who died at her house there, in South Square.

A friend of Queen Mary, who more than once visited the Garden Suburb to open new buildings Dame Henrietta was the widow of the late Canon S. A Barnett, who left a West End parish to work among the poor of Whitechapel.

She had a vast range of social activities, and her amazing health and energy up to the time of her breakdown just over 18 months ago she ascribed to five simple rules. They were:

Rise at 5.30 a.m. every day.

Work very hard;

Read newspapers carefully every day.

Eat very little,

Say prayers very often

Dame Henrietta threw herself wholeheartedly into her husband's work in the East End. They persuaded a number of undergraduates, including the late Arnold Toynbee, to spend their holidays with them in Whitechapel, and out of the enthusiasm for social service thus engendered grew the the world-famous institution known as Toynbee Hall.

How To Spend A Million

Interesting Contest Being Held In Middle-Western U.S. City

Fiction abounds with tales of the man who has a million dollars and doesn't know what to do with it, and once in a while it happens in real life

In the current Atlantic Monthly there appears the statement of such a one The anonymous gentleman, who is vouched for by his bankers lives in a middle-western city of 100 000 He is getting on and he wishes to leave the community a million dollars The town has ample educational, library, playground, and recreational facilities How, then shall he leave his million so that it will do the most good? He offers a $1.000 prize to the person giving him the best answer.

Here is, undoubtedly, the most interesting contest in many moons. The public is eternally invited to devise advertising slogans and meeting testimonials for various products, but telling a millionaire how to leave his money that is a real contest It sounds easy, but lest anyone thinks so, let him try to formulate a sane, workable plan for using a million dollars for the greatest public good. A million dollars to be used in a way that it shall benefit all, old and young, the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker It would tax the wisdom of Solomon or prodigacy of Tugwell Detroit Saturday Night.

Used Crude Instruments

Doctor In East India Performed Operation Under Difficulties

An eye operation performed on a woman in India with hair pins, crochet hooks and a pair of embroidery scissors as makeshift instruments was described to the East India Association recently by Sir Henry Tri-melow Holland He had been engaged in medical work in Baluchistan for 26 years, and is devoting his future to the raising of funds for rebuilding the hospital at Quetta.

"The woman had a double cataract," said Sir Holland, "refused to go to hospital, so I decided to operate under a jumper tree

"A woman's pervided me with a fine crochet hook, which acted as an iris hook From some hair pins we made a needle, found ready eye spectacles and a pair of embroidery scissors served for iris scissors I had with me some cocaine a cataract knife and a pair of Spartan forceps. I operated on both eyes and the old Pathan woman had an excellent result in spite of my treatment

Sir Henry also told of a native upon whom he operated when the man fell from a palm tree Immediately after the operation he was forced to go a camel and taken to Quetta the nearest railway station to be sent to hospital The man made a perfect recovery

Historic Sites

Two More Monuments To Commemorate Settlement Of The West

Erection of two more monuments which will commemorate in stone the saga of the settlement of the west are under consideration by the historic monuments and sites board, Ottawa, Judge F. W. Howay, New Westminster B.C., member of the board, announced in Winnipeg.

One will commemorate the old Dawson road from the head of Lake Superior to Winnipeg. It will probably be erected at the Kaministiquia fort of St. Anne des Chenes, 28 miles east of Winnipeg, Judge Howay said, and may take the form of a cairn Tentative plans indicate it will be built this year, for dedication next year.

The second monument will commemorate the founding of Fort Maurepas at the mouth of the Winnipeg river by Le Verendrye. This monument will, according to Judge Howay, not only commemorate the founding of the fort, but will emphasize also the general trading importance of the spot.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Small Thanks For Favors

Free Publicity Space In Newspapers Seldom Acknowledged

We have often reflected upon the slowness of people to thank editors for the favors which newspapers do for them. Individuals and organizations are constantly asking for publicity to assist them in promoting various kinds of worthy causes Space is the only commodity aside from circulation which publishers have to sell, and this is a fact which too many people forget. Some are even critical of the favorable notices which we give them and their projects. A still greater number forget to make any acknowledgment of the courtesy extended to them. We have in mind a biblical instance of ingratitude in which only one in ten was thoughtful enough to return with thanks on his lips and in his face.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

AUGUST 16

SOWING AND REAPING

Golden text: Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Galatians 6:7.

Lesson: Galatians 6:1-10.

Devotional reading: Galatians 5:1-16-26.

Explanations And Comments

The Law of Harvest, verses 7 and 8. Make no mistake—God is not mocked. "God cannot be trifled with contempt without provoking his righteous punishment." (Schaff.) A man will reap just what he sows; he who sows for the flesh will reap destruction from the flesh, and he who sows for the Spirit will reap life eternal from the Spirit." (McFatt's translation). We usually think of there verses as referring to retribution for wrong-doing, but there is also the happy meaning which is equally true, that "he who sows bountiful reaps bountifully." (Isa. 32:8).

Well Gently With Another's Trespass, verse 1. Even if anyone is detected in some compass, but if you are spiritual, you must set the offender right in a spirit of gentleness; let each of you look to himself, in case he, too, is tempted." (Moffatt's translation). Set the offender right: "It is a metaphor taken from a dislocated limb brought back by the skilful and tender surgeon into its place." The man who has suddenly fallen into sin should be dealt with leniently, for he is very different from a hardened sinner, who has under similar circumstances thou may yet yield and sin and need a similar forgiveness.

No Good, verse 10.—Do then since our reward is sure—let us make use of every opportunity to do good to all, and especially to those followers of Christ whose faith makes them our household.—Schaff.

The Reward Is Sure, verse 9. "Let us not grow weary in well-doing" was that yet weary in well-doing generally haven't done much at it. When you come to hand up your records. The weariness is usually at the beginning and end of the workers from the quitters." In due season we shall reap, if we faint not "If we are putting thoroughness, sympathy, courage, kindness, and honest toil into our daily tasks we are putting eternal truths into the life of the world. Eternal truths will be the harvest" (Malcolm McLeod).

Friends For A Week

Hon. R. B. Bennett And Mayor McGeer Fraternize At Vancouver

(Canadian Press)

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett was nothing less than "Sdus Achates freely translated, "faithful friend" to Mayor G. G. McGeer after they had fraternized in opening the Vancouver golden jubilee. The Latin phrase is Mr. Bennett's but he could find it with, "for a week."

Acknowledging a copy of a photograph of the two men, Bloody Judy X showing Mr. Bennett and the mayor and the engineer and conductor of the Canadian Pacific train that will arrive there 50 years ago, Mr. Bennett wrote to Mr. McGeer:

"The incident is historic. I fancy it is seldom in the history of transportation that an engineer and conductor have had the honor of having been able, 50 years afterwards, to taken a train over the same route Mr. Bennett is doing everything in his little drifiuod then they would be photographed with the mayor of Vancouver and his fellow Achates for a week."

Some brushing up of rusty Latin revealed that Sdus Achates was staunch friend of Aeneas. The phrase has become synonymous with "faithful friend," and Mayor McGeer was very pleased.

Upper Berths in Type

Two-Storey Machine Just Designed With Carry 60 Passengers

We are not quite sure if you can go up to bed in the Zeppelins but you may soon do so in a two-storey sleeper plane. Frank Hawks, for example, comes word that Anthony Fokker has designed a "two-storey" passenger plane which will carry 60 passengers with adequate sleeping accommodations, dressing rooms and the like.

The new "F-56" is described as merely an "enlargement" of the Fokker "F-36," now in service on the "London, Amsterdam and Berlin route." The latter carries 32 passengers comfortably. The new "F-56", equipped with most of the modern conveniences, is not considered an experiment since its design on smaller scale has met all the tests of regular commercial service. Its maximum speed is figured at 225 miles an hour and its "cruising speed" at 200 miles in high altitudes and 125 miles at 6,000 feet. Its "absolute ceiling" is reached, we are told at 26,000 feet, while the "service ceiling" is 24,700 feet.

The famous Dutch designer apparently foresees an era of extremely "high-flying" air liners that will make their long-distance flights at altitudes around 20,000 feet. Nothing is said about the passenger cabin of the hotel-type cruiser, but presumably his design will adopt it to transoceanic service and provide food and sleeping quarters for the long flights oversea routes where refueling stations must be few and far between. —Brandon Sun.

Germany Buying Back Steel

Scrap Metal From Scraps Flew Derelicts Being Re-Smelted

The German battleships surrendered after the armistice, they are going back to Germany as part of their modern navy.

Their steel plates and guns are cut into suitable lengths of scrap metal. Germany is the biggest buyer of this, and her demands have lately become intense

The scrap metal is taken to the Germania steel works where they remelted into ships' plates for warships.

Incidentally, many of the steel plates of the liner Queen Mary were forged from the remelted steel of the German battleships, and some steel on board her also came from the Mauretania.

Back of them the sweat-grimed workman crouched away from the tomb. Their work was done, but they were still plainly uneasy, though there was not a word from any of them

There was no light in the place save that which came from the flickering candles carried by Professor Ellison and John Lessing. Their eerie lights were awesome, as they played over the many sarcophagus which plainly had not been touched in centuries until the laborious work of the archaeologists and workmen had pried it from its place

Starr felt choking as the light went from spot to spot, over the walls to pick out the beautiful paintings. That smell of the grave was overpowering, terrible. The silence, too, was terrifying, unnatural, even after the clamor to which they had become used.

Then the disc of her father's light came to rest at last upon a spot high in the wall, over the sarcophagus. It was ancient, Egyptian, but not writing and of course Starr could not make it out, but her father did. He cried out in excitement.

"The famous curse of Tut-Amen-Ra! We've found it, Lessing! We, too, are famous!"

A strange chill settled over Starr, so that everything in that ghastly place danced before her eyes in the flickering torchlight—the curiously shaped bowls, the hammered gold and silver, strangely shaped bottles, queer, tall ancient images They meant nothing to her. She could think of but one thing, and all the presentiments crowded up into her throat to choke her more surely than that terrible smell of the grave hidden for so many thousands of years from the outside world. She cried out sharply:

"Curse! What do you mean?"

He explained briefly. "It means, my dear," he said, his voice shaking oddly hushed, "that in thirty centuries no living soul has passed those doors Those inscriptions spell a warning to the first who dares to violate the sanctity of the tomb Don't let it frighten you, child, the same curse has been found many times before. It's superstition is outworn."

But was it superstition? Down in her heart Starr could not make herself believe it. That curse was a warning! A warning of death!

Starr glanced about her fearfully, overcome by the weirdness of all the place. The heat, too, as well as the tomb-odor, was almost insupportable. Her head was reeling, she felt as if she would swoon, but her brain was beating out an insistent warning It was not of the place alone that she was afraid. There was the outside, too. They were isolated from civilization, were camped at the edge of nowhere, beside a vast cemetery of dead and gone Egyptian royalties. She could imagine anything happening here!

Her panic grew by leaps and bounds as she conversed by the guard fully painted rock tomb walls

"Daddy! I'm afraid! Afraid! Let's not go any farther! Let's not investigate it must be" hysterical cause came true! Suppose we do bring down on ourselves the vengeance of their gods!"

But the two excited scholarly men had no time to listen to the hysterics of a frightened girl. It seemed hours to her, cowering in the background, looking grotesquely out of place while they explored the tomb before approaching the sarcophagus, examining over the stopped Seal mud, the curious jeweled cups, the bowls, the golden, jewel-encrusted perfume burners, the gilded couch, carved in ancient design, the dozens of things that would add to Professor Ellison's collection and his fame. In the half-darkness, Starr looked like something out of the past herself, as her face glowed luminously white against her black hair, and brought out the frightened mystery of her long black eyes.

The rocky, painted walls were closing with dampness. Never in his life had Starr imagined anyone could feel so terribly shut in, trapped. She was panicked through the doorway, she noticed that the Egyptians who had been in charge of the Arab workmen had prostrated themselves on their faces. She was not the only one who was afraid.

Her father was tracing the hieroglyphics on the top of one of the two inner lotus sarcophagi which rested inside the big open granite one.

"Tut-Amen-Ra!" He moved his head across in the second one. "Amazing! I knew it, Lessing! I knew it!"

Lessing's sad! Starr felt herself infected with some of the explorers' excitement, but it was a strange excitement, pregnant with vague foreboding.

The two men were carefully lifting out the sarcophagus of Tut-Amen-Ra, almost like the body of the ancient priestess herself in its startling representation of the one who lay within it. Their shoulders gigantic, grotesque, danced over the painted walls. The only sound was of tearing cloth, which Starr didn't catch From the mummy inside.

It had been a ghastly enough business at first, when they had all merely stood still and looked, in the blue-white light, like some awful nightmare scene on a poorly lighted screen, and with all their blue-white faces streaked. It was more terrible now that they were actually doing work to life and become a moving picture, as if the reading of that curse had given life to the dead, and they were moving and the terrifying picture to spring into action flitting in ghostly fashion through the shallow blue-white light.

Starr clenched her teeth hard, trembling from head to foot, as her father's face, with its high-pitched, delirious voice, came to her.

"It's the curse of Tut-Amen-Ra! It's got me, Ellison! It'll get you, too, and Starr!"

Her father was a broken man after the death of his friend, his life-long companion. He did not explore any further into the forbidden resting places of the long-dead lovers, nor did he tell any of the treasures which he had gloated over. He never again looked at them.

Starr left Egypt immediately and he and Starr returned to America and the New England home where they lived and loved three thousand years ago. A hint of her mood, a shrug, a shaped bottle, a queer, tall ancient image They meant nothing to her. She could think of but one thing, and all the presentiments crowded up into her throat to choke her more surely than that terrible smell of the grave hidden for so many thousands of years from the outside world. She cried out sharply:

"Curse! What do you mean?"

He explained briefly. "It means, my dear," he said, his voice shaking oddly hushed, "that in thirty centuries no living soul has passed those doors Those inscriptions spell a warning to the first who dares to violate the sanctity of the tomb Don't let it frighten you, child, the same curse has been found many times before. It's superstition is outworn."

But was it superstition? Down in her heart Starr could not make herself believe it. That curse was a warning! A warning of death!

Starr glanced about her fearfully, overcome by the weirdness of all the place. The heat, too, as well as the tomb-odor, was almost insupportable. Her head was reeling, she felt as if she would swoon, but her brain was beating out an insistent warning It was not of the place alone that she was afraid. There was the outside, too. They were isolated from civilization, were camped at the edge of nowhere, beside a vast cemetery of dead and gone Egyptian royalties. She could imagine anything happening here!

Her panic grew by leaps and bounds as she conversed by the guard fully painted rock tomb walls

"Daddy! I'm afraid! Afraid! Let's not go any farther! Let's not investigate it must be" hysterical cause came true! Suppose we do bring down on ourselves the vengeance of their gods!"

But the two excited scholarly men had no time to listen to the hysterics of a frightened girl. It seemed hours to her, cowering in the background, looking grotesquely out of place while they explored the tomb before approaching the sarcophagus, examining over the stopped Seal mud, the curious jeweled cups, the bowls, the golden, jewel-encrusted perfume burners, the gilded couch, carved in ancient design, the dozens of things that would add to Professor Ellison's collection and his fame. In the half-darkness, Starr looked like something out of the past herself, as her face glowed luminously white against her black hair, and brought out the frightened mystery of her long black eyes.

The rocky, painted walls were closing with dampness. Never in his life had Starr imagined anyone could feel so terribly shut in, trapped. She was panicked through the doorway, she noticed that the Egyptians who had been in charge of the Arab workmen had prostrated themselves on their faces. She was not the only one who was afraid.

Her father was tracing the hieroglyphics on the top of one of the two inner lotus sarcophagi which rested inside the big open granite one.

"Tut-Amen-Ra!" He moved his head across in the second one. "Amazing! I knew it, Lessing! I knew it!"

Lessing's sad! Starr felt herself infected with some of the explorers' excitement, but it was a strange excitement, pregnant with vague foreboding.

The two men were carefully lifting out the sarcophagus of Tut-Amen-Ra, almost like the body of the ancient priestess herself in its startling representation of the one who lay within it. Their shoulders gigantic, grotesque, danced over the painted walls. The only sound was of tearing cloth, which Starr didn't catch From the mummy inside.

It had been a ghastly enough business at first, when they had all merely stood still and looked, in the blue-white light, like some awful nightmare scene on a poorly lighted screen, and with all their blue-white faces streaked. It was more terrible now that they were actually doing work to life and become a moving picture, as if the reading of that curse had given life to the dead, and they were moving and the terrifying picture to spring into action flitting in ghostly fashion through the shallow blue-white light.

Starr clenched her teeth hard, trembling from head to foot, as her father's face, with its high-pitched, delirious voice, came to her.

"It's the curse of Tut-Amen-Ra! It's got me, Ellison! It'll get you, too, and Starr!"

Her father was a broken man after the death of his friend, his life-long companion. He did not explore any further into the forbidden resting places of the long-dead lovers, nor did he tell any of the treasures which he had gloated over. He never again looked at them.

Movie Actors

Motion Pictures Draw Men And Women From All Walks Of Life

Motion pictures draft men and women from virtually all walks of life. There are lawyers, engineers and bankers who are actors and directors to-day. Seamstresses, carpenters, athletes, college boys and models are enjoying success, too, but the picture business didn't know one of its new stars was a school teacher until Madeleine Carroll identified herself as a teacher of algebra in an English girls' school before she entered the show business

Teaching, according to Madeleine, should be ideal training for an actress, since every teacher, before she can hope to be successful, must have control of her emotions. This quality is a prime requisite for an interpreter of roles before a camera, Miss Carroll says.

Radio Interference

Britain To Take Steps To Prevent Jamming Of Receiving Sets

Very soon, if the postmaster-general of Britain has his way, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners and all electrical appliances will have to be suppressed in the interests of radio listeners. But the word "suppressed" is used only in technical sense

It does not mean that these valuable household gadgets must be discarded, but that only that they must be prevented from causing a noise in nearby wireless sets.

After three years' investigation, the committee on electrical interference, has reported to the postmaster-general and he is to act on the recommendation It should be illegal to allow electrical apparatus to jam radio sets. It is expected legislation will be introduced at the House of Commons in the autumn.

French Mineral Water

Prosperous Industry In France Is Menaced By Water

Selling water has become a prosperous industry in France. It gives employment directly or indirectly to more than 130,000 persons, and bottling in 50,000,000 francs per year (about $2,300,000) in taxes to the government, and more than 50,000,000 bottles of French mineral water are exported abroad annually. These figures do not include the value of French thermal resources just completed.

The olden days taking the cure was often a matter of clever guesswork it succeeded or it didn't. To-day, in the laboratories, chemists and physicians devoted to the science of hydrology

The railways of France give a reduction of 25 per cent in first-class and 20 per cent. in the others to all persons taking the French thermal station to take the cure

Power In Coal

One pound of coal, blazing under a modern locomotive boiler will turn loose enough energy to haul more than a ton of freight for a single mile of track. That estimate was made by J. J Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, who said the carrier had increased their efficiency in the use of fuel 44 per cent since 1920

Population Of Canada

Estimated population of Canada in 1935 neared the 11 million mark for a new high figure of 10,949,000, according to the 1936 edition of Canada Year Book just off the press This is an increase of 73,000 over the official census figure of 1871 It is a gain of over 100,000 from the 1934 estimate of 10 853 000

Gift For The King

"The King's House" Presented By Body Of Trades People

King Edward has formally received "The King's House—the bungalow built by the Royal Warrantholders' Association, the body of trades people who supply the royal household.

This gift was intended originally as a jubilee present for King George it stands in its own grounds at Burhill overlooking the Surrey hills, with a distant vista of Sussex. It cost $250,000

In the study, panelled with Canadian silkwood, the king made the first signature in the visitors' book and was presented with an album containing the names of the 1,000 members of the Royal Warrantholders' Association

One interesting feature in the study is a hidden cocktail cabinet in the wall. Every room in the house has an electric clock and nearly every room its own loud speaker hidden in the wall

Wanted Service

I like the story of what the thrifty man expected for his money. With his two boys he entered a Parisian-ese restaurant and ordered a bottle of lemonade and three glasses They were served, and father and boys sat around. The waiters were interested. Presently their chief walked that way

Are you the manager?" inquired the father

"Yes sir, I am."

Then," demanded the man, "why is it that the orchestra is not playing?"

Little Helps For This Week

In Him we live, and move and have our being. Acts 17.28.

Yea in Thy life our little lives are ended,
Into Thy depths our trembling spirits fall
In Thee is finished, gathered, comprehended
All beside the sea her waves
Thou holdest all!

Where then is our God? You may His is everywhere; then show me anywhere that you have met Him. You declare Him everlasting; then tell me any moment He has been with you. You believe Him ready to help those who are tempted and to lift those that are bowed down, then tell me when you knew you received His help. These are the testing questions by which we may learn whether we too have raised our altar to an "unknown God" and pay the worship of the blind, or whether we commune with Him "in whom we live, and move, and have our being."—J. Martineau.

A Real Cosmopolitan

"Pat," says Mike to his workmate, "what's a cosmopolitan?"

Pat thought for a moment, then said. "Suppose there was a Russian living in England married to an Italian wife, sitting at a French window in a room with a Turkey carpet on the floor. If this man drank American cream soda while listening to a German band playing 'Come back to Erin' after supper of Dutch cheese made up as a Welsh rarebit, then begorra, you're safe in calling that guy a cosmopolitan"

Sell Wine By Hour

To cut down the surplus of wine, inmates of Sachsenhausen prison are selling the liquor by the hour instead of the glass. In all wine shops have appeared the following notices: "Drink all you can in an hour—for suspence." The customers are clocked, and they pay the equivalent of 12 cents, and at the end of the hour they are asked for another sixpence or told to leave without delay.

The action of the Edmonton Board of Trade in appealing to Prime Minister King to prohibit the Aberhart government from issuing "prosperity certificates" appears to us to be quite childish. Property has to tax wise a position to be caught doing any thing like that even if he had the power which he has not. The federal government can declare the Alberta dollar which is issued illegal value it if so wishes but the power of veto is no very seldom exercised by the Dominion authorities that it is only a remote possibility it will do so in this instance. Either action would be flying in the face of the expressed mandate of a huge majority of the voters of the province and we cannot think it come to the conclusion that such a will do neither one nor the other. It again the issue of script is the constitution to the Bank of Canada that I refer. The humble writer has that body can start the machines in motion to question its legality. All he has to do is to lay a statement of complaint before it immediately initiate the necessary action and the courts will very quickly decide the question for him.

Age and Mental Capacity

If these days when much is heard of proposals to retire the elderly to allow youth to take their places, the aged and those who have passed what is commonly understood as the years of their prime will derive a good deal of comfort from recent discoveries of eminent psychologists.

In brief, it has been discovered by natural tests, not promulgated as theories, that (1) Mental power does not decline with age, contrary to popular misconception and (2) That the ability of adults of advancing years to learn new things is almost as great as that of youth

The first-mentioned discovery that the mind does not grow old in step with declining physical powers, is the result of tests made by Dr Irving Lorge psychologist of Teachers' College Columbia University but according to Albert Wiggam in an article in the Reader's Digest older people require a little more time than their more youthful contemporaries to learn, at the same mental conclusions, the additional time required increasing somewhat with advancing years. In other words, there is no decline in mental capacity as one grows older, but there is a slowing down in the speed of mental processes

As the result of a recent revision of mental tests given some years ago to hundreds of people ranging in age from ten to 70 years of age, in which all the tested were limited to time in answering the questions put to them Dr Lorge found that with a power premium added to compensate for lack of speed the older age groups not only showed no loss of intellectual power but 'the people of 50 and 60 had higher scores than those around 25 This increase," he adds, "may have been partly or largely due to the death of the slower and duller people."

Another discovery in regard to the findings of Professor Edward L. Thorndike that older people have as great an ability to learn as youth, at least up to the age of 50 and 55, the older generations not only have no reason to believe that they have been "put on the shelf" but have good reason to decide that they are as valuable an asset to society as they were 20 or 30 years ago.

Dr Thorndike's tests resulted in the general conclusion that "adults up to at least 45 can learn new things about as well as young people in their late teens; and that, while learning ability seems to decline very slowly from age 20 on, this small decline is offset in many cases by the older persons' interest in the subject, their feeling of its immediate practical value, and other factors, so that the real mental output of people up to 50 or 55 is often greater than that of people of about the same intelligence, working at the same tasks at 20 or 25."

Summing up his own conclusion as the result of his tests, Dr. Lorge said "As far as mental ability is concerned, there need be no retiring age. The probabilities are that the older a person becomes, the more valuable he becomes. He possesses the same mental power he had in his young manhood plus his wealth of experience and knowledge of his particular job. These are things that no youngster, however brilliant, can pick up. For the same reason there is very definite value to the idea of 'older statesmen in politics and business.'

These definite discoveries, established by exhaustive tests, should result in the re-establishment of confidence in their own powers on the part of the older generations and should serve to remind people of advancing years that there is no occasion for them to retire into their shells under a misinformed impression that they are "back numbers" and that there is no necessity to relegate themselves to mental arm chairs.

On the contrary, the announcement of these proven discoveries should stimulate the older folk, who have already accustomed themselves to the idea that their mental powers are waning because of advancing years to again come out in the open and resume the place which their respective warrant in the life of the family, the community and the nation. No longer need they imagine that they are relegated to the essentials of happy and successful lives mental capacity and ability to learn

To again quote Dr Lorge "As the years advance, we should with quiet confidence allow ourselves a little greater latitude for time, but as far as mental power is concerned, I believe, we can now be assured that we need not allow ourselves any handicap at all."

Not An Easy Job

English Visit Finds It Impossible To Please People

Who'd be a parson?

Listen to what Rev. C. Post Children, vicar of St. James church, in the Walthamstow suburb of London has to say about his job in his parish magazine:

If he is devout he is accused of "spending all his time in that church of his." If the visits his parish he is "always putting his nose into other people's business." If he does not, they say, "we might be dead and he none the wiser."

If he tries to meet the wishes of his people he "hasn't a mind of his own." If he carries out his own policy in his own way he "has no respect for other people's feelings."

There's this to be said about the birthday card you receive from your life insurance company they send best wishes and really mean it.

If you have anything pleasant to say put it on paper, but guard it, if you must quarrel, should always be by word of mouth.

To Study Communications

Empires Problems To Be Studied By Experts Gathered In England

The whole problems of Empire telegraphic communications will be examined by a committee of representatives of the dominions and colonies, under the chairmanship of Sir Campbell Stuart, chairman of the Imperial Communications Advisory committee and a native of Montreal.

In an address to the summer school of the Royal Empire Society, Edward Wilshaw, chairman of Cables and Wireless, Limited, announced the proposed examination.

Emphasizing that empire telegraphic communications constituted a vital part of the defence problems, Wilshaw pointed out that although the British Empire had pioneered in the matter of long distance communications, but that her position was now being seriously challenged.

There was grave danger, he said, that these communications were becoming wholly uneconomic

The governments of the Empire had agreed on the formation of the committee he said and he was confident a satisfactory solution would be found

Biggest Short Wave Station

B.B.C. is Going To Spend $1,250,000 On Work At Daventry

The British Broadcasting Corp will have spent $1,250,000 on making Daventry the biggest short wave broadcasting station in the world by the end of this year.

Six transmitters and a complicated system of 72 aerials with reflectors will give up to 100 per cent. better reception in the remote parts of the empire than does the existing equipment. A full 24-hour service will be possible if needed instead of the present 17½-hour service.

One of the transmitters radiating two beams in opposite directions will be able to serve South Africa and Canada simultaneously.

The government is determined to encourage the B.B.C. with "The Prestige of England." Germany with 10 transmissons a day already has a vast "empire" broadcasting service.

Every effort is being made to have all six of the Daventry transmitters working at maximum efficiency in time for the proposed world-wide coronation broadcasts.

Challenge And Opportunity

Co-operative Movement Offers Opportunity To Canadian South

"If I were a young man today and was sincerely interested in agriculture," declared Dr. Sanderson Barfoot, in which I felt reasonably sure of being able to render a real service; if I were a man of business barfoot, ing, inspired compassions, I would associate myself with the co-operative movement.

"A worker in the co-operative movement daily faces both the challenge and the opportunity to draw on every atom of intelligence he possesses; to apply every bit of his power and courage; to make every inch of progress that is in his capable character.

"Economic freedom, spiritual freedom are the greatest possible possessions of the farmer. Regimentation kills freedom. The co-operative movement stands for freedom for him to safeguard his independence."—H. E. Babcock, manager, Co-operative League Federation Exchange.

Denies Favorable Comment At World Congress At Leipzig

The Canadian Department of Agriculture announced receipt of a cable from the Canadian delegation to the Leipzig, Germany, World Poultry Congress, saying Canada's exhibition of 60 birds had drawn favorable comment from visitors who were impressed by the birds' vitality and liveliness

Five official delegates from Canada are attending the Congress, among from 60 nations The Canadians are headed by F. C. Elford of Ottawa, Dominion poultry husbandman and former president of the congress, and F. C. Numrich, director of publicity and extension of the Department of Agriculture.

Pedorwski In Films

Reported He Has Consented To Make — Are Available To Millions

Ignace Jan Paderewski, whose genius has thrilled music lovers the world over for nearly half a century, is said to have consented to make his art available to millions through the medium of the cinema, it became known.

The master pianist and post-war premier of Poland is to take part in a film now being made at the Dougan Heath studio in London.

In the film, Paderewski is scheduled to play Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata, always the piece of music heard in his concert programs, and selections from Chopin's works.

Honor Memory Of Haig

Vimy Veterans Remember Commander Of British Armies In France

The ancient abbey at Dryburgh, Scotland, whose ruins have for four centuries looked over the rippling River Tweed, was the locale of a service which saw the homage of the government and people of Canada paid to the memory of Field Marshal Haig of Bemersyde, who commanded the British armies in France during the war.

At the same time a wreath of poppies and Canadian maple leaves was deposited on the simple soldier's cross which marks the sepulchre of Haig

Rev. John Kelman, minister of Fairbank Presbyterian church, Toronto, and national representative of the tuberculous veterans' section of the Canadian Legion, was the preacher at the special service which was attended by the members of the Vimy pilgrimage, representatives of the Canadian government and many Scottish dignitaries.

The Toronto minister recalled the "scurrilous attacks" on the memory of Haig after the war, and spoke the bold enough to launch them only when he's great soul was silenced forever." "These have been met with calmness, with dignity and unflinching courage by Lady Haig, widow of the dead commander.

War-Blinded M.P. Gave Speech In Broadcasting Debate

It was a surprise to most M.P.'s to see Sir Ian Fraser using notes for his speech in the broadcasting debate Sir Ian is the war-blinded M P. who was responsible for getting Braille type for the printing of free wireless licenses.

The notes he used were embossed in Braille on light brown cards rather thinner than playing cards. Each card contained only one or two lines, leaving a wide margin for the left of the sheet. Anglo-Russian Trade

Financial Agreement Establishing Credit For Soviet Orders

An Anglo-Russian commercial agreement establishing a £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) credit for Soviet orders for British exports was announced in London by Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade.

Russian orders are to be placed by Sept. 30, 1937. Runciman said the agreed trade arrangements also gives formal assurance that Russia intends to place orders up to the full limit of the credit. They will not, however, include munitions.

Runciman also announced suspension of debt collection measures in the resumption of trade. Italy, he said, was unwilling to accept any arrangement in regard to debts which could be considered "adequate."

At the same time Italy is imposing severe restrictions on imports from the United Kingdom, he stated.

Old Italian Theatre Found

Combined Roller Skating Rink To Time Of The Caesars

Discovery of an Augustan age theatre, regarded as one of the most important archaeological finds in Italy in recent years, has been announced. Elves remnants of the magnificent building have been uncovered in the well-preserved centuries-old building.

It was found on the site of the ancient town of Cosinum and among the relics yielded were inscriptions, statues, money and fragments of marble dating back to the time of the Caesars.

Cosinum was the ancient Italian town where Mark Antony was reputed to have he'd his orgies and where, at the foot of a mountain, the Romans constructed a still-existing amphitheatre.

Hens Too Busy

Deer are far too busy, according to L. Fletcher of Chesterville, who recently applied to the Ontario Department of Agriculture for protection from the animals. Mr. Fletcher planted a garden twice this year only to have a herd of about 20 deer destroy it in nocturnal raids. He estimated the deer have consumed about 5,000 cauliflowers and 3,000 heads of late cabbage.

Theatres in Russia

Eleven Thousand Motion Picture Palaces To Be In Operation

Eleven thousand sound equipped motion picture theatres will be in operation in the Soviet Union by the end of 1936, according to government plans. The number of theatres, motion picture houses and circuses of all types is expected to reach 44,000, an increase of 8,000 over 1935 figures.

New theatres will be built in Moscow, Leningrad, Alma-Ata, Kazan, Sinsferopol, Ulan-Ude, Chelyabinsk, Bikinsk, Karkov, Ashkhabad and many other cities.

Construction of the country's largest motion picture theatre has been completed in Leningrad. It carries out the traditional "moorish palace." The facade of the five-story building is adorned with 10 pillars of Kavan granite. The interior of the building is faced with marble and adorned with bas-reliefs. Seats are provided for 1,500 spectators.

LEFTISTS EXECUTE MANY PRISONERS FOR DISLOYALTY

Hendaye (On the France-Spanish frontier)—Between 5,000 and 10,000 executions of prisoners suspected of disloyalty to the leftist regime have taken place in Madrid since the revolt began, an important French personage who crossed the border from Spain told the Havas correspondent here.

"The arming of the populace by the government is having varied results," he declared. "In general the future results of this decision are terrifying."

"The proletarian movement which swept the capital when the short-lived Martinez Barrio government was formed, which led to the downfall, inspired the greatest animosity among the thinking elements of the population.

"It is the same for the numerous summary executions which have taken place since the beginning of the rebel movement and which still continue.

"The Madrid prisons are jammed. From time to time a truck arrives and takes a few prisoners to the Clan de Campo, one of the Madrid parks. It returns to the jail empty and leaves again for new trips.

"In the jails the prisoners are lined up by the dozens and mowed down with machine guns. In the first few days of the revolt, victims were left lying where they fell. Soon the odor in those districts became horrible. Now they are ordered that the bodies be buried in newly-dug ditches, and lime was poured over the putrefying corpses.

"According to some, 10,000 ended their jail terms in the Clan de Campo; according to others, 5,000."

The manner in which these figures were reached was the number who disappeared, given out by semi-official and authentic sources.

"The population' in a state of fear, got into the habit of walking the streets unshaved, unwashed, half-dressed.

"The city itself is in dirty negligee. Many of the wealthy have down Olbera are deserted. The streets are dirty.

"Autombiles taken over for military purposes sweep through the streets at high speed, filled with men and women with reversed rifles in their hands. A number of the speeding cars hurtle onto the sidewalks, their fenders pick up pedestrians smashed up. The Gran Via will soon have no street sign left.

"Each day there are new mobilizations Each day many trucks and private cars take new contingents to the mountain with reversed rifles in their hands. A number of the Empire Shipping Lines

Sir Edward Beatty Is Organizing To Meet Competition In The Pacific

Reports that empire shipping lines in the Pacific are getting together under the leadership of Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and are organizing to meet foreign competition are discussed in an editorial in the London Daily Mail.

This would indeed be a welcome step," says the newspaper. "Sir Edward Beatty is facing the world's competition of American vessels." It continues. "These latter have received large subsidies and operate at an aid the coastal reservation which closes to British liners the trade between such points as the United States and Honolulu.

The British government ought therefore to grant a very handsome subsidy to the British lines to enable us the position. It is now or never if the British lines are to be saved or they reserve funds are exhausted.

If Beatty can induce 'pay' into the governments concerned and secure adequate British service in the Pacific he will have made yet another immense contribution to the welfare of the British empire."

Huge Electrical Machine For Controlling Speedcrs Of The Ship

A huge electric "traffic cop" for those mystery speeders of the underwater rays neared completion in the University of Chicago laboratory of Dr Arthur Holly Compton, noted physicist.

It was designed on the same general principle as "speed traps" for automobile motorists. The idea was to pull them out of line as raced along, slow them down, and take their finger prints."

Because the rays are believed to travel almost as fast as light which beats everything else by whizzing along at 186,300 miles a second powerful electric currents are required to break them even slightly.

Thus the "traffic cop" is a 15-ton magnet capable of producing an attraction in a cubic foot of air 40 000 times as great as the earth's magnetic pull.

Was Useful Gift

King Edward Always Able To Make Appropriate Speech

When King Edward (as Prince of Wales) was in Canada and had to make a speech at almost every railway division point, people said his speeches were written by a secretary. When, years later, he began appearing at important public functions at home and abroad, with his speeches showing a maturity, it was condescendingly admitted that perhaps he improved on the manuscript of a "ghost." To certain people, always wise about what goes on in high place, no statesman or ruler ever has a mind of his own.

No 'ghost' could have written the little speech which King Edward made to 8,000 Canadian Vimy pilgrims at Buckingham Palace. Yet, impromptu as it was, made upon impulse, it was a model of its kind. John Morley once said that a good speech depended upon where it was made. Not a word was made, and what was said, adding the gay cynicism that the least important was the place where it was going for Morley to have said. A good speech depends almost mainly upon one thing: whether it is appropriate. If a speaker can feel and touch the mood of an occasion, if, in other words, he can have a sense of proportion, then he is speaking well.

What made King Edward's speech to Vimy pilgrims so memorable was its appropriateness. He was not speaking as a Monarch on a great State occasion. He was speaking as a war comrade to old comrades on a festival occasion. Hence the opening touch of reverence regarding Sir Julian Hedge, the quick passage to the happier circumstances of this day, the touch of humor, followed by a simple welcome to Buckingham Palace, the sincere wish for a happy journey home. In thought and simple diction, in feeling, in humor, in poetry and artificiality, no speech could be happier.

The secret is not wont to speak this thin. Nor great rulers. Stalin speaks like a page from Marx. Hitler is reminiscent of the worst in Nietzsche. Mussolini recalls Napoleon. Yet, worse than these are the ordinary run of statesmen. Every time they get upon their feet, think they must imitate Burke. It is the fact of talking that makes public speaking a plague.—Ottawa Journal.

Too Much Borrowing

President Of Columbia University Has Warning For Nations

Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, back from a European tour, warns that nations heaping debts at the rate of $10,000,000,000 a year by unemployment relief spending, may reach the end of their borrowing tether in another year. Restore the world's buying power, he says, or we face a "cabalistic crisis" in the not distant future.

Dr. Butler has a prescription to prevent the world's economic breakdown: Governmental confidence, free capital and credit markets and thus cause trade to expand normally. This would bring about an immense increase in national income, relief needs would be lessened and budgets could be balanced.—Detroit News.

Von Ribbentrop Appointed To World's Prize Diplomatic Post

Joachim von Ribbentrop, chancellor Hitler's personal emissary on many important diplomatic missions, has been appointed German ambassador to London.

Von Ribbentrop, appointed to what is considered the world's prize diplomatic post, is a former champagne salesman.

Only last April his appointment to a higher rank in the "S.S.", or Black Shirted Nazi guard troops of Reichsfeller Hitler was looked upon as a new indication of the Nazi leader's faith in him.

The rank of ambassador-at-large with special duties subsequently was given to Von Ribbentrop and as such he has had much to do during negotiations for cementing of relations between the Reich and Great Britain. He endeavored unsuccessfully to obtain a sympathetic response from French and Italian statesmen. He assured them of German war veteran's friendship.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 11:1-5.

Explanations And Comments

Peter Justifies his Action to the Church at Jerusalem, Acts 11:1-18, in chapters 10 and 11 of The Acts we have two accounts of the way in which Cornelius, the Gentile, and his household had the Gospel preached to them and were baptized. In chapter ten Luke records the events as they happened, and then in chapter eleven gives Peter's report of the events to the Church at Jerusalem. The double account shows how significant Luke regarded this first addition of Gentiles to the ranks.

The apostles and brethren at Jerusalem were startled at the opening of the door to the Gentiles. On Peter's return to Jerusalem they rebuked him. Up to this time Peter's narrow Jewish ideas and conceptions of it must have cut him to the quick to have his actions challenged. He was rebuked, not for preaching to Gentiles, but for having gone into the house of Gentiles and eating with them. Peter did not quail, but humbled his mental attitude before them the occurrences just as they had happened.

It was while he was praying in the city of Joppa that he fell into a trance and had a vision by which God taught him a great truth. In his vision he saw a sheet descending a great sheet held up by the four corners, which was filled with all manner of beasts, creeping things and birds. Peter was commanded to kill and eat. Such things suitable for food should previously have been ritually cleansed.

Peter heard a voice bidding him to kill and eat. He was still the self-willed, impetuous disciple. Peter, and he cried out, "Not so, Lord." He thought that his conscience built ever entered into my mouth." Recall Mt. 15:17 and Acts 13:8. Levitical law prescribed what Jews might eat and what forbade food and also the method of slaughter. When none of these things are mentioned in Peter's vision we may be sure that they were not considered to be unclean.

Peter heard a voice speaking a second time and saying, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." This was done thrice, and all was drawn up again into heaven.

Peter might have taken the vision to mean simply that the Mosaic regulations as to meats were to be abolished in order that Jews and Gentiles might eat together, and let it go at that; but he knew that it had a deeper and wider significance—that no human creature was to be regarded as common or unclean, and that God has no respecter of persons, Acts 10 34.

Peter must tell his experience before just at that juncture three men stood at the door, sent by the centurion Cornelius, and the Spirit of God bade him go with them, making no distinction, Acts 10:20. Note the fact that they were Gentiles. He went, accompanied by six brethren, and the vision and realized the occasion for his remarkable action.

Capt. John Irving Was Owner Of First Steamship Service Between Victoria And Seattle

Captain John Irving, 82, owner of the first steamship service between Victoria and Seattle, has made his residency at Vancouver, following a month's illness.

Captain Irving was born aboard a sailing ship operated between San Francisco and Portland, Ore., by his father. When he was grown and John took over operation of the Irving Pioneer Line.

In 1887 the Irving Line and the Hudson's Bay Company fleet joined to form the Canadian Pacific Navigation Co., and the Irving vessels were transferred to the Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

Capt. Irving also was organized the Columbia and Kootenay Steam Navigation Company in 1890, and in 1896 and 1897 he organized the Yukon Navigation Company which he turned over to the White Pass Railway Company in 1899.

In 1894 Captain Irving was elected to the British Columbia legislature as member for Cassiar and was re-elected in 1897.

Famous People Superstitious

Even Queen Victoria Had Ideas About Friday And Thirteen

Queen Victoria possibly picked up scores of the many superstitions during her many visits to Scotland. This queen could not be persuaded to begin any journey on Friday, and sitting thirteen at a table was something she would not contemplate for an instant.

Nearly all airmen are superstitious and invariably carry a lucky mascot when starting on a dangerous flight. Colonel Lindbergh placed his faith on an elk's teeth, and the Mollisons take a rusty and well-worn horseshoe wherever they go.

The French, although possessing many hard-headed traits, are superstitious people. It was said Napoleon himself was no exception to the rule. It is considered very unlucky to walk under a ladder, open an umbrella indoors, spill salt on the table, and the great French conqueror once reduced an aide-de-camp for daring to do so. Napoleon also had a few insects of the Palace of Fontainebleau.

Bizarre are superstitious people, Mlle. Bert Bert will not appear without a small golliwog which he looks upon as having contributed to all his good luck in the past. Carpentier's mascot was a small golden wishbone which he carried on his watchchain. Many actors will not act in productions which exist nowhere else but on the stage. One is that no one must mention the title of a play on its first night until the curtain has risen. Martin Harvey became so nervous at an infringement of this custom on one occasion that he completely forgot his opening lines, and had to improvise hastily.

Eleanora Duse made a mascot of a mongoose given to her in India, and would not be consoled when it died. She firmly believed that her acting days were over! And it is recorded that on the first night of her farewell tour, when Sarah Bernhardt, slept in her coffin every night for years in the belief that it would prove her death. Willie Clarkson, perhaps the greatest wig-maker in the world, left a large part of his fortune to her distinguished guests because he had spilled the salt.

Queen Pandia who has done no much to modernize Turkey, is himself a believer in superstitions. One of these is that a fly persistently to bring flowers into the house, and their absence is one of the first things noticed by his visitors.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
BESSIE A. CRAIG

She watched her father fade, day by day. The physicians who had known Ellison all his life, who had brought Starr into the world, were plainly baffled. There was nothing organically wrong with Professor Ellison. Weakness, caused by exposure in the desert, the doctor called it tentatively.

It was after the funeral that Starr remembered how keenly the doctor had eyed her.

"You don't look any too well yourself, Starr, my dear," he had said kindly, confidentially. "You're like a shadow. Better let me prescribe something for you."

"No! No!" Starr wheeled around in a panic.

What did he mean? Did he think she was ill? Crazy thoughts raced through her mind.

"Thou, and thy children—"

John Ellison's words—"It's got me, Ellison. It'll get you, too—and Starr."

She cried defiantly to herself: "No. It shall not get me! I won't let it! I'll fight!"

But it's pretty hard to fight when you're alone in the world, when you've been reared with the idea that you'll always have money, and suddenly there is none. When you can't get work, and a deadly weariness clogs and drags at your limbs. Starr knew. She had tried—so long. She had come away from the New England home town. No one should ever know how badly everything had really gone. Her chance to make her way alone would, she was sure, be better in New York, where no one knew her, where she could really get out and fight. It had been worse in that way. There was no work here, either. No hope.

It was a strange whim which finally had sent Starr Ellison that morning to the New York specialist who was now bending over her, with never a thought of her history. It was well, she had argued, to see another doctor.

And so he had looked at her, pounded her here and there, did all the usual things that a doctor will do, and then, with a frightening look of concentration, he had registered indecision.

"You might as well know the worst. You won't live another six months."

Subconsciously she had been waiting for just that.

The curse of Tut-Ankes-Ra had caught up with her.

Somebody was gently shaking her by the arm. Startled, she realized that she was still staring like one hypnotized at the tan-relief on the vase which was a frightening replica of the mummy face of Ama-Sun. Even before she glanced up to see who was disturbing her, she realized in a flash that at least no longer would she be afraid of things Egyptian that had reared them down, they and their curses. They knew now she was not afraid. She would see it brought gallantly.

Her upturned gaze showed a uniformed man who was smiling down at her.

"Got to close up now, Miss," he said. "Reckon you'll have to come out of Egypt."

Starr turned to her feet.

"Oh, I'm so sorry! I hadn't realized I didn't know—"

The attendant laughed indulgently

"Oh, that's all right, Miss. We've used to that. Lots o' folks come in here and get clean wrapped up in thinking they're Cleopatra or somebody, and we got to rouse 'em up. It's a right interestin' place, Egypt, ain't it?"

Starr smiled at him mechanically, but she did not answer his question as she moved away, nodding her thinks. If he only knew! If he only knew!

CHAPTER IV.

Never again would Starr Ellison be afraid of Egypt or the reluctancy things of the ancient Pharaohs. She might, she knew, even be forced to accept the doom of their curse upon her father's house and upon herself, but during that hour spent in the Museum she had flung her defiance to their gods and priestesses, and would go out to meet them with head held high. The damage was done now. They could do no more.

Walking through the Park in the dusk of the following day, the thought of poetic justice was in her mind. For the first time since that terrible trip in the land of the Pharaohs she gloried in the thought of her own physical beauty that resembled that of their priestesses. If the time ever came, she meant to turn that to account.

Then she laughed. With no touch of merriment in the silvery ripple. It was a dry sound, like the rustle of poetic justice was in her mind. For the first time since that terrible trip in the land of the Pharaohs she gloried in the thought of her own physical beauty that resembled that of their priestesses. If the time ever came, she meant to turn that to account.

Then she laughed. With no touch of merriment in the silvery ripple. It was a dry sound, like the rustle of dead leaves. Starr Ellison, sitting on a bench sheltered by some clustering shrubbery, touched to pinks and greens and blues by the encroaching danger of winter. She must have slept. She did not know. Only when she came to herself with a start, the night had come. Electric lights flickered along the driveways and appeared even in tall buildings where their tops hidden by night mists and covered with the city's jeweled lights. Where the mingled lights of the tall buildings south of the Park hung a moon, a moon in an alien sky above a modern city, but it must have been just such a moon as had given birth to Isis. The limbs of the trees from which the leaves had fallen to make up her mind that she would leave this place, hunt up some other work than stenography. If she could find such a place—they might be living life in the raw, but at least, a relation of a real type of life. Anything. anything! would be better than this remembering— When . . .

Starr Ellison was brought to a blast of sharpened night air and the wisps of fog that were beginning to form, nothing but sunshine and the promise of beautiful weather. It must be starting to rain, too, for the sound of the downpour was deafening from his hat as he handed it to the hat check girl, glancing around a' the crowded lobby of the hotel, in search of the girl on Michael Fairbanks' arm. Yes, who just a few days ago was having mental hysterics admiring a steak in a cafe window!

Plainly enough food was indicated, but where should she go? She had quite forgotten, in the stress of other thoughts, the night of the man who had driven her to the refuge of the Museum. Just as well. She would never see him again, of course. But there still was the yearning for life that would not be downed at the adversity. This time she was determined not to run away

"Not for the third time," she said and smiled, her unbelievably long lashes lowering over her unbelievably blue eyes in a way that would have been construed as a challenge

"Right!" he said. "Three times and out! What a delicate coincidence that it started to rain when I was passing the sh or dump and just in time to sight. . . . May I sit down?"

Starr moved over, saying nothing, and feeling the eyes as intently as the color that must be brightening her camelia cheeks The man said

"Special assignment. Been there every day there's Fate in the lives of men and women"

Starr nodded "Three Fates I—a can't pick and choose."

The man glanced at her out of the corner of his eyes. "Then you've been a lot longer than I have suspected what a the matter—you—you—" he stammered, "I hardly expect it here he laughed "But I'd gotten a good privity mad today when I made a little crack about Egypt. I know about the gods as well as the Fates.

"La il aha illa Allah said Starr quite How could she ever once

Don't GAMBLE with MUSTARD!
The cost of the mustard in any recipe is so small, why take chances by using anything but the best? When you use KEEN'S D.S.F. MUSTARD you KNOW you are getting ALL pure mustard —full of flavour and zest.
Made from seed grown in the Fens of England. Shells or hulls are removed and only the inner part of the seed is used. Superfine grinding brings out the full mustard flavour.
In original tins for as little as 10¢

CHAPTER V.

Over the week-end Starr Ellison had come to a decision. She would go to Cairo and even before they reached Johannesburg they had had some method by which Hamlen pilots kept them in the Orange Free State for ten days, and later the sidecar chassis was damaged, delaying them another four days. Later on they risk meeting lions.

When Cairo they will make their way through Africa to Cairo and even before they reached Johannesburg they had had some method by which Hamlen pilots kept them in the Orange Free State for ten days, and later the sidecar chassis was damaged, delaying them another four days. Later on they risk meeting lions.

Later on they risk meeting lions.

When Cairo they will make their way through Asia Minor to Constantinople, whence their route is by map of Sofia, Belgrade, Zagreb, Venice, Milan, Switzerland and France to the English Channel.

This will be the first time that Mr Budd has left his native Durban.

Girl Making Long Trip

Going To England From South Africa On Motor-Cycle

A London girl typist, who has been in South Africa for 2½ years, Miss H. Engel, is making an early start to see the coronation of King Edward VIII

Accompanied by F Budd a mechanic and watchmaker of Durban, she left Durban recently in a motorcycle and sidecar to ride to London.

They are making their way right through Africa to Cairo and even before they reached Johannesburg they had had some method by which Hamlen pilots kept them in the Oranges Free State for ten days, and later the sidecar chassis was damaged, delaying them another four days. Later on they risk meeting lions.

Has A Hard Time

Preacher Is Criticized No Matter What He Does

A preacher has a hard time. If his hair is white he is too old. If he is a young man he hasn't had any experience.

If he has ten children, he has too many. If he has none, he should have and if isn't showing a good example. If his wife sings in the choir she is presuming

If a preacher reads his notes he is been bore. If he speaks extemporaneously he isn't deep enough.

If he stays home to study, he doesn't mix with the people. If he goes around he is never in his study he ought to be home getting up a good sermon

If he goes at the home of the poor he is playing to the grandstand. If he calls at the home of the rich he is an aristocrat.

Whatever he does a number will have to tell him how to do it better. Next to being an editor or a school teacher he has a wonderful job.—Strathmore Age Dispatch

Has Had Great Success

Polish Peasant Uses Certain Chemicals To Produce Rain

The claim that he can cause rain to fall at will is made by a peasant in the Polish village of Grutkowo near the outskirts of Warsaw, and his so far proved successful. The Polish Meteorological Institute has sent observers to watch the demonstrations of the peasant, Ivan Lewicki, and has posted "No Admittance" signs around the area. The peasant refuses to disclose the secret of his processes, chemicals that he declares he is willing to reveal the experiments at any time in the presence of meteorological experts.

The consumption of cigarettes in Canada, according to figures available at Ottawa, has increased from 661,000,000 cigarettes, five years ago to 5,210,000,000 during the last fiscal year. Monthly statistics reveal a steady growth. Of course, within that period larger percentages of both sexes have enrolled in the ranks of those who smoke the "weed." The number who smoke cigars is on the decrease. Five years ago 152,150,000 cigars were consumed. Last year this figure had fallen to 124,970,870. The tobacco was in another higher class in 1923 which recorded the low tax all recent years—115,888,000.

WHEN NEWSPAPERS DO FAVORS FOR PEOPLE

(The Mail and Empire, Toronto)

We have often reflected upon the closeness of people to think editors for the favors which newspapers do for them. Individuals and organizations are constantly asking for publicity to assist them in promoting various kinds of worthy causes. Space is the only commodity aside from circulation which publishers have to sell, and this is a fact which too many of us seem to forget. Some are even critical of the favorable notices which we give them and their projects. A still greater number forget to make any acknowledgement of the favors extended to them. We have in mind a hellish instance of ingratitude in which only one in ten was thoughtful enough to return with thanks on his lips and in his face

D. Winters, whose farm is located one mile west of Clayesmore, has just finished putting up 24 acres of timothy hay. Ninety loads were stacked and if the crop had been made half of that it would still have been a good one.

Frank Mead of Campbell Lake has been struggling with a 7-acre field of fall rye ranging in height from 4 to 6 feet. He is reckoning on getting five pounds of binder twine to the acre. He reports wheat ready for the binder next week with fair prospects. [illegible] headed in the area to turn. Mower saw such crops in my life," he told the Standard "and I believe this is the best country on earth."

Mr. and Mrs. Hannard and child have returned from a holiday spent at Edmonton and Banff. The trip was made by motor.

Mrs. A. F. Turner of Port Francis, Ontario was renewing acquaintances in Vermilion this week. It is five years since Mrs. Turner last visited Vermilion and seven since the family moved from here.

W. M. Bond, president of the agricultural society, reached home Monday from a few weeks holiday spent at his old home at Almonte, Ontario. During the last week of July there was a sectional celebration at Almonte, it being 100 years since the first settlers made their homes there. Over 2000 old boys made this the occasion to be present and the attendance on the day of the big rotary reached 14,000. Mr. Steele reports great prosperity among eastern agriculturists.

A hailing wire did considerable damage to a new McLaughlin car driven by Geo. Law while en route to the hospital the other evening. The windshield was smashed and top badly broken up. Jack Witherspoon who was in the car had a hand injured. The wire was hanging from the new telephone construction line.

The cutting of all grain in the Vermilion district is becoming general. A large percentage of the barley is down with a fair start on the wheat crop. Many fields of oats are ready for the binder. There has been no frost up to the present and with favorable weather a bumper crop will be harvested.

MECHANICS WROTE EXAMS LAST WEEK

Practically every mechanic in the town of Vermilion went to Vegreville last Thursday or Friday and paid his $5.00 for the privilege of writing on the Provincial government's apply installment Mechanics examination. By this means it is hoped to clean the mechanics as first class etc. and to eliminate those who are not competent in this line. A yearly fee for a mechanic's license is also being instituted. While the Standard does not know of all the mechanics who wrote the exam from here among them were Andy Anderson, H. P. "Mervi" Cooper, Alex Mackenzie and Julius Pouresul.

Results are expected to be known any day now. 30 questions were asked on the paper and 75% must be obtained before a mechanic's license will be granted.

WILDMERE WIRES

We format to mention that Mr. Joe Young who has spent the past few months in the Dibden returned for the harvest to his farm in Wildmere.

Harvesting was held up over the week end by rain. No threshing has been done up to present writing. Andy Carlson will be starting this week, it is stays dry

Mr. Anderson and Alec Smith did some visiting through the district last week, calling at the Dibden, Carbers, and Riley homes. Mr. Anderson informed us on Sunday that there are just five more weeks of church services. How quickly the summer has passed, and we will all miss the sunshine when the season comes to face the long winter without church once a week.

A very pleasant surprise was given to Riley home on Saturday evening when Mr and Mrs. Love and small daughter of Peace River county, came them a call. Mrs Love who formally was Helen Stone of Maughan P. O. taught Wildmere school a few years ago and boarded with Mrs. Riley. They were returning from a 600 mile motor trip. Mrs. Love was going to spend a few days with her parents north of town before going on to her home. "Winks" would surely have liked to have seen you Helen as it has been nine years since we last met and then in the Vermilion hospital when you were a baby. Mrs. Love says everyone is too busy to visit much.

Mr. and Mrs J. Wallington visited Sunday evening at the Gibson home in Basswood.

Noticed around the district—E. G. Maddi having part time, cutting grain and fixing his truck, so he is a busy man. J. Kennedy getting his road sheets signed. Wildmere School board with the help of L. Graham and C. Herward cleaning out the school well. T. Best having trouble with his binder he's always trouble. Cliff Gunning the final touches on his house; Smith Bros. cleaning their tractor; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Jones and family driving around through our corner of the world on Sunday. Ed Schroeder, Bob Martin and Frank Gibson all getting stranded by rain at their "good friends" homes on Sunday night. Frankie Clark at the Wallington home Sunday. The Rudd family going places by one Sunday. Evelyn Howard being told to be very care ful of a patient in disaster later it was not breakable Nuff S-d'

May Be No Minimum Price

Reports from Ottawa suggest that the government may not fix a minimum wheat price this year it is contended that the market is high and the chances of it staying high are good, and some of the ministers are averse to fixing a minimum price which might mean that if the market fell below that figure all the delivery would go to the Wheat Board. A veteran newspaper correspondent at Ottawa says there is no doubt on the part of the government to embark afresh on available enterprises in which the speculative element is so predominant. Meanwhile the policy is to sell when a favorable opportunity presents itself.

TWO NEW TIRES to keep wheels MOVING

Where the going is hardest those tires will pull you through while other tires slip, clog, stall and let you down.

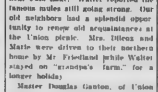
The Log Tire is designed for trucks, tractors, graders, etc. It gives maximum traction forward and backward in deep mud or snow without mortising smoothness, comfort and silence on highway roads.

The Braided Tire is designed for the cars of farmers, doctors, mail carriers or for anywhere where duty takes him into the mud and clay of unimproved roads and into snow on any road.

Come in and let us show you these remarkable new Goodyear Tires.

With its wonderful grip the Goodyear Log Tire pulls through mud or gasoline.

Unlike coils actually burying the Goodyear Standard Tread Cord chases through the worst of roads.



In snow the Goodyear Log Tire evenly delivers power where it's needed most.

Plan Four Bills At Fall Session

Manning Expects House To Complete Work in Three Days

Four government bills at the most will be introduced at the special session of the legislature opening here on Aug. 26, according to Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary. The session should be over in three days, he said.

The minister was not prepared to say what bills would be introduced, stating that they were being drafted. So far as is known, some of the new legislation will deal with Social Credit Measures and drouth relief, with the possibility of a new bill to amend the Debt Adjustment act.

Staffs at the legislature buildings were busy Monday making the initial preparations for the session. Pigeonholings were being prepared and other steps taken to put the rooms and offices in shape for the members.

NEIGHBORHOOD NARRATIVES

From the Neighborhood of the Willow Creek

Recent visitors to the Neighborhood at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Friedland were Mrs. Phil Hilcox, Walter, and Marie, from Cherry Grove, near Cold Lake. Walter reported the famous moles are still going strong. The old neighbors had a splendid opportunity to renew old acquaintances at the Union picnic. Mrs. Hilcox and Marie were driven to their northern home by Mr. Friedland while Walter stayed on "grandpa's farm," for a longer holiday.

Master Dumlas Gaston, of Union district, who underwent treatment all winter at the University hospital after an attack of infantile paralysis last fall, is home now, and lively enough to still be hard to tell from from his twin, Donnal.

Mlle. Evelyn de Breville, our win ners over the champion traveller, Ilis home this week for a short stay.

The Woodvale S. S. Study Group held a specially called meeting Saturday evening for the purpose of discussing the registration plans of the government. The meeting went on record as offering every support in their M.L.A in the project and found none in the question indicated. In the publication at all favorable. An Aberhart Fund was established for the purpose of giving children in the Neighborhood an opportunity to visit all contributors pledging the fund.

Prospects Good coming to their hands as a foundation for this fund. This practical support is appreciated by our Premier will at once be put back into circulation by being invested in a worthy enterprise.

Crop prospects in the Neighborhood are very slight. Mr. Ernie Green on Peninsula Farm, headed his oats into the field on July 30th. Others very soon followed. The districts to the east of us are also in a similar condition. Fr. G. ft. Armstrong as stated.

Alberta Crop Report No. 6

Issued by Alberta Department of Agriculture, Edmonton, August 14, 1936.

Harvest in general in southern and central districts and wheat cutting has commenced in northern areas and the Peace River district.

In the southern and east-central portions of the province no material change has occurred in the general crop situation. Conditions have continued to be extremely dry the feed shortage becoming more acute as the season advances. Wheat yields in specific areas vary widely. The crop in a few districts is the poorest on record, districts but yields of from 5 to 10 bushels are reported; with better prospects in the northern districts. Coarse grain yields are a much a fair average; low in some districts owing to the extremely dry weather while others promise much better than formerly anticipated owing to recent rains. In general, however, the Edmonton district and some districts are reported south to Calgary, badly damaged this year and will range from one-eighth to one-quarter normal, while prevalence of smuts in the past month. Severe hail damage was reported, suffered by districts in the Edmonton town. Latember [illegible]

MELBERTA MINUTES

Council of M.D. Melberta No. 483 met in regular meeting Monday, August 10th, 1936. All the councillors present with Reeve Allanach in the chair.

Minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved.

Correspondence was received as follows: Edmonton general hospital, re-erring again to the admission of Fred Paradis to their hospital and that as he was on direct relief in our municipality, he was therefore our charge. The secretary replied that it was the opinion of the council that, a recipient of direct relief was not necessarily our charge for medical aid or hospitalization, if the party was living in another municipality for 3 months or more prior to being admitted to the hospital. Relief Branch, in connection with meeting a delegation from the A.F.U.A. at which a government representative would like to be present to discuss certain requests Pro. Association was making to the several municipalities were received, the council suggested a joint meeting of all the councils on a date to be fixed later. J. H. Hall Barrister at law acting for B. F. Beck re: [illegible] on motor cycle the council of damages [illegible] to Dickson's car while travelling [illegible] municipality to the amount of $[illegible]. As no blame was stated as to where the accident occurred, the secretary was instructed to write Mr. Hall for it. Notice from the Elk Point Municipality of the admission of Martin Finnare and that he was our responsibility, the secretary was instructed to get further information. Canadian Northern Prairie Lands re: saying that they would sell gravel at 25c a yard for gravel on the E½ 25 Sec 4 the council thought that this was too much. Moved and seconded by [illegible] that the Company would take an acre. National Trust re: asking that a signature on our behalf be obtained that tax sale by a client of theirs in the east to be applied on taxes be sent to them. This was not done. Circular letter from the Seed Grain Branch regarding the collection or the seed grain [illegible] and pointing out that a list of all recipients of seed grain be sent to all the elevators in the surrounding district. This was ordered done. Notice of admissions of patients to the Mannville and Vermilion hospitals.

A petition was received from fifty asking that this division be made a closed area for stock for the whole year. As there was a similar petition from Div. 6, it was decided to combine the two and a by-law to this effect was given its first reading. Moved that the appointed a committee or one to look after the seed grain account collections in his division. Messrs Hope, Steele and [illegible] were appointed to attend the meeting in Vermilion re the A.F.U.A. when the date is set. Tax sale was again postponed on take place on Sept 14th. E. P. Thompson a offer of $1000 for the S.W. 21-58-5-4 was accepted providing the Department endorsed the sale. The secretary was instructed to write all contract and lease holders of school lands that they are expected to pay taxes this year with our bill.

A delegation consisting of Messrs. Mark Fenny and Brickman represented by the Dept of Public Works met the council with a proposition of reciprocation between the government and council. The government would spend so much in strip providing the council would meet this with a similar expenditure. This resulted in the following resolution: That half of the sum [illegible] the sum of [illegible] be allowed to be worked out and arrears to be worked out by resident ratepayers in arrears. As this resolution was the delegation was informed that the proposition could not be acted on [illegible] adjourned.

WEDDING BELLS

WHITSON—TAYLOR

Robed in white her slightly frail figure enhanced with a veil of silk lace and Rebecca Lee collar, caught and held in place by sprigs of orange blossom, Doris Edith Phoebe Taylor, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Taylor looked lovely when she became the bride of Leslie Norman Whitson son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. H. Whitson of Mannville, Alberta, in a pretty ceremony at the United church, Vegreville, at one thirty Saturday afternoon August 15th.

Before an altar banked with fern tall vases of gladioli and sweet peas of pastel tints, Rev. G. E. Simmons, B.D. read the marriage service.

The bride was given away by her father and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses, and gladioli and wore a pendant the gift of the groom. She was attended by Miss Ruth Rutherford of Mannville, who was gowned in pale pink silk georgette with wide bertamed hat to match, carrying pink and mauve gladioli. Mr. Norman Burch of Mannville supported the groom as best man. Mr. E. H. Hinton and Mr Stanley Reid ushered the guests to the pews which were marked with shell pink ribbons.

Wedding marches were played by Mrs. K. E. Pearce and Mr. Frank Squires of Edmonton sang "Because" during the signing of the register.

A reception was held at the Alberta Hotel over where the guests were received by the bridal party. Mrs. Taylor, mother of the bride was gowned in mauve and pink chiffon with picture hat of similar hue and wore a corsage of pink and mauve sweet peas. The groom's mother Mrs. Whitson wore a becoming gown of figured chiffon, also wearing a large hat to match and corsage of sweet peas.

Decorations on the bride's table were pink and mauve sweet peas in silver vases, a three tier wedding cake embedded in pink tulle centering the table, the ornament from her mother's wedding cake adorning same.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitson left by motor for a short honeymoon at Calgary and Banff.

For travelling the bride wore a coral knitted suit with white accessories.

The happy young couple were the recipients of many beautiful gifts and the best wishes of their many friends, including a cablegram from the bride's relatives in England.

On their return they will make their home at Mannville.

Record clover seed production in the United States for 1935 is the smallest on record, red clover seed the small est since 1926, alsike seed the smallest for several years, and the alfalfa seed crop is below normal. At the same time, the production of timothy seed estimated at 128 225,000 pounds is eleven times greater than the crop of 1934.

With readers who reside in Poplar Heights police district. (Provincial) please note they should register for the purpose of receiving monthly dividends at the Poplar Heights school on Saturday August 22 between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Those citizens who have already received forms will have the answers correctly filled in but do not sign your name until you arrive at the polling station.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brady and baby of Deer Lake were visitors Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Brady, Campbell Lake.

Miss Peggy Atherton, Jasper, is on a visit to her parents here.

The new hall is nearing completion and arrangements are being made for a big opening night, particulars of which will be advertised in the Standard. The president of the committee Mr. P. McCambridge is in very active arranging details and calls for a meeting to be held at the hall Sunday, 23rd at 2 p.m.

An electric storm accompanied by heavy rain passed over here Sunday evening.

We noticed Saturday George Martin "Taff" awaiting a new automobile. The car ran out but local it to George he hitched on two horses and disappeared like a ship in the night.

Judging by the number of callers we have had during the week for registration forms voters residing in the Poplar Heights polling district are taking an intelligent interest in the activities of the Alberta government.

ATHABASCA TO ACCEPT SCRIP IN PAYMENT TAXES

ATHABASCA, Alta., Aug. 18.—Municipal council of the town of Athabasca, in special meeting last night, decided to accept Alberta prosperity bonds in payment of current and arrears of taxes and in full or water rates. A limit of one thousand dollars worth of scrip was set for council to accept. Scrip so accepted is to be re-issued as far as possible in payment of day labor and local municipal purchases from town merchants. It was understood to be a three months trial at first.

A resolution to this effect was finally passed after a spirited two-hour deliberation.

Council will attempt, as far as possible, not to send the bonds into the provincial treasury for redemption until absolutely necessary.

The whole move, the council declared, was motivated by a desire to co-operate with the Alberta government. It is felt many taxes that would be otherwise uncollectable will be paid by this method.

Missionary Sunday on Ashurndale United Church Circuit

Next Sunday, August 23rd, will be observed Wildmere and Ashurndale charges as Missionary Sunday. The student minister, David [illegible], Anderson, will present word-pictures of the work and adventures that many men and women face when they enter into the missionary enterprise of the Christian Church. Thousands of workers—preachers, doctors, social workers—engaged in Canada and in lands beyond the seas renew one's faith in the ultimate worth of mankind. To know the sacrifices of these missionaries, and the reasons for which they so labor, is to be able to say with conviction "I believe in people."

British Sentiment Still Dominant

If the law of survival the control of the country as expressed in [illegible] life and even forms of speech, is becoming more Americanized with the march of time the heart of the Dominion, as represented in the spirit the sentiment of her people remains as truly British as in United Empire Loyalist days.

The foregoing extract is the answer to those timorous souls in this country of Great Britain who ever and anon raise the bogey of ultimate American domination of Canada and see in the adoption of every new device from the United States another nail in the coffin which is supposed to be in readiness for the interment of the tie which binds this country to the Motherland.

Those who raise the issue in fear and trembling, overlook the fact that the binding of the tie constitutes its great strength, because it is the spirit within and not the nature of the outward shell which guides the destinies of nations, even as it does of the individual.

Something of this truth must have inspired the remarks of Carl Goldenberg in an article in the June issue of the Fortnightly, published in London, England under the caption "Americanization' of Canada" in which he divests the effects of the American influence in this country of some of the terrors which it inspires in timid or reluctant breasts

"The alleged 'Americanization' of Canada," says Goldenberg in a very thoughtful and analytical article, "is usually regarded as a regrettable and unfavourable trend. It is too often forgotten that Canada does not have to be 'Americanized' because Canada is a North American nation

"The 2,000 miles of boundary that separate Canada from the U.S.A. are a purely imaginary line. The people on each side of this line, in the main speak the same language, have the same habits and ways of thought and dress in similar fashions. They read the same newspapers, they films they listen to the same radio programmes and they read the same periodicals. Every day thousands cross the boundary line each way as though it did not exist. And yesterday's visitor from the United Kingdom, after all is separated from Canada by the width of the Atlantic Ocean."

Mr. Goldenberg might have added that this very proximity, this growing interdependence and intermingling of the two countries in the matter of transportation and by increasing trade relations will just as inevitably result in increasing the American impress on Canadian externals with greater celerity at times gone on.

Quoting statistics the writer goes on to point out that the source of Canadian capital has shifted from London to New York since the Great War, but does nothing terrifying in that, for he adds:

"In answer to the bogey of 'American economic penetration' it may be pointed out that, although U.S investments are very extensive in so far as the key industries of Canada are concerned, they are not subject to American economic control, nor do they seek to promote American political influence. In any event, Canada is rapidly ceasing to be dependent on foreign capital and is actually becoming an exporter of capital. Canadian investments abroad now amount to almost $2,000,000,000."

Despite these geographic and economic American influences on Canadian life, "it is important to remember," says Mr. Goldenberg, "that Canada's political system is British and the majority of her population is of British origin. There exists a strong sentimental attachment to the mother country and the Crown."

And if that were not sufficient to ensure the preservation of the British influence in the hearts of the people of this country there is the loyalty of the French-Canadian population to be reckoned with as a factor. That is Mr Goldenberg's opinion as expressed in the following words:

"They (the French-Canadians) are devoted to the country and particularly Quebec and jealously guard their constitutional rights. They are wary of any change which might affect the relative importance of their status in Canada. Hence they oppose immigration. They also fear the influence of the U.S and oppose 'American penetration' . . . They value the British connection very highly and regard the Crown as the symbol and power to unroot the British North America Act, which embodies their rights from the British Parliament to the Canadian Parliament"

More arguments might be advanced in support of the general contention that there is little need to fear the so-called American penetration but enough has been said to allay serious alarm on that score and especially when it is remembered that destiny is dominated by the spirit rather than the material

Reception To Aviators

Welcome In Moscow To Soviet Long Distance Flyers

A million Muscovites rumed a tumultuous welcome to three Soviet long-distance flyers on their return from Siberia.

After landing at a military airport 25 miles from Moscow, the aviators were driven to the Kremlin through streets and highways massed with cheering humanity. There they were received officially by Joseph Stalin

The immensity of the home-coming reception and the emphasis on the flight in the press which has been devoting entire issues exclusively to the trip is unprecedented in Soviet aviation

The flight fell short of its goal but its sponsor, the commissariat of heavy industry, said its purpose was fulfilled and declared it a success.

The flyers Chekahaff, Baidukof and Belyakoff landed July 22 in Siberia after a 9,356-mile, non-stop flight from Moscow in a single-motored plane. They were ordered down by radio when they encountered a stiff wind and a shortage of fuel. Their goal was Chita or Irkutsk, Siberia.

Recovery In Britain

Emergence From Depression More Marked In Last Few Months

The League of Nations Monetary Review described deflation in the United States as being much greater than that in the United Kingdom, and American industrial recovery from the depression relatively less marked

Drawn for the express purpose of comparing the progress of recovery in United States and the United Kingdom, the Review's report said:

"In the United Kingdom the only direct measures taken by the government to stimulate production was to encourage the development of cheap money. In the United States a long series of recovery measures was introduced.

"Between 1929 and 1932 United Kingdom was the result of banking policy, while in the United States it was the consequence of the heavy additions to the national debt."

The report added increased production in the United Kingdom took place without any considerable rise in prices, whereas in the United States prices rose more sharply.

Red Army Grows

Now Have Trained Reserve Of About Ten Million Soldiers

The first Russians born under Communist rule were ordered to join the giant Red army.

The government reduced from 19 to 21 years the age limit for compulsory military service, opening the ranks of the fighting service for the first time to those born after the revolution of 1917.

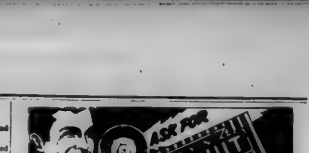
Large increases in the Soviet army now make it possible to augment up-to-date reserves. It will not go into effect until 1940 to allow the army to gradually quantify the increased number of recruits.

Latest authoritative information placed Red army strength at 1,300,000 men and navy 1 ,[illegible]. In addition, the Bolsheviks estimate they have a trained reserve of about 10,000,000 soldiers

Lives On Vegetables

Shaw At Eighty Is Physical And Mental Marvel

George Bernard Shaw has reached his 80th year. C. B. S. is a vegetarian. So whatever there is today, the credit, or the blame, can be given to vegetables and fruit. He is not, as he says of his meat-eating friends, one of the carnivorous. Compote of carrots appeals to him more than a hearty beefsteak; a baked apple more than a black bass. At 80, Shaw has one of the most active and alert minds in the world; physically, he will walk or swim most may half a.s age into exhaustion. A great many more believe they would try easily or be unable for hard physical labors if they did not eat plenty of fruits. The meat eater will also probably agree that he should take plenty vegetables, preferably uncooked, but he would laugh at the idea of doing a day's work every day on an exclusively vegetarian diet all the year around. Still, the fact remains that George Bernard Shaw is a physical and mental marvel at 80 and he is never ill.



Plane Have Been Approved

Simplicity Is Keynote Of King George Memorial At Windsor

Plans for the monument to King George at Windsor—the town from which he selected the royal family's present surname—have received approval from King Edward and Queen Mary.

A tender for execution of the work has been accepted, and the memorial should be ready for unveiling next spring, when King Edward is expected to preside at the ceremony.

Sir Edward Lutyens has designed the memorial so that the central feature is a stone cenotaph of massive dignity, yet standing on pavement. On the top is a carved representation of the royal emblems resting on a cushion.

Upon the steps leading up to the cenotaph will be carved the inscription:

George V.
First Sovereign of the House of Windsor

Below and in front of the monument will be a rectangular basin of water, with two raised foundation, one on each side. The site of the memorial is directly below the walls of Windsor Castle and in the centre of the town.

Thetans Hebrew Now, Dalai Lama Has Been Found

"Ah Ka Ma"—the mystic three-word clue said to have been revealed to the regent of Thet while he sat by the Holy Lake of Kali—may quickly end the nation-wide search for the reincarnation of the Dalai Lama.

Thetans believe that the spirit of the Dalai Lama, supreme ruler of the country and head of the all-powerful priesthood, enters, at the moment of death, the body of a baby born at precisely the same time.

The Tashi Lama, the second spiritual ruler of Thet, who is living in exile in China, has sent a remarkable letter to Lhasa, stating that he held a ceremony at "the Carnival of Purification," attended by thousands of Buddhists from China and Thet.

During the ceremony, he says, a woman, holding in her arms a two-year-old child, approached the Tashi Lama and caught hold of his body. After the ceremony the Tashi Lama ascertained that the woman is Yangchen Kesang Tso, native to the region of Amdo. It is believed in Lhasa that this child may be the reincarnation of the Dalai Lama, who died two years ago.

The regent's vision revealed the words "Ah Ka Ma." It is supposed that "Ah" indicates the Amdo region and the "Ka" and the "Ma" indicate "Kama," the name of the child's mother. This new "revelation" is now being considered by the Great Lama's government in Thet.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Ready to Go

The liver should pour into your bowels 40 ounces of bile daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Poisons from decaying food are absorbed into the blood. You feel sour, sunk and like you'd explode.

Don't just relieve constipation. Don't physic your bowels. Physics only move the bowels. They don't get at the cause. They don't make bile flow freely. To get these 40 ounces of bile flowing freely and make you feel right, you need Carter's Little Liver Pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Don't accept substitutes. Insist on getting Carter's. Only 25c.

An Unusual Operation

Transfusion Of Rhesus Blood Saved Boy's Life

A transfusion of his own blood restored Jimmie Adams, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Owen, Jr., 31, of Bassett, Arkansas.

Attendants said recently while at play Sam was brought to a hospital in Memphis, Tenn. The bullet delivered a dangerous wound through his body, stopping in his right arm.

The wound above the heart bled little on the clothes, but internal tears caused blood to accumulate on the right side. Hospital surgeons, making three incisions there, found the blood clean and pure.

They removed the blood from the side and injected it back into the veins by a transfusion in his leg. Attendants said this saved the boy's life.

Tibetan Regent Is Accepted Into Rhe Reincarnated

Carlton, Sask.—Accepted into the Cree brotherhood, Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, became Chief Okanese Gutskwaw—"Tribe of Tales"—at a brilliant Indian ceremony here. There were 5,000 spectators as Chief Sam Swimmer of the Sweet Grass band, nephew of the great Poundmaker, who led the Indians uprising on these plains 51 years ago, placed the feather head dress on the head of the governor-general and placed about his shoulders a fine white caribou skin.

The Indian chiefs also presented Lord Tweedsmuir with a beautifully beaded robe as a coronation gift for His Majesty the king. In addition, they conferred Prince Minister W. L. Mackenzie King an honorary chief, naming him Otesenew Wetuswew —"Wise Counsellor."

The visit of the governor-general, Lady Tweedsmuir and their party was the highlight of the three-day celebration to mark the 60th anniversary of Treaty No. 6, signed at Carlton, by which the Crees ceded certain rights in their lands to Queen Victoria.

Carlton, a fur trading centre of 80 years ago, was the meeting place from distant parts and for several thousand white people who joined with the Indians in marking the anniversary of the historic event.

The solemn, dignified ceremonial which Lord Tweedsmuir became a Cree chieftain, took place on a pavilion erected with a poplar grove for a background. Following the [illegible]ering of intellectually and acceptance into the Cree nation, 90 braves staged a pow-wow dance in full war uniform.

His Excellency addressed a few words to the assembled chiefs in Cree. Afterwards, then continued in English. In Cree he said: "Brother chief, I am most happy on this occasion to be doing a great honor in taking me into your brotherhood."

Japanese Troops Reported To Be Ready To Move

Shanghai.—Reinforced Japanese troops, it was reported here, are poised for a fresh invasion of Bullyuan province in Inner Mongolia, during new tension to strained relations between Japan and China.

Although a Japanese spokesman at Tientsin denied contemplated participation in events in Inner Mongolia, reliable reports here asserted two companies from Jehol, in Manchoukuo, had joined the Japanese forces at Dolonor.

Large numbers were concentrating at Shangtu, West Chahor in preparation for a fresh invasion of the Bullyuan province, it was asserted here.

The Tientsin spokesman for the Japanese attributed the strife in Mongolia to banditry, admitted the situation was complicated but asserted he was unaware whether two Japanese regiments had departed to Manchoukuo. The Japanese-Manchoukuo military pact, he asserted does not provide for military assistance should the Manchoukuo forces appeal for it.

Foreign observers, watching the clouds of dissension gather, believed serious action might result.

REPORT STATES AID IS GIVEN TO SPANISH REBELS

London.—In a message to the Daily Telegraph from Gibraltar, Mr Percival Phillips, noted newspaper correspondent says he learns from an observer, General Francisco Franco's southern rebel army based at Seville will shortly be supported by a new organization comprising modern German and Italian planes and personnel.

This observer learned from a source he considers absolutely trustworthy that General Franco now has: 20 Junker transport planes, five German pursuit machines, with original markings erased with black paint, and seven Caproni planes of the type the Italians used with deadly effect in Ethiopia.

Sir Percival's despatch continues: the observer also saw "a German expert training Spanish gunners in the use of an anti-aircraft gun described as the latest product of German type. He was told later six of these guns, with a range of nearly 4½ miles, recently were delivered at Seville."

"It was not unusual," the despatch continues, "to see one or two Junkers over Seville also on instructional flights. On one occasion he watched three machines in close formation on a certain alignment which he was told was not usual for Spanish pilots. He had the impression the greater part of this material and personnel had arrived in Seville only in the last few days as there was a conference at General Franco's headquarters to discuss an aerial offensive against the government forces.

Two Fokkers from Croydon, bound for Lisbon. It is understood they are making for rebel headquarters at Burgos;

Two DH 84 type dragon machines from Heston airport, bound for Paris They are believed to be flying to Barcelona for the Spanish government forces.

Forbes will proceed to Marseilles overland, and from there will be taken, probably by destroyer, to Valencia. Meanwhile the British ambassador to Spain, Sir Henry Chilton, remains at Hendaye on the France-Spanish frontier

No explanation of the move was given in official circles beyond that communications between Hendaye and Madrid were difficult owing to fighting areas lying between and that it was considered desirable to have a more authoritative representative on hand in Madrid. At present the Madrid embassy is in charge of the acting consul with a clerical staff of about 25

C. C. F. MEMBERS IN B.C. DISAGREE OVER PLATFORM

Vancouver.—The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation convention in the British Columbia legislature was diminished from seven to four with the expulsion by the executive of the party of the house leader, Rev. Robert Connell, Victoria; Jack Price, Vancouver East, while, and R. E. Swales, Delta

The three have declared their intention of forming their seats and their adherence to C.C.F. principles so laid down in the Regina manifesto.

The expulsions by the party executive followed public disagreements over the platform adopted by the July provincial convention.

In the meantimes the C.C.F., with its new platform, and a provincial by-election due in about a month, nominated Dr. Lyle Telford, president of the provincial organization, to contest Vancouver-Burrard The seat has been vacant since Mayor McGeer, C.C.F., resigned to run for the federal house

Disagreement in the C.C.F. ranks came out in public during the last session of the legislature when Mr Connell repudiated statements by F. E. Winch and H. H. Winch, father and son members from Burnaby and Vancouver East respectively, that the objectives of the C.C.F. and the Communism were similar.

Accepting the Vancouver-Burrard nomination, Dr. Telford said he had personally almost "gone on his knees" in a letter to Mr Connell asking him to discuss his differences but Mr Connell had refused

Clears Up Puzzle

Rings On Fish Provide Data For The Scientists

Microscopic annuli, or growth rings, on the scales of striped bass are providing science with new data explaining for the first time the mysterious movements of fish that have puzzled fishermen for generations.

Daniel Merriman, graduate student in zoology at Yale University is completing an extensive study of the growth rings on bass at the mouth of the Thames river, and has found that the rings correspond to the growth rings of trees Studied under a microscope, the annuli reveal the age of the fish, the rate of growth and whether it goes south in winter

"If the fish spends most of its time in warm water, going south in winter, it grows faster and the space between the rings is wider," Merriman declares. "The reverse is the case if the bass spends its time in colder waters along southern New England shores."

This latter condition has been found to be the case in about 90 per cent of the scales examined thus far indicating that a large majority of striped bass found in Connecticut waters go south for the winter."

By means of netting tagging and releasing more than 500 of the bass in the Niantic river, data indicating the time of bass migrations also is being studied. Based on returns of fishermen of about 8 per cent of the numbered tags, it is apparent that the spring migration generally arrives in April and moves along toward Rhode Island through May and June.

"The Great Barrier"

Canadian Film Epic, Produced In Rockies, Is Near Completion

Revelstoke, a mountain-walled community of British Columbia, is viewing with no little interest the making of an epochal film of an historic Canadian development, one that admittedly cemented the West with the East at a time 50-odd years ago when it appeared that the Pacific Coast people would have a line permanently apart from the young confederation of provinces and when Canadian minds were stirred by rebellious activities. The picture that is taking final form is "The Great Barrier" which is being produced in Revelstoke and the rugged areas around Golden. Field and Lake Louise by the Dominant British Picture Corp. Limited

For the making of this picture, which deals directly with the truly precarious construction of the lines of steel through the treacherous mountain regions of British Columbia and Alberta which were to form the first transcontinental railway, the largest production unit of any film company ever to invade the Dominion has been at work for many weeks.

Last March saw the arrival of the first band of film people from the east and Revelstoke to find the "Mondyville" street set already erected—a seemingly complete pioneer settlement only two short blocks from the city's modern main street.

With the subsequent arrival of J. Parker Macdonald to portray the role of "Major Hell's Bells Rogers" and five other players from Hollywood, there were no less than 44 members of the unit on the scene involving 12 units and the production director and technical staff, all but two of which were from England and Hollywood. In addition, there were scores of extras, carpenters, painters, electricians and property men who have been mobilized locally. Of the extras, close to 500 local persons are on the regular pay roll for the film.

These facts give a general idea of the scope and scale of "The Great Barrier" company for the producing of a Canadian picture on the actual locations of the historic railway project, according to an official estimate by Gunther Stapenhorst, Canada's cost million dollars before it reaches the theatre screens

To provide the necessary color to "The Great Barrier", horsemen have been brought from Calgary, Indianapolis and Stony Reserves in Alberta, and others from Vancouver Chinese have been recruited locally, there are railway employees to operate the locomotives, snowplows have been secured from highway camps, while hundreds of rail-and-tie extras, including 30 Indians, have been registered for the duration. With various big scenes yet to come, there has already been an appearance at Silver Tip, the night miles from Revelstoke on the Big Bend Highway, in which 600 extras have been used in addition to the cast and special personnel. On the following day the small army had been notified by means of the "call board" that it was to report for duty at 11 a.m. and it's a long hard day of waiting before they reach location. Such is movie life!

Among the widely-known stars on location are Richard Arlen, popular of the screen for years, who spent three months in England on "The Great Barrier" before leaving for Canada in June 29 to appear in his first big British picture, Antoinette Cellier, leading lady who starred in "Ourselves Alone" before turning to the Canadian feature, J Farrell Macdonald character actor who has appeared in 75 years in pictures, Bruce Markay young English actor who made a stir as the son in "Born For Glory" Roy Emerton veteran of stage and screen, Lilli Palmer, petite Viennese star, and Ben Welden known on both sides of the Atlantic Milton Rosmer, the director has handled a number of important pictures, among his latest being Everything Is Thunder", starring Constance Bennett, and Mr Hobbs" in which Gene Arlen played the title role Incidentally, the Gaumont British unit is under canvas in a camp which has been established in the Kicking Horse Pass from which the players proceed to location for the filming of scenes in the heart of the Rockies

Judge Criticizes Himself

Apologizes In British Court For Remarks Made At Trial

At the London Sessions recently the presiding judge, Sir Herbert Merriferne, not only withdrew some remarks he had made in the course of a trial in which the jury stopped the case, but criticized himself for having made them.

"I ought to say, with some regret," he said, "that the remarks observed fell from me yesterday which ought not to have been done. They were made under the influence of temporary emotion of which no one occupying the position I do ought to be guilty."

This is a handsome apology, one which could not have been more ample, unsparing of himself and—does his lordship proud. A public man president of the Palestine Jewish Federation of Labor, addressed his remarks directly to the congress, the shown that he is a "big" man to do it and worthy of the office he holds.

This is in the British tradition of things, and ranks with the apologies which have been made in the House of Commons by Premier Baldwin and other cabinet ministers who have openly apologized when they erred in making some statement.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Diamond Trade Improving

South African diamond trade has led to the belief that Kimberley will resume full production soon. The De Beers Dutoitspan Diamond Mine is being re-opened and possibly will start production in the autumn. Some of the other Kimberley diamond mine will be ready for re-opening before 1937.

The only thing some people have in common is the weather.

Some men are fired for ambition; others for the lack of it.

Situation in Palestine

Conflict Over Jewish Immigration And Land Ownership

The troubled situation in Palestine, where the conflict over Jewish immigration and land ownership has been broken into open fighting, was considered in a special session of the World Jewish congress at Geneva.

David Ben Gurion, in a message delivered from London, warned of "the danger that the doom of the homeland may be closed" in a cessation of immigration which has been urged by Arab leaders.

Gurion, who is chairman of the executive of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, recognized by the League of Nations as the supreme Jewish authority in the Holy Land, and president of the Palestine Jewish Federation of Labor, addressed his remarks directly to the congress, the first international assembly of its kind

"There is need for the mobilization of all Jewish forces and influence of our rights in the Diaspora (all lands outside Palestine) and on behalf of Palestine," he said.

Recruiting In Britain

Military Leaders Hopeful That It Will Up Empty Ranks

Recruiting propaganda of every description now floods Britain as military leaders seek to encourage reluctant British youth to join the colors.

Lavish oratory, appeals to national pride, emphasis on the advantages of army life, and attention to the sex-appeal value of the uniform, are efforts to fill empty ranks in the territorial forces especially, are daily becoming more pronounced

Secretary of State Duff Cooper leads the pressure for recruits with addresses throughout the land. Chaps are dangers, and with his hints that conscription may become necessary.

Passport Men Are Costly

American Air Mission Spent $30,286.- 892.50 in Six Months For Their Care

American pursuit plane owners increased their spending to $30,286,892.50 in order to feed, house and give ample medication to their pets during the first half of 1936, according to a survey released in Washington by the bureau of animal industry governing body of the sport of dogs in the United States

There is an increase of some 37 per cent over the $21,533,737.50 spent by dog owners during the first six months of 1935

Boxed Apples From B.C.

The output of boxed apples from British Columbia has increased in a five-year period from 2,447,000 in 1931 to 5,604,300 in 1935 The 1935 crop of 4,953,700 boxes was about an average but with better prices the returns were the highest or over five in those dollars.

Strange Collection Of Plants

St. Louis Garden Has Thirteen Different Species From Antarctic

Shaw's Garden at St Louis Mo must, because of its fine show of display of plants and flowers, now has on exhibition thirteen different species of living plants from the land of Admiral Richard E. Byrd, famed Arctic explorer

The exhibit as strange and unusual a display as has yet been offered to nature lovers at Shaw's Garden, represents the last bit of vegetation the Byrd expedition saw as they approached the South Pole

The rugged, moss-like growth was observed by the expedition as it chanced at a precarious existence on the northern expanses of mountainous rocks within 300 miles of the pole itself.

A flea, 21 inches long and having one-fifth the strength has been found at Wollongong.

A Valuable Discovery

Scientists Find Poison Ivy And Vitamin C Are Related

A peculiar relationship between vitamin C and sensitiveness to poison ivy has been observed in experiment on guinea pigs. When the animals were on a diet deficient in the vitamin, they were insensitive to the poison ivy, but when the vitamin was applied to their skin they became sensitive to the poison ivy and exhibited severe dermatitis.

Application of the vitamin to the skin was necessary to produce this sensitiveness, reports Dr. F. A. Simon, of Louisville, in a report of his experiments published in "The Journal of Immunology." When the vitamin C extract was injected into the veins, the muscles or the abdomen the sensitiveness was not produced at all or to only a slight extent.

The whole body of the guinea pig became sensitive to the poison when the vitamin was applied to only a small area. The agency in the skin that produced the sensitization spread rapidly. If the area of the skin where the vitamin extract was applied was removed within 24 hours, the sensitivity to the poison ivy failed to develop in the skin or other parts of the body. If removal of this spot of skin was delayed longer than that period, the sensitization spread to all parts of the skin.

Efforts to get this same reaction in human skin tests and were unsuccessful What possibilities this discovery has for making human beings less sensitive to poison ivy or for treating individuals suffering from contact with the plant still remains to be worked out, Dr. Simon's experiments with human beings have been made. There is a great difference in sensitivity in human beings. Some people can touch the glossy leaves of the plant with impunity, while others develop severe dermatitis very frequently. Particularly about the women who frequented it. Oh, most regrettable, Mr—Mother dear. And yet— Here was a girl who looked like some Egyptian princess come to life, and she spoke—Mother, you're not listening. No girl we do know could come back at him with the Arab evening prayer for an answer, and he was fond of bringing into the conversation whenever he could some reference of that one trip of his to Egypt.

Better watch his step, though, when he got right down to talking to a waiter of the Nile. If she was one. There was something mighty American about this girl for all of her mysterious grace. And he must not forget that his one interest in talking to her right now—in talking to say girl—was Starr.

He lifted his cocktail glass, smiling at her over it.

"You," he confessed, "if I remember, were complaining just a few hours ago about wanting to play. You're going to be doing all right. Hope I didn't waste any sympathy."

"You don't understand," said Starr, and wrinkled it she was not pretty. After all, did she have any right to be here under such false pretenses? "The sympathy was all right. I just wanted to play, didn't you? Well?"

Her eyes glowing with that strange, mysterious light that she had faced him. She repeated, as if it were a lesson well learned in a voice desperately eager, the last two words she had said to this same man at noon on the sunlit Avenue:

"Yes". Mere hand-holding cles on earth, I'd want to play?"

And then a rush of hot, incoherent words that for the life of her she could not have held back, came from her quivering lips. The voice of suppressed emotion is too powerful to control that all day had been gathering for its climax, the cry of a bitter, tortured woman for love. Through all the civilized repression which she had sought to bring to her aid through philosophy—

She did not seem to be talking to the man especially. She was crying out to the world at large and to Heaven above, in the sordid atmosphere of that cafe which in her mental state might as well have been a mosque or a Bowery mission.

Yes! I want to have everything I've never had! I want to crowd a lifetime of excitement into every single day! I want to spend money, I want gorgeous clothes, I want to be so beautiful that every woman will envy me, and every man will want to love me! I don't want to think of yesterday nor tomorrow just today! I want to dance and sing and laugh! I want to be as bubbly as champagne!"

Her voice trailed off, the burst of passionate energy spent. What was the use? He might as well wish for the moon. She couldn't even be here under false pretenses talking to a man at all, if she hadn't run away from the same man into the Museum and then as a sort of reaction decided to have some kind of a fling at least with her last pitiful bit of change He would never understand that! Nobody would. But who would believe her nonsense—or that she, young as she was, was one whose roads of life were already all but run out?

A damp chill clouded everything. The blare of the orchestra might as well have been from another world. Her eyes must have been moist for the 14th figure of the frowned stranger who had so carelessly and confidentially asked to sit beside her was suddenly blurred.

In a daze she felt his hand touch her arm. He was speaking to her. He quavered odd note in his voice.

"You and I must have a serious talk, young lady," he announced in that masterful tone of his. "I thought no the first time I saw you on Fifth Avenue—I was so nearly certain of it that I almost chased you later in the day, and when I marched into here a few minutes ago to get out of the rain and saw you, I was certain of it. . . . Are you sorry that you were the very girl I'm looking for."

A vague remark, but as he said it in that crisp voice of his there was something so impersonal in the tone, the intonation, that Starr had the feeling of discomfort which would certainly have been the case if a man personally known to her had accosted her in such a manner. She was heartbreak, too? Wasn't it the heartbreak she was trying to forget?

The man beside her was paying something, but at first she hardly comprehended. Then, suddenly, the words began to form, and they were of little difference. She was watching his hands fumbling a little nervously with the cigarette he had produced, as if uncertain himself just what it was he wanted to say. She heard him repeat:

A few years ago there was a general complaint of warning regarding the danger from the spread of Sow Thistle. Now the weed blooms along Vermilion streets in profusion unnoticed.

CLOSE FOR SCHOOL FAIR.

It is to be hoped that the business men of the town see their way clear to accede to the request from the school Fair executive and close for a few hours on September 9th, the date of the annual School Fair. Many will argue that such closing will not materially benefit the Fair, but from a publicity standpoint, alone, the move is one worth while. Last year, the first occasion upon which the merchants were kept open the gate receipts of the Fair decreased to $18.0, just a little over one-half of the amount usually realized. When it is remembered that this event is one in which the country is vitally interested as well as the town that it has outstanding educational values that it provides a valuable outing for country school children as well as bringing people from outside points into town, there should be little opposition to closing the stores for two or three hours.

The Farm Weekly, a British farm magazine states that armament manufacturers and industry generally are making small heavy demands for steel. The makers of farm appliances are having difficulty in getting supplies. The phosphorus is still being treated as a symbol of power, our rulers are forgetting it is now one of the first weapons of war. Great Britain produces only 40 per cent of her food requirements while Germany is self sufficient in bread grains produces 90 per cent of her meat 90 per cent of her milk and dairy products, 90 per cent of her fruit and 80 per cent of all eggs.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT
DROUGHT CONDITIONS

By Dr. H. Barton, Deputy Minister Dominion Department of Agriculture

"It is now definitely known that the harvest this year in Western Canada will be one of the poorest that has been garnered for several years. In many of the districts there will be practically no crops at all, and the dire much situation in certain areas presents serious difficulties, but at the same time the conditions do not call for sensational statements," states Dr. H. Barton, Deputy Minister Dominion Department of Agriculture. "Serious though the present situation is, a number of the published statements have magnified the gravity of the conditions as at present existing and have made predictions which, at present, are not justifiable."

"Such extreme announcements emanate from a variety of sources. Many are unofficial, and lack authority as well as accuracy. While not intended to do so, these reports create unnecessary alarm and unduly depress the market situation. Another result of these exaggerated statements is that those producers who are fortunate enough to have surplus crops at their disposal are tempted to hold their feed and seed grain in anticipation of higher prices, and run the risk of being compelled to accept less than they could have obtained.

WILDMERE WINKS

Harvesting is about finished in our district and threshing will be commencing this week if the weather keeps fit.

On Tuesday last Miss Marion Gibson and Mrs. Erle Madill and baby were visitors at the writer's home. On Thursday Mrs. Gibson and daughter Alice were also visitors at the Madill home.

Basswood school reopened yesterday (Monday) with Mr. Widmore has a week longer holidays, but opened until the first of September.

Widmore Young People's League met at the school Friday evening last with a good attendance. It was decided to hold a much session of parliament, the discussion to be "that a system of compulsory wheat reduction be put into force in Canada." The ones chosen to take part in the main discussion, on the government side were Ed. Schroeder, premier; Doris Riley, minister of agriculture; Albert Howard, minister of transport; the opposing side were Frank Hibbon, opposition leader; Marion Gibson, group four and Albert Smith, group leader. If each one sticks up for their side it ought to be a debate well worth hearing. The only drawback is that it's coming in rather a busy time for one to study much, but Mr. Anderson's time to be with us is getting very short, so we have to make the best of it while he is here. Don't forget the date, folks: Sept. 10th.

Albert Howard signed the Government papers sent out. Alex Smith handed the registration in our district. One in Volland district they had to go to Wondvale to sign up and a lot never knew about it. (Moral: Subscribe to the Standard and keep in touch with local happenings!) Also Triangle was treated the same way. Not very fairly done, as everyone should have a chance, whether they want to use their rights or not.

On Friday Mr. Kruger, his wife and daughter, and nephew from the States motored out at the Bendell home to inquire the way to his brother's. Mr. Herman Kruger of Triangle district. We are glad Mr. Kruger will be very glad to see his relatives once more.

Lawrence Graham and the Rileys have been losing poultry this fall and thought it was the coyotes. Last week, coming home after dark one night, heard a commotion in the chicken coop. He ran down with the gun and yelled "Whats' going on in here?" He expected to see a coyote run out but was surprised to see it was a two-legged one that came out. Lauwence called to him to halt but he kept on running, so he opened fire on the prowler. The latter is probably still running for he was not seen again. A moto such as we saw in a joke the other day should be hung on Lawrence's chicken coop. It said "Anyone found near my chicken coop at night will be found there next morning."

Mrs. Garnett, who has been a patient at the Vermilion hospital for the past month came home on Saturday last. We are all very pleased to see her amongst us again and wish her a complete and rapid recovery.

Alice Gibson and Mary Gilhooley of Basswood visited Phyllis and Ardis Shane last Wednesday, spending a jolly afternoon.

Several of the young folks of Wildmere met in the dance hall at Carlson's hall last Thursday but reported too large a crowd for enjoyable dancing.

Bethesd Around the District

Mr. Howard and son Albert overhauling the tractor before threshing.

J. Widmore's shop has its roof in first class shape. Erle Madill also overhauling his with the help of Bill Gow. Mrs. Madill and Mrs. Wilking son visiting at the Riley home last week. Ed Schroeder finishing up cleaning the school. Mrs. Carlson and children visiting at her parents last week one of our male sex manicuring his finger nails during League meeting last Thursday, several Widmorites at George Laws' sale in town on Saturday afternoon last. Fred Risker visiting with Alex Smith on Sunday Aug 16th.

Nuff sed, the mail man is here

NEIGHBORHOOD NARRATIVES

From the Neighborhood of the Standard

News from Tolland indicates the presence of over 100 potato bugs in the spud patch of Mr. J Lyons. Keep on well herded, Jack!

Joe Lingle suffered lacerations and shock when he became involved with a runaway team, a wagon and mower lately. This is your unlucky summer, Joe.

We take this opportunity to thank the Vermilion 'Hello Girl' who last week so kindly hung on to a telephone call for us like the traditional bulldog until all our business was finished to everyone's satisfaction. Her title should be "Service, Personified."

In contact with our M.L.A., Mr C. Berg, we requested to hear of his recent illness which rendered arrangements for registration in the Neighborhood slightly inadequate.

However, this has been remedied and Mrs D. Doyle has been duly authorized to distribute registration forms and witness signatures thereto. She would appreciate having all registration forms in for signing by that today evening, Aug. 20th. Mrs. Doyle is located at N.E. 15, Tp. 49, Rge. 5.

Heavy rains have caught haying and harvest in all seasons during the last two weeks. Happy lawnmowers and gardeners view full rain barrels and growing cabbages with solicitude, but everyone is apprehensive re frost.

The Glee Club dance was a success despite uncertain roads and weather. The crowd gathered from every direction, including town itself.

PRICE OF DEMOCRACY.

"Although we pay for democracy, in some extent in a measure of delay and the same time we get the advantage of a steady, ordered progress which is not easily retarded nor which is not subject to the upsets and revisions any dictated system must be. Preserve our individual freedom and liberties, and our collective liberties, and we preserve and improve the fabric of our social life. We have in this country shown to the world a glaring example of democracy, of sane central and local government at the highest point of achievement."

THE WORLD'S LARGEST STREAM-LINER

LOCOMOTIVE No. 6400 of the Canadian National Railways, the largest stream-lined steam locomotive in the world and Canada's first stream-lined engine has been delivered to the National System for test runs. No. 6400 is the first of five locomotives built to special stream-lined design evolved after exhaustive wind-tunnel and other tests by the National Research Council at Ottawa and officers of the Motive Power Department of the Canadian National Railways.
More than 94 feet in length and capable of an estimated speed of more than 100 miles an hour, the new locomotives, constructed by Montreal Locomotive Works, present many interesting features. Conspicuous by their absence at first glance are such familiar locomotive "gadgets" as the cowcatcher, smokestack, bell and automatic coupler. The cowcatcher is replaced in the stream-lining of the front which extends to just above the rail, the smokestack and bell are present but located within the stream-lining which covers the array of pipes and domes found on the ordinary locomotive. The automatic coupler is arranged to perform a disappearing act, behind a steel door, when not in use.
The new locomotives also feature a new semi-disc type of wheel, stronger and more lasting than the familiar spoke type so long used by engine builders.
A new color design, black, green and bluish-grey pinshaded steel, with bronze numbers on the running board and the Canadian National crest in the cab background gives the new locomotives a pleasing as well as striking effect.
Photographs show the first of the new engines during her inspection by Canadian National Railways and Montreal Locomotive Works officials.

CHATSWORTH CHATTER

Wheat cutting is practically all finished and many have completed coarse grain cutting also. Threshing will be general by next week if the weather permits. If last week's weather is any indication, we may look for a busy time for all. Those who "put off threshing is completed quickly and then let it rain'

A heavy electrical storm went over Chatsworth on last week.

Mrs. E. Fowler is quite ill from Edson on this date of last week.

On Wednesday evening of last week the home of Mr and Mrs. H. Hook was the scene of a surprise birthday party in honor of Mrs E. Fowler. When about twenty relatives and friends gathered there games were played and at midnight lunch was served.

Registration for Social Credit dividends took place at Chatsworth school on August 7th, 22nd with George Newman as registrar.

Next Sunday Thanksgiving service is to be held at Ottawa United church.

School reopens next week with Miss M. Christie again in charge.

On Sunday a point birthday party in honour of Keith Fooke and Kathleen Fooke was held at J. R. Thompson's. Games and activities helped to celebrate the occasion.

The United church's Sunday school picnic to Lake Lavallee which was planned last Sunday as the weather was not suitable.

There seems to be a sick situation epidemic among the pounds this past two weeks as quite a number have been rather ill recently.

The following is from The People's Weekly:

"POOR MAN . . . Man comes in this world with only his own clothes on his back, leaves it against his will. Dies with only one suit of this time to spend in one continual round of pomp, vanities and unsatisfactory desires. In his infancy he is an angel. In childhood he is a devil. In his manhood he is everything from a cuss up. He may be a smart cuss. Has some folks set aside to be a saint. If he raises a big family he is a chump. If he raises a check he is a thief then the law raises Cain with him. If he is a poor man he is a bad manager and has no sense. If he is a rich man he is dishonest but considered smart. If he is not in politics he is a hypocrite. If he stays away from church he is a sinner and damned. If he donates to foreign missions he does it for show. If he doesn't he is stingy and a tight wad. When he dies comes into this world everybody wants to kiss him. Nobody cares a darn if they all want to kick him. If he dies young there was a great future before him. If he lives to a ripe old age he is in the way and a nuisance. Living to save funeral expenses. Dies in a hard rock but we all like to think it. In order to be healthy we must eat nothing, drink nothing, smoke nothing and see that the air is properly sterilized before he breathes. So let's make the best of it.

And every bit of it sounds quite

A few folks from Vermilion motored to the lake at Mr. Gould's on last Saturday. Mr. Laws' daughter from Vermilion will be registered in many of his friends in the opposite end of the district as well as those by the town folk. He was always ready to help out on any occasion in church or school and has helped on a number of schools in this district with his talents in violin and lectures. We wish him and his family success and happiness in their new home.

Another call on the district will be made by the hospital board for a debenture of $1 000 to complete capital expenditure and payments on necessary furnishings and equipment.

The fall school term opens next Wednesday. Of the original ten teachers on the staff, eight return. J. Meland M.A. replaces Miss Bowman who resigned to accept a position with the Edmonton school board and Ed. J. Robberts, Jr. assumes charge of Miss Herb's room, who has been granted temporary leave of absence owing to ill health.

Approval has been given by the Board of Public Utilities of the Province of Alberta for the issuing to the school district of same, same to debentures for the completion of said more class rooms in the east wing of the school.

A party of some forty land prospectors from various parts of the United States visited Vermilion on Sunday. During the train's stop of an hour and a half, the visitors were taken for a short outing through the main streets adjacent to the town. They were unanimous in expressions of admiration regarding the general appearance of the country and the abundance of the harvest.

WEDDINGS

At the Methodist church, Vermilion on Aug 19, by Rev M. L. Wright, pastor, Miss Jessie Jackson of Prog Lake to J. Hatcher of Kitscoty.

At the home of Mrs. Hinchey, Vermilion, on August 18, by Rev M. L. Wright, Miss Evelyn M Bone to Stewart M. Moore.

At the Methodist church, Vermilion on August 20, by Rev M. L. Wright, pastor, Miss Lena Patruschak to Mr Mitt Sharpluk. According to the American custom two rings were used in the ceremony both bride and groom plighting their troth by the giving and receiving of a ring.

WARNING

Farmers are warned against disposing of fodder or grain to unauthorized dealers who represent themselves as purchasing agents of the Government of the Province of Alberta.

All fieldmen appointed by the Department of Agriculture, to purchase feed for the Government, will be provided with letters of authority. If you are in doubt as to the authority of any agent who purchases hay for the Government, ask to see his credentials.

Has 3 1-2 Months Old Pullets Laying

Looks As If Geo. Henneka Would Give "Velocity Dollar" A Hard Run

Last spring, George Henneka, a well known farmer and poultry breeder located four miles south of town, received a shipment of 250 Leghorn chicks from the Watson Hatcheries in British Columbia. These chicks were hatched on the 27th of April, and exactly three months and a half later the first pullets started laying. This looks very much like a record, and besides, the purchaser did not lose one chicken.

News from Islay

Mrs. Eddie Orr and two children from Yorkton, Sask., are visiting the former's brothers in Islay, W. H. and H. V. Barnes.

Mrs Ireland and little daughter Jan left on Tuesday morning for Toronto following a five weeks' visit in Islay.

Miss Clara Bothwell and her C. G. I. T. girls entertained some thirty ladies at an afternoon tea on Friday in honor of Mrs. Ireland at the church. The edifice was prettily decorated with bouquets of sweet peas and cosmos. A delicious lunch was served at small tables.

Mr and Mrs. Hugh Gilchrist are spending a couple of weeks with their daughter, Mrs. Lloyd McPadden at Chauvin, Alberta.

Rev. Mr. McPherson is taking a two weeks vacation, so there will be no services in the United church until Sunday, Sept. 6th.

Miss Ruth Hamilton returned to her home in Unity, Sask. after spending two months with her aunt, Mrs. Gallagher.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mr. J. T. Fyfe who received a wire on Tuesday morning stating that his mother had passed away in Winnipeg. Mr. Fyfe left for Winnipeg that night to attend the funeral.

Islay Hospital Board Meets

Minutes of the August meeting of the Islay Hospital Board

On motion of Mr. Urquhart the minutes of the July meeting were adopted as read.

The following resolutions were passed by the board: That the matron's report for July be accepted and placed on file; the secretary to reply to communication from official receiver stating that no compromise will be considered in settlement of outstanding hospital accounts referred to; that Delco light engine and two motors be sold to Mr. Cox for $85.00; that the hospital board purchase supplies from C. Cue in settlement of sale of engines, etc.; that Mr. Speers receive contract for repairing plumbing at a cost to the board of $15.00, that all bills as read by the secretary be ordered paid; that secretary arrange for the removal of patient to St. Joseph's hospital, Edmonton, that meeting adjourn to meet October 6th.

CRATE FEED POULTRY AND INCREASE INCOME

A substantial amount of money in the aggregate is lost by farmers every year due to sending their poultry to market not properly finished. Far too much of the poultry offered on both the domestic and export markets is below the Milford and Midland classes for which a premium up to and high as three cents per pound is paid over the lower grades.

The sure and certain way to raise the grade is by the comparatively simple process of crate feeding the birds on a ration of finely ground home grains, potatoes and sour milk.

There are various fattening mixtures that give good results, but, the point is to make use of the feed produced and available on the farm. The best results will be obtained if the birds are put in disinfected crates for one or three weeks before marketing. The crates should be put in reasonably warm quarters free from draughts and the birds should be fed morning and evening. The following ration is recommended. Equal parts of oats and wheat, with barley or buckwheat, and potatoes at the rate of one-third of the total weight of the mash mixture, mix with water until on that the mixture will pour easily.

The beginning of the feeding period is most important. If the birds are placed in the feeding crates have food in their crops they should miss a meal and should be fed sparingly for about two days immediately on being placed in feeding crates birds should be given a purgative in the form of Epsom salts in the first feed, the dosage being at the rate of one pound of Epsom salts to one hundred birds. The salts should be dissolved in water and the solution used for mixing the first feed.

Feeding the birds all they will eat the first day results in loss of appetite and weight. It is better to leave the birds without feed for the first twenty four hours after putting them in the crates than to overfeed them. For the first few days the birds should be kept fairly hungry and never satisfied until they become used to their confined quarters. After that as much feed as they will take may be given two or three times a day. After every feed however the troughs should be cleaned, and a supply of grit should be available two or three times a

BEAT LAST EVENTS TRIP TO WASHINGTON

Climbs Mount Rainier

Mrs. L. Bowser of Islay sends a cheery greeting to her friends here and at Islay, from Mount Rainier, which is located near Tacoma in the State of Washington. Mrs. Bowser went up by car some 8000 feet above sea level to the National Park, and then walked two miles over rugged rocks and had some snaps taken on the glacier. They went from a hot day on the level to making snowballs on the mountain slopes. Mrs. Bowser says that they would probably have a bigger thrill walking back down the mountain than in coming up.

Mount Rainier is about 14,000 feet high, the loftiest peak in the U. S. north-west.

GIVE GOOD MEASURE IN BINDER TWINE

There has been little complaint as to the quality of binder twine sold in Canada in recent years. The law requires that each ball of binder twine sold, whether Canadian made or imported, bears a label showing the number of feet per pound in the ball. These statements are to be length, for example 500, 550, 600 or 650 feet to the pound, are checked by inspectors of the Seed Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

A certain tolerance is allowed under the Act in consideration of variations which naturally must occur. However, of the three hundred samples or more tested annually, more than half have shown a greater length to the pound than the label called for. In samples which did not meet the gear ratings, the deficiencies in length per pound were inconsiderable, and only in occasional cases did the deficiency exceed the limit allowed since 1929, the proportions of samples found to have shortages has not amounted to three per cent of the total number of samples tested, the proportion in 1932 being less than half of one per cent.

WORK OF STUDENT MISSIONARY RECOGNIZED

Reference is made to the work of Alexander MacKeown, B.A., former Chauvin boy and well known in Vermilion, in the minutes of the 1936 General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada which have just come off the press.

The report dealing with the work on the frontier fields of that denomination mentions the fact that he was student pastor of the Riverside and High Ridge congregations near Peace Coupe. Peace River block of British Columbia, during the summer of 1935, and that he made a creditable record there.

The erection of a two-room log manse beside Melville Presbyterian church in the Riverside neighborhood is referred to as one of the accomplishments of the Presbyterians in the Peace River country during the year, 1935. This building was erected during the brief ministry and the overseen was superintended by him personally.

He was re-appointed student pastor of these congregations for the summer of 1936 and is now in charge of these fields. He has received the Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Saskatchewan and has completed successfully his first year at Knox Theological College, Toronto.

He is the son of Rev. P. F. Morgeson, pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Kinsman and Stonewall, Manitoba, in the presbytery of Winnipeg. The elder Mr. MacKeown was for several years pastor of Westminster church, Chauvin, and preached several times at Vermilion. He is a former moderator of the Presbytery of Regina and of the Synod of Saskatchewan.

Exports of Canadian cattle to the United States in 1936, up to August 8, totalled 171,522 head, compared with 83,815 head for the corresponding per iod of last year. The total of Canadian cattle exported to Great Britain during the same period was 23,761 compared with 4,947 in the corresponding period of 1935.

Legislature Opened On Tuesday

Galleries Crowded as Gavel Descends for Special Session

Short of customary pomp, circumstance and ceremony by reason of the emergent nature of problems to be dealt with, the second session of Alberta's eighth legislature—a special session—was formally opened at 3 p.m. on Tuesday by His Honor Lieut-Gov. W. L. Wash.

Deliberations are expected to continue until Friday, or Saturday.

Although no invitations were issued to the floor of the house, and none were necessary, members, Hon. Charles Cockroft, provincial treasurer, and Hon W. N Chant, minister of agriculture, who are at Ottawa conferring with the Dominion government regarding drought relief.

Ten private members were also absent: L. A. Giroux, Liberal, Grouard, and D. B. Mullen, S.C., Edmonton both of whom are suffering illness.

Doors of the galleries were opened at 2:30 p.m. and soon all available space was occupied as the Speaker's and Members galleries filled rapidly. The public gallery was also filled within a few moments.

SOME ABSENT

Practically all members were in their places, but two cabinet ministers were missing, namely, Hon. Charles Cockroft, provincial treasurer, and Hon W. N Chant, minister of agriculture, who are at Ottawa conferring with the Dominion government regarding drought relief.

Ten private members were also absent: L. A. Giroux, Liberal, Grouard, and D. B. Mullen, S.C., Edmonton both of whom are suffering illness.

Doors of the galleries were opened at 2:30 p.m. and soon all available space was occupied as the Speaker's and Members galleries filled rapidly. The public gallery was also filled within a few moments.

WORLD DEPRESSION OVER — EDSEL FORD

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.— Edsel Ford returned Monday from a five weeks' tour of Europe with the report that business conditions appeared to be greatly improved in virtually every European country.

"There certainly is every indication that the world depression is over," he said, "there seems to be a better feeling all around."

WEDDING BELLS

MERCOSKY — WARWOOD

A very pretty wedding took place at the Holy Name rectory on Sunday, August 23rd, when Rudolph Philip Mercosky of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mercosky, was united in wedlock to Alice Gertrude Warwood, daughter of Henry William and Mrs. Warwood of Dinsmore.

The bride made a beautiful picture in a gown of shimmering white satin with a long princess veil held with an orange blossom tiara. She wore silver slippers and carried pink roses and forget-me-nots.

As bridesmaid, Miss Freda Mercosky wore white crepe with accessories to match, and pink corsage.

Mr Frank Rensless attended the bridegroom.

The soloist for the occasion was Miss Florence Antoine who sang "I Love You Truly." She was accompanied by Miss Marie Antoine, who also played the wedding march.

After a wedding supper at the home of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Mercosky left for a motor trip to the bride's home. For travelling the bride was smart in a dark blue tailleur with white hat and accessories.

Upon their return Mr and Mrs. Mercosky will make their home in Vermilion.

ISLAND HILL

The opening dance in the new hall will be held Friday, September 11th.

Bill Nelson, who was engineer in charge of the building of the hall, has every right to be proud of his handiwork. He took particular care with the floor and every detail of the light fantastic who may be present at the opening dance will be delighted.

The hall is situated in a lovely setting and as one man aptly put it to us, it is the nicest spot in all the world except the Lakes of Killarney. And as a matter of fact there is a connecting link between the hall and these beautiful lakes. So come all to on Sept 11th and see for yourselves. You will have an enjoyable night with snappy music supplied by the famous Mead orchestra. See advertisement for particulars.

The Search For Economic Safety

One frequently hears it said nowadays that the subject of economics should find a place, and an important place on the curriculum of the public and high schools.

The proposal has arisen, no doubt out of the depression from which the countries of the world have been suffering and their populations groping more or less in the dark in the hope of finding a way out of the financial and economic difficulties which are besetting them and from which apparently a slow, but is to be hoped a sure, emergence is in progress.

It is urged that matters pertaining to currency and credit are complicated and that the average person arrives at the so-called age of maturity and discretion with very little knowledge to guide him on topics which, after all, are of great importance to everyone. Even the fundamental principles are obscure to the average man and this applies not only to the farmer on the land and the merchant in the country store, but to the average business man in the larger centres.

It is pointed out that after all it is the average elector who must decide what course his country his province or his community must take through what, to the great majority, is an uncharted sea, at any rate unmarked and unknown as far as they are concerned. It is the average elector who goes to the polls and gives direction through his vote, to his representative who naturally feels that it is incumbent to carry out the mandate thus conferred upon him.

And in recent years, as a result of general and local conditions, these mandates have largely taken the form of instruction as to what policies should be pursued in regard to questions involving the issue of currency and credit and the forms they should take. These have lately become important issues in elections, both in restricted community areas as well as in the wider provincial and national fields and not only in this country but in the majority of countries in the civilized world.

This being the case, it is highly important that the electorate should be well posted, at least the fundamentals underlying the various economic theories presented for their approval or rejection and as to whether or not they are feasible. When new experiments in financing are proposed the electors should be in a position as to their feasibility or otherwise and some history, if such is available, to guide them as to the results of similar experiments in the past and elsewhere.

Unfortunately this is not always the case. One hears a great deal of discussion on economic topics wherever groups are gathered together. Some of the contributions to these discussions are based on sound facts and known principles and some, on the contrary are based on pure theorization and largely inspired only by a very keen desire to try something which may prove a panacea.

Equally unfortunately, however, there is always the risk of an uninformed electorate, or an electorate not well grounded in fundamentals, rushing into some experiment which might prove to be disastrous in its effects and result in stepping "out of the frying pan into the fire."

These statements are not made with the intention of decrying experimentation in the economic field. On the contrary. The world and conditions in the world are changing almost daily. Progress must and will be made in this as in other spheres of life. In the field of medicine, in the field of science and in other departments of life, enormous progress has been made in recent years, and largely as a result of experimentation, but primarily it will be found that this progress has resulted from a refusal to stop by step along the path of construction on accepted fundamental facts. In these fields results are usually only achieved by workers who know and understand basic principles.

Fortunately the public is awakening to a realization that if they are to guide the destinies of themselves and their fellows successfully in the economic sphere they must have a reasonable grasp of reliable information on which to base their conclusions and to apply as tests. This is demonstrated by the tremendous increase in the sale of books and pamphlets on there during a hundred topics in the last few years and in the increased demand for such works at the public libraries.

The greatest immediate danger that exists in this widespread demand for information is the possibility on the part of readers who are bombarded on all hands with innumerable theories; but this danger may be avoided or at least partially offset if the reader will search for definite principles in the light of history and experimentation, and proceed from there to build up his conclusions as to what may be safe and what dangerous.

The proposal to make economics a more important subject of study for the youth of to-day is the whole to one that has considerable merit, but until a new generation is grounded in fundamental's and practical principles, the adults who are being called upon to determine policies for present day problems must necessarily continue in such guidance from available literature plus their own good common sense.

The Coronation Procession

Route As Arranged Will Be Longest In History

Official announcement of the route to be taken by the king's coronation procession on May 12, 1937, showed the circuit to and from Westminster Abbey would be the longest on record covering nearly twice the distance of the coronation route taken by the late King George.

The route will traverse no street twice, thus giving the enormous crowds expected from home and overseas ample opportunity to see the pageantry.

The route from Buckingham palace to the west entrance of Westminster abbey will be by way of the Mall, Trafalgar square, Whitehall and Parliament street. The Champion Loser

Man Who Lost Millions By Selling Stock Too Soon

Among the many romantic aspects of the colossal growth of the Ford Motor Company nothing is stranger in all the history of finance, perhaps, than the large fortune made by James Couzens, and the huge loss suffered by Alexander Y. Malcomson, who was Ford's principal backer. Senator Couzens made 29 million dollars, poor Malcomson cheated himself out of close to 300 millions. Instead of becoming one of the world's richest men, he sold his stock for a mere pittance.

The Ford Motor Company was incorporated on June 16, 1903. Fifty-one per cent. of the stock issue of $100 000 was split evenly between Henry Ford and Alexander Malcomson. Among the other stockholders were Couzens, at that time only a clerk in the coal business conducted by Malcomson, who subscribed $2,500 and the Dodge brothers, John F. and Horace E., who contracted to build the Fords in their machine shop and who each got a $5,000 interest in the new company.

In 1906, Malcomson sold his $25,-000 worth of stock to Ford for $175,-000 cash. Ford, by this time, was doing handsomely inasmuch as he had increased his original investment of $5,000 to $175,000 in only a year. Couzens hung on until 1919, a year in which the company's profit was $78,000,000, and then sold his last minority stockholder. Had Malcomson not sold out till then, he would have got $29,000,000 instead of as much as Couzens did, or approximately 300 million dollars.

Ford's success has been down in financial history as the toughest loser on the books, as a man who stood to make a fortune if he only would, but didn't have the patience or the wisdom to wait thirteen years longer.

Dream Highway Progressing

Proposed Road Between Alaska And South American Is Considered

The "dream highway"—a good road from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Buenos Aires, South America, 12,000 miles away—is being developed, but there still remains plenty of mileage to fill, of which the missing sections in the mooted British Columbia - Alaska road are a major part.

Those living over Vancouver can now drive over well-paved roads as far as Mexico City, 3,000 miles, or little more than a quarter of the way to the end of the first definite links to be completed will be from Mexico City to Panama, of which 165 miles are already in service and operated by motor.

Another difficulty in the making of the highway will be the construction of a road over a 600-mile stretch of jungle and mountain from Panama to Bogota, the Colombian border in South America.

South America has considerable stretches of excellent road, but the occasional rough and rugged patches. In Peru the government laid down a fine road on another highway 1,357 miles.

From Santiago, a road leads eastward over the Andes mountains, a highway constructed under incredible difficulties and open only in summer. It is a purely business mission this road joins the Argentine section of the highway which carries on for the 1,000 miles to the southern terminus of the "dream highway" Buenos Aires.

Geyser In Yellowstone Park Refuses To Obey Rules

The longest and shortest intervals between eruptions of Old Faithful Geyser were recorded at Yellowstone Park, Wyoming, recently. The usually reliable geyser spouted once at 11 56 a.m. and then burst into action again at 12 36 p.m., a wait of only thirty minutes. Then followed an interval of 92 minutes, or until 1 58 p.m. Old Faithful seldom varies from 65-minute intervals between outbursts.

Predicts Long Drouth For U.S.

Weather Man Would Move 10,000 Families From Dry Areas

Migration of 10,000 families from the drouth-damaged farms of the great plains of the United States was recommended in a resolution passed at final action by the 10th Chautauqua, former University of Oklahoma climatologist.

It's study, published by the University of Pennsylvania, contended wind erosion had damaged 65 per cent. of the plains region, extending from the Canadian border into the Texas Panhandle.

A long-range government program for the return of millions of acres of wheat land to its native sod, he said, might be the only means of checking the devastating dust.

Observing long dry spells have been frequent in the history of the plains, Thornthwaite predicted "the present drouth might be prolonged for 30 or more years."

Evidence from tree rings, lake levels and other sources was cited in the survey to show a 20-year drouth began in 1623 and was interrupted by only occasional wet years. But the weather expert estimated that a minimum of 12,610 families should move out of Montana, the state in which he reported the greatest "surplus population." He urged a migration of 12,300 families from Texas and 7,200 from North Dakota. Heavy removals also were suggested for South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming and Colorado.

"The ideal situation in the great plains," he said, "would be a practically complete return to a grazing economy where pasturing on the range is supplemented by the raising of feed and forage crops."

Many People Who Are Expecting Something For Nothing

We have often reflected upon the slowness of people to thank editors for the free publicity which is given them. Individuals and organizations are constantly asking for publicity in behalf of worthy causes. Space in the only commodity solely in the possession of which publishers have to sell, and this is a fact which too many seem to forget. Some are even critical of a favorable notices which give them and their projects. A still greater number forget to make any acknowledgment of the courtesy extended to them. We have in mind a biblical instance of ten lepers being cured of leprosy but only one thought enough to return with thanks on his lips and in his face.—Toronto Mail & Empire.

Leaves Estate To Secretary

Fleet Street Writer Gave Fortune To Lifelong Friend

The estate of Arthur Anthony Baumann, London writer of the best known of Fleet street writers, was probated at £98,000 (about $490,000). He left practically all of it to his secretary and lifelong friend, George Browning. Both were bachelors and lived together for 40 years. Baumann suffered paralysis for 12 years and Browning taught him to be his secretary. Baumann was 90; Browning is over 70.

New Revolver Tested

A new revolver of tremendous power, which J. Edgar Hoover says might wreck an automobile engine with a single shot, is being tested by the United States bureau of investigation, it was disclosed here. The .44 to 40 ounces, inflicts a large wound and the impact of a bullet from it would be equal to a force of 902 pounds. The regular service type has an impact of only 350 pounds.

Trapped For Six Months

Soviet Soldiers Caught In Mountain Pass Rescued

Three Soviet Robinson Crusoes, trapped in the blind, snowfilled mountain passes of Western Siberia without food, and only sustained themselves for six months, but also several escaped convicts, border officials in England have reported, were captured, according to a drama-filled saga printed in the "Krasnaya Zvezda," the official organ of the Red Army.

The three Red Army men left Novosibirsk on Sept. 3 of last year for a mountain post carrying a month's supply of food and ammunition. A great blizzard swept the land two weeks later. When the man crept from their hough huts, every outgoing pass was obliterated. A border patrol sent to search for the men returned empty handed.

Again in March of this year, when the mountain snows were melting, a squad of soldiers set forth, this time battering their way on snowshoes to the skeletons of their huddle. Approaching the camp, they saw a thin wreath of smoke in the air. Rifle signal was returned with rifle signal. The bearded Crusoes tumbled into the arms of their rescuers.

The marooned men had built themselves stout bough huts, lived on wild game, with which the region abounds, perfecting themselves in marksmanship so that no bullet was wasted. They had not had food for six months.

Several lawbreakers, whom they'd picked up in the mountains, and who had lived freely with the Red guards, went back to civilization with them.

CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN IS BLAMED ON THE LEAGUE

Durban, South Africa. — General Jan Smuts, Sputy prime minister of South Africa, blamed the civil war in Spain on the League of Nations' handing of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute and declared the situation in the Mediterranean is "far more dangerous than ever before."

"I look upon the revolt in the Spanish army in Morocco and the civil war in Spain not only as a most dangerous symptom in itself but also as another product of the breakdown in co-operation in the League of Nations during the Italo-Abyssinian crisis," the South African statesman declared in an interview with The Natal Observer.

"I am sure the Spanish business is closely connected with the Italian business and that the two together have created a situation in the Mediterranean which must necessarily give the greatest concern to all Mediterranean powers."

General Smuts said that if France and Britain had stood firm in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis and had seen the league through, the position in the Mediterranean would be much safer for both. The league would have proved itself and become a real bulwark against any future act of aggression. Not only had the breakdown of the league resulted in the Mediterranean situation but in a wild armaments race.

"I frankly admit that rearmament may seem to be necessary after the desertion of the league and abandonment of the policy of collective security," the former Boer leader declared. "The whole economic position of Europe is becoming a question of armaments. Unemployment is being relieved in some countries and if this policy is reversed there again will be unemployment on a vast scale and a dangerous social position in most countries."

That all tended to show what a far-reaching effect Italy's action when the great powers failed to give a decisive, firm lead in the Ethiopian business. The world, General Smuts said, the situation was that the action of the great powers had been dictated by their view of the Mediterranean situation and that situation today was worse and far more dangerous than ever before.

"I am firmly convinced that only firm, courageous action by France and Britain can stop the revolt," General Smuts concluded. "Abyssinia was a grave warning and perhaps the last which the league will ever more ominous character. Talk about reforms of the league is mere camouflage. I wonder whether it is not more necessary the important great powers should come together at this moment in informal conference that the present spectacular show which will lead nowhere."

Demand For Platinum

Has Caused Big Jump In Price

Hon. H. A. Robb, minister of finance announced in the budget speech that $53 an ounce from $43 claimed three weeks of "very unusual demand here and abroad," reliable trade circles declared.

Bulk of the metal is destined for war purposes, it was said. Platinum figures prominently in chemical warfare, battleship and surgical equipment, dentistry.

Most of the foreign buying, the trade reported, has come from Japan.

Mining Of Wheatlands

Vancouver Two things in particular impressed Sir Percy Vincent, lord mayor of London, as he crossed Canada. One was the Rocky Mountains, and the other "Mining of the prairie wheatlands." Canada needed more people he thought pioneer type who could stand the first years of loneliness

Strict Neutrality

Sir Samuel Hoare Would Keep Britain Out Of Spanish Trouble

Cromer, England. — Warning of consequences that might attend any deviation from the path of strict neutrality in the Spanish civil war, Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, berated socialists who have publicly supported Spain's left-ists.

"As a rule the parties of the left are pacifists," he said. "Our parties of the left are militarists, but militarists who wnat war without armies, navies or an air force.

"Many of them seem to want war against one of the factions in Spain. Let me say to them that the National government have not the least intention of interfering in the internal affairs of Spain or embroiling this country in a war for ideas and detestable struggle that is not our direct concern."

"If we attempt to impose our will upon the Spanish factions, we might well involve Europe in a general conflagration. We must rather maintain a strict neutrality.

"Lanabury (George Lanabury, veteran labor leader) proposes that we should throw the weight of our country and empire into the scales on the side of the left in Spain and declare war. What more irresponsible proposal could be imagined? To take side in the struggle in Spain would almost inevitably another peninsula war with the great body of the Spaniards against us. It would mean almost inevitably a conflagration that would spread from one end of Europe to the other.

Let us learn the lesson that these events have to teach. If politics get into the hands of extremists and fanatics they will destroy the bomb take the place of the ballot box.

"In this country," Sir Samuel added, "we needed no Fascists to fight Communists. We fought and defeated Communism when it reared its ugly head in this country."

In ordering the embargo the government stressed the critical importance of shutting non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

The action was described in authoritative quarters as a genuine effort by Britain to arrest the spread of the civil war. Simultaneously it was disclosed that Britain privately had agreed to prohibit export of munitions to Spain only if the other powers pledged themselves to do likewise.

Now, however, it was said in Whitehall, the government is spurred by realization the peace of Europe is in danger of endangered by "technically legal" supply of civil planes to Spain —also by the delay in reaching a united policy of non-intervention because of quibbling over types of aid.

The British announced a blanket embargo on the shipment of war material including private aircraft.

San Francisco Trader Willing To Take Food To Arctic

Barrow, Alaska. Asserting it was unfortunate that an emergency government food supply would arrive here before the ice closes in for the winter, Sir Wyman W. Corbett, medical missionary, reported a trader had offered to land $3,000 worth of food by plane to relieve starving Eskimos along the Arctic rim.

The missionary said the food offer was made by Capt. Ben Eielson in a telegram to his office at Juneau by Captain C. D. Pedersen, San Francisco trader now in the Arctic. Pedersen's offer was made after he had returned from a trip to Wainwright, Alaska, where he had delivered a cargo of supplies.

Eielson, famed Arctic flier, is now in Seattle, Wash., where he is preparing to make a flight to Russia.

BRITAIN PLACES AN EMBARGO ON EXPORT OF PLANES

London.—The government of Great Britain declared a virtual embargo on the export of both civil and military planes to either of the Spanish belligerent factions.

In ordering the embargo the government stressed the critical importance of shutting non-intervention in the Spanish civil war.

The action was described in authoritative quarters as a genuine effort by Britain to arrest the spread of the civil war. Simultaneously it was disclosed that Britain privately had agreed to prohibit export of munitions to Spain only if the other powers pledged themselves to do likewise.

Now, however, it was said in Whitehall, the government is spurred by realization the peace of Europe is in danger of endangered by "technically legal" supply of civil planes to Spain —also by the delay in reaching a united policy of non-intervention because of quibbling over types of aid.

Receive More For Crop

Alberta Farmers Will Have Larger Returns Than Last Year

Edmonton. — Farmers of central and northern half of Alberta are likely to receive $14,000,000 more for this season's wheat crop, if safely harvested, than last year's crop brought, according to an estimate made here.

In 1935 the northern and central area harvested 44,000,000 bushels with an estimated value of $22,000,-000. With 45,000,000 bushels estimated in the same area this year and present prices ranging around 80 cents at country points the value would be $36,000,000.

About two-thirds of the wheat output of Alberta in 1936 will apparently be reaped in the northern half of the province, whereas last year the southern half had almost double third more than the north.

Harvest which started 16 days earlier than last year, with an average date for the northern half of the province of Aug. 8, and was halted by the weekend by rain has been resumed in Edmonton district. Rains will greatly help green feed and the late seeding of fodder for livestock felt in some parts.

Charged With Murder

Investigations Continue Into Fire And Explosion At Montreal

Montreal. Julius Cohen, 49, was charged with murder and Romeo Vidal, 25, charged with arson as investigation continued into the fire and explosion that razed a block of stores here, killing three firemen and injuring 50 other persons

Cohen, co-proprietor of Maison Canadien, clothing store destroyed by the blaze, was arraigned in magistrate's court on the murder charge, after a coroner's jury found him criminally responsible for the death of Firemen Albert Guerin, Pierre Proulx and Francois Deslilles. He was remanded for pre-trial mary hearing.

Fire Commissioner Massicotte, who signed the warrant for Cohen's arrest on arson charges, reopened inquiry into cause of the fire, and after hearing servants' testimony ordered Vidal, manager of the clothing store, arrested on a charge of arson

Australia Rearmament

Program To Be Launched In Commonwealth In September

Sydney, Australia. — A supplementary defence program will be launched in the commonwealth in September, it was announced officially.

This will amplify the three-year program begun in 1934 and the country will embark on a period of intensive rearmament while the two programs overlap

In a speech at Manly, N.S.W., recently, R. A. Parkhill, minister for defence, announced the government would shortly consider "a new defence program to complete the coordinated defence against air raids."

He forecast increase of the air force personnel to 2,060 with a citizen force of 926 members, and said he hoped the manufacture of air craft would soon be established in Australia.

Moves In Cycles

Scientists Think Reduction Output Of Sun Associated With Drought

Washington. — Amid government moves to aid mounting total of drought-ruined farmers, the Smithsonian Institution held a hope that another major dry period may not strike the north central grazing area of the United States until 1943.

From an analysis of water level records for the Great Lakes since 1837 the Smithsonian concluded that the drought area now "is near the bottom of what appears to be a 46-year precipitation cycle in some way associated with cycle variations in the radiation output of the sun.

Dr. Charles G Abbot, institution secretary, declared that his cycle hypothesis announced three years ago, "gives no support to pessimists who predict the great drought area will be converted into a permanent desert."

He said there was "every reason to believe the depths of the present drought will be succeeded, at the most a few years hence, by peak of precipitation." If the cycle continues true to form, he said, the low point should be reached sometime between 1938-40, followed by "a rapid upswing."

May Abolish Penal Colony

Dreaded Cabinet In French Guiana

Port Of Spain, Trinidad Rumors France's storied and dreaded penal colony in French Guiana was to be abolished soon were heard here. Trinidad authorities set four fugitives from Cayenne adrift in an open boat and arranged to deport seven more the same way

Parched and exhausted after their hazardous journey, four of the men remaining were too ill to be driven off this British island for several days. Two in serious condition are being treated in the hostel of the Salvation Army, long the friends of French fugitives.

As the police granted them brief respite here, members of the Trinidad Labor party, acting in co-operation with the English Labor party, pleaded with the French consul here on their behalf

Given a new small boat and food for three weeks, the four were towed 12 miles out to sea by a motor boat. When last seen they were rowing toward Venezuela.

They had been here nearly two weeks recovering from the effects of their trip from Cayenne

JAPAN PROVES TO BE DRAG ON FACTORY WAGES

Yosemite, Calif.—Japan's spectacular rise as an exporter is indeed probably unwarranted, is a system of low selling prices and low wages, two British economists told the Institute of Pacific Relations

A paper by Prof. G. F. Hubbard of the Royal Institute of International Affairs and Donall Barlay of the British delegation, predicted the Japanese would be able to maintain their position in the world's trade goods trade only through "very low selling prices."

There is not likely to be a substantial rise in the level of Japanese wages they reported, "first, because with the growing population the supply of labor probably will exceed the demand, and secondly, because the close link between the agriculturist and factory workers acts as a drag upon factory wages."

They also argued the unpromising prospects of a recovery in the international trade specialization in the general demand for the goods found to be produced in Japan owing chiefly to the relatively low purchasing power of countries in a position to import in the future.

The paper estimated the Japanese population would increase 16 per cent while the total population in Japan proper will increase by about 24 per cent in the next 20 years and that the United States population would increase 54 per cent in the same period and the United Britain 10 per cent.

The general conclusion drawn, said the paper, is that the industrialization of India and the Far East is comparatively and indeed all the prospects are that it will continue to increase

"The problem with which the western world is faced is that of the peaceful adjustment of the new conditions which have arisen."

J. R. Stewart presented for the institute's secretarial a report on seeing Japan's military occupation of Manchuria (now Manchukuo) was "economic futility."

APOLOGY FOR INSULTS IS ASKED BY GERMANY

Berlin.—Incensed over the "Kamerun incident," Nazi Germany ordered its warships in the Spanish zone to stand by for action while the commanders of seven other warships driving toward Spain messaged Madrid he would "meet force with force."

In strong language Nazi officials demanded apologies from Madrid and Barcelona there would be no publication of incidents such as the reported boarding of the German vessel Kamerun by Spanish loyalists.

Admiral Carls, in command of the warships steaming toward Spain, messaged he would "not tolerate" such incidents.

His curt radiograms backed up the government's warning to Madrid that German ships would use "all means at their disposal" to prevent acts deemed over by the Nazis.

The Nazi foreign office said the Kamerun incident had tossed French neutrality proposals sky high

Chancellor Hitler was said to be now demanding apologies and assurances from the Madrid loyalists before he would consider bending himself with an arms embargo

A government spokesman said:

"It is impossible to consider the French proposal until satisfaction has been given in the Kamerun affair. Negotiations are continuing with the French and British, who are contacting Madrid."

The Spanish anti-Bolshevik campaign was unleashed in the press with some newspapers holding Moscow responsible for the "attack" against German ships, saying Spaniards would not dare to do such things unless they were backed up by Moscow.

In a crisp telegraphic dispatch to the German charge d'affaires at Madrid, the Berlin government declared it would hold the Madrid loyalists strictly to account for any further German incident

The Wilhelmstrasse and the press had been aroused by the report from the official news agency that a Spanish loyalist warship had ordered the Kamerun to halt outside Spanish territorial waters off Cadiz and searched her, finding nothing out of order.

Count Agriff, official organ of Propaganda Minister Goebbels, said the Spanish loyalist cruiser Libertad, which was reported in German waters have frustrated the Kamerun's effort to rescue endangered Germans. "but we shall fight to expect the flag to be respected further internationally."

As a matter of fact, the newspaper said, the ship was fully under the control of mutineers "who bestially murdered their officers and threw them into the sea."

The Spanish vessel's status, the newspaper continued, was "comparable to the legal status of a mad dog."

No Fall Session

Parliament Will Likely Meet Early In New Year

Ottawa. At the present moment there is no intention on the part of the government to call a fall session of parliament, Prime Minister Mackenzie King declared. Parliament would be called early in the new year, the prime minister said.

If any situation arising in Geneva or in Canada made it necessary to call parliament, due notice would be given by Mr. Mackenzie King, but at the present moment there was nothing to indicate such a situation would arise.

PRESIDENT OF CANADIAN NATIONAL RYS. BEREAVED

Death of Mrs. S. J. Hungerford

MONTREAL, Que. Aug. 25. News was received with deep regret in transportation circles in Canada last week-end of the death of Mrs. S. J. Hungerford, wife of Samuel J. Hungerford president of the Canadian National Railways. Mrs. Hungerford passed away at the family residence, 1 [illegible] Terrace, Upper Peel St., Montreal, on Sunday following an illness which had extended over several months. With her at the time of her death were her husband and her two surviving daughters and son.

Mrs. Hungerford's health gave cause for anxiety in the spring of this year and on the advice of her physicians Mrs. Hungerford took up her residence for the summer months at Farnham, Que. Soon after Mr. Hungerford's return home he returned to Montreal within the past three weeks as her condition showed no improvement.

The late Mrs. Hungerford was the only daughter of the late Jesse Dumoust and his wife Alice Droop, and was born near Port Perry, Ont. in 1871. Her family moved to Winnipeg in 1876, her grandfather having already established himself as one of the pioneer Red River farmers. Her marriage to Mr. Hungerford took place at Winnipeg in 1892 and they made their home at various points in Eastern and Western Canada in the succeeding years as Mr. Hungerford's railroad duties required.

There are four children, three surviving: Miss Alice Hungerford of Montreal; Mrs. W. B. Scherr, formerly of Halifax, N.S., now of Montreal; Mrs. A. J. Rowell, deceased, and Stewart J. Hungerford of Canadian Industries, Limited of Montreal. The late Mrs. Hungerford is also survived by four brothers, Arthur Dumoust of Regina; Karl Dumoust of Moose Jaw; Jack Peel Dumoust of Prince Albert and Herbert Dumoust of Edgerton, Alta.

A lady whose life centred in her home rather than in outside activities, Mrs. Hungerford had nevertheless a large circle of friends throughout the Dominion.

Drastic Legislation At Special Session Alberta Legislature

Featured by some of the most drastic, far-reaching and strangest economic legislation ever passed through a Canadian legislature, measures aimed at institution of Social Credit principles and relief of debt-burdened citizens were enacted at the special session of the eighth legislative assembly which porqued on Tuesday night.

Outstanding among the 17 bills given assent by Lieutenant-Governor W. L. Walsh were the Alberta Credit House Act and the measures to [illegible] the debts owed by the province, municipalities and individuals.

Principal planks of the Social Credit government's election platform [illegible] dividends, unearned increment and just price—figured in legislation approved at the session begun Tuesday, Aug. 25.

Provision for the machinery to in [illegible] dividends and unearned increment were contained in the Alberta Credit House Act, while the unearned [illegible] to be [illegible] by the Reduction and Settlement of Debts Act, the Municipalities Securities Interest Act, the amendment to the Debt Adjustment Act of 1933 and the Provincial Securities Interest Act.

Most radical of the debt adjusting legislation is the reduction and settlement of debts act which divided private debts into two classes and provided for reduction of both.

Under the act, such debts contracted prior to July 1, 1932 will be reduced by the amount of payments made since that date, whether such payments were made on principal or interest.

The balance then remaining will be paid in 10 annual instalments with no interest. The rate of these instalments will be [illegible] per cent [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Coal Burned Underground

Means Trying Out New Idea For Blasting Purposes

To save the cost of transporting coal there mine to consumer the scheme of burning it underground and piping the resulting coal gas hundreds of miles to cities has often been proposed. Now word comes from Russia that the idea has been put into practice, on an experimental scale. After tunnelling through a subterranean coal vein near Lisichansk, engineers deliberately set the vein afire, capped the shafts and built a dam to retain the water. When the gas from the burning coal pocket became a giant underground retort yielding quantities of gas The first samples contained three heating but as the underground fire grew in intensity the quality of gas rapidly improved. Spend Day To Film Eagle In Flight

Scenes In "The Great Barrier" Are Going To Be Genuine

Two members of the Gaumont British unit, engaged in making "The Great Barrier", Canadian railway building drama, in the heart of the mountains of British Columbia and Alberta spent one whole day to secure a small "shot" for the picture—an eagle in flight.

Sepp Algvier, internationally famed photographer, and Rudolf Arrmer, guide and mountain climber by profession set out on an expedition to obtain the desired film and were doubly successful in that they caught two flying eagles in one take in as much as one bird in another length of negative. The views were secured in the rough country near Rockaway Creek in the South of Golden, B.C., and naturally these specialists were elated with results although the assignment meant a long tramp through thick forests and an arduous climb before reaching a likely roost where they had to wait for six hours before the eagles obligingly appeared above them To secure the picture, too, they had to pack heavy camera equipment as well as ordinary supplies

The flight of the flying eagle could have been faked by the use of a stuffed dummy but "The Great Barrier" is the type of film made that way the Gaumont British unit travelled 6 000 miles from London to make the actual scenes in the rugged locales of the pioneer construction feat of more than 50 years ago. Incidentally, the eagles are to be used in the sequence in which Major Hell's Bells Bonnare surgeon to the king has been attacked

Believes In Control

Jack Miner Not In Favor Of Protecting Hawks, Owls And Other Vermin

1 Jack Miner does not believe in protecting hawks owls and other vermin that steal chickens, while humanity is imprisoned for the same act

2 Jack Miner does not believe in protecting hawks, owls, etc., that live on song and insectivorous bird life 365 days a year, and then imprison, fine or punish a child for committing the same act once a year.

3 Jack Miner does not believe in protecting hawks, owls, weasels, etc., that live on pheasants, partridge and quail 365 days in the year, while pheasants are fined, prosecuted, or imprisoned for violating the game laws once a year.

4 Jack Miner does not believe in any State or Federal Government liberating upland game birds, at thousands of dollars expense, and protecting hawks, owls and other vermin that eat them up alive.

5 Jack Miner never uses the word "exterminate". He believes in control, whether it be animal, plant, insect, hard life, or even humanity, and he feels he has a right to his own opinion, as much as any individual has to obtain the animal, insect or bird king-dom should rule If a man wants a hawk or owl sanctuary, or a police force, Jack Miner does not kick, but that is all he will ever have, because the police will be robbed of the more valuable things of life. Yet, if a person is raising chickens or other poultry, or if a person has a sanctuary where small song and insectivorous birds nest, or if he has a garden, the man must control and destroy the weeds and the undesirable

Making It Clear

The parish council of a small German town had to draw up a regulation making it incumbent on owners of dogs to put them on a lead when out walking The first draft read as follows

He who owns a dog and is seen running about the streets without a lead will be shot."

That can't be right" said a member of the council. "It sounds as if the owner was to be shot."

The regulation was redrafted, and now runs thus He who owns a dog and is seen running about the streets without a lead will be shot the dog"

Science Scores Again

Finds Simple Solution To Puzzle Over Heat-Resisting Brick

A simple solution to the 30-year puzzle of the strange, destructible behavior of refractory, or heat-resisting, brick when made from certain types of flinty clay found in Ohio and adjoining States, has been discovered by Prof. J. O. Everhart, member of the research staff at Ohio State University's engineering experiment station.

For three decades or more research workers and manufacturers have had an almost continual headache over the mysterious, and costly, actions of the brick during its manufacture from this clay and have pondered solutions as to why

Blast furnace operators have placed a brick floor in the bottom of the stack, later to discover the brick floor sagging on top of the mass of molten metal.

Incinerators have been put out of commission because brick popped out of the sides almost as rapidly as they were put to use

Brick made in the top of the kiln were as much as one-eight inch longer than those at the bottom, although they were all intended to be the same size

Everhart's solution to the problem is merely to grind the clay into finer particles. This short solution to such a weighty problem is important to everyone in Ohio and other states which use millions of dollars worth of this kind of brick each year, as well as to the manufacturers. Eighty per cent. of fireclay products have as their major constituent this flinty clay, found in the coal regions.

Civilization Has It

Superstition Not Confined To People Of Primitive Lands

There are many primitive superstitions among the skyscrapers of New York and the farmhouses of Iowa, as there are in the jungles of Africa or the inner fastnesses of Tibet, according to Claudia de Lys, who has been around the world three times tracing superstitions to their origin. She has travelled through strange places on all the continents, but she says civilized countries have as many as the others

"I have lived in an African village where tiny bells tinkled on the treetops to keep off malevolent spirits." Mme de Lys says. "I have visited tribes where men were forbidden to dance with women. Yet these things are no more strange than what I have found in the United States, where there are horseshoes above doors, where the whiskers of chickens are pulled apart, where football teams have mascots, where people are turned in effigy and loads of hay are wished on."

Uncommon Tidbits

Louis A. Carter, otherwise known as "Panhandle Louis" of the Bowery, New York, was sentenced to 15 days in the Essex County Penitentiary, although he told Recorder Lloyd Scully that it wasn't his fault he had to beg. He had gone to Atlantic City looking for a job pushing wheel chairs, but found the wages small. But he found that during the night it was too cool to work and during the day it was too hot.

TURNING TO THE GENTILES

Golden text: I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, That thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. Acts 13:47.

Lesson: Acts 13:13, 14:28; Romans 10:8-18.

Devotional reading: Psalm 73:6-13.

Explanations And Comments

The People of Lystra Attempt to Offer Sacrifice to Barnabas and Paul. Acts 14:8-18. It had been Paul's custom on reaching a new city to begin his preaching in a synagogue, but at Lystra there were no Jews and consequently no synagogue, and Paul began to preach in the open air to the Gentiles. Sitting near by was a man, "being impotent in his feet, a lame man unable to walk ever since he was born." (Moffatt's translation). Paul saw the man s eager attention and perceived that he had faith to be made whole.

With a loud voice Paul said to the cripple, "Stand upright on thy feet." And he leaped up and walked. "Paul and Barnabas in their new life had put in the physical order, but in the spiritual order he was doing it all the time. He was giving people new strength of will, a new passion for freedom and upliftment of character, and all this through the power of Jesus Christ" (Gibson Smith, Ephesus).

The multitude marvelled as they saw the man walking, and they cried in the speech of Lycaonia, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men." It was true in the universal language of the Roman Empire at this time "To be civilized" meant they abandoned the less familiar Greek in which they had hitherto been content to speak, and returned to their own tongue by shouting in their native language, as I often witnessed in Welsh crowd break forth into the vernacular in the heat of some oratorical eminence" (Maurice Jones).

Not understanding the Lycaonian languages, Paul and Barnabas then evidently returned to the market place, while the priest of Jupiter, whose temple was outside the city, brought oxen and garlands into the gates and with the multitudes would offer sacrifice.

It was customary for the Jews to express their grief or horror at blasphemy by tearing their outer robes from the neck down. Hearing what Paul and Barnabas rent their garments as an hearing the blasphemy of the crowd they rushed among them and cried out: "Why do you these things? We are human beings, men of the same nature as you, and have come to you with good news, bidding you to turn you from these vain gods and temples and worthless to the true God, the Maker of heaven and earth, and sea and all that is in them." Until now God had left them to their own ways, he told them, and yet they had not been wholly without knowledge of him, for his gifts had borne witness to him, his rains and fruitful seasons had furnished them food and brought them gladness. With difficulty Paul thus restrained the people from offering sacrifice to him and Barnabas.

A Lucky Catch

Fisherman Rented In Bread Now Tire For Car

Fishing may be termed a "easy man's sport" but Harold Graham, of Scotia (county), demonstrated that it is possible to get "tired" while angling. Deciding to try his luck while passengering aboard the "flat" near Fairbanks Lake on the Espanola highway, Ontario, Graham unlimbered his fish line. His fourth cast hooked something heavy and he rested in a brand new tire, which he promptly substituted for is own tattered relic.

Receives Colors By Cable

Transmitted In Thirty Minutes From Paris To U.S. Steers

Colors were transmitted by cable for the first time when New York and Chicago stores received five new colors direct from Paris salons within 30 minutes of transmission. The stores also received designs by radiophoto, and put the new creations into immediate production.

The transmission marked the inauguration of the new colorcode service which breaks down colors into their numerical equivalent which, when transmitted by cable, are reproduced on a small colorable machine. The new device, it is claimed, will cut the time of fashion duplication of Paris creations to a matter of minutes rather than days.

The colors were sent from private fashion showings at the salons of Marcel Hechasa, Molyneux, Patou and Schiaparelli. With the difference in time of the two nations, the colors were reproduced in New York at an earlier hour than they were shown in Paris. Reproductions were on sale within 48 hours.

Howard Ketcham, inventor of the device, claims that the machine will describe color variations to an accuracy of some 1,300,000ths. The transmitting machine, he explained, consists of a cabinet about the size of a Gladstone bag. Eighty-seven discs with the universal symbols of all the color combinations complete the equipment. One or more of the discs are placed on a cylinder which, when revolved, resolves into a any solid color desired.

The receiving station operator first matches the shade desired on his colorable machine, and then cables the code numbers to the sender. He matches them on another colorable machine. Each cabinet is equipped with duplicate cylinders, and upon precise duplication of the different currents in use throughout the world by the meshing of Mr. Ketcham, colors have three variables, hue or wave length, value or light strength and chroma or purity. By varying these are determined, the color is determined. The colors sent were mundane, ranging from yellow, dungeon red and bleu de fumee.

Must Accept Money

Aged Don's Heirs Take Cheque Refused By Their Father

Don Mariano Carbungero of Guaga, Pampanga, must take $7,500 in sugar processing tax money whether he wants it or not.

The aged don was dead set against accepting the money, because, he declared, it was offered him in violation of the laws of God."

The don is a land owner, and upon the lands grow sugar cane. From the canes, the ruins fell, all nature smiled and the don's crop was something to boast about.

Then came the New Deal's crop control plan. The don's cane was destroyed by fire. The processing sugar mill was authorized to pay him $7,500 out of processing tax funds.

The don soon heirs to the don's fortune, insisted that he accept it, and when he continued to refuse the heirs brought suit against him. The don's court ordered that the money be paid to the heirs.

His decision shattered, the aged don just shook his head as the cheque was handed to his sons. He told friends that he would not be responsible for any act of divine providence that may befall his sons.

Many Children Injured

British Government Alarmed By Report On Road Accidents

One of the most disturbing features of a Ministry of Transport report issued in England is the high number of children meeting death in road accidents in England

The report shows that more than 10 per cent. of the fatalities during the periods under review were children under the age of five years. There were 316 victims of that age span while 541, or more than 17 per cent were between the ages of five and 11 years

Most accidents occur on Saturday and the report has noted that Friday night per cent. of the crashes occur during daylight hours and, surprisingly, only two per cent when the countryside is shrouded in fog or mist.

Latest German Sport

"Hiking on water" is the latest German sport. A device, which consists of two tube-shaped struts of light material, measuring from six to nine feet each and weighing some thirteen pounds, enables the wearer to skim over the surface of the water like a skier over snow. A distance of fourteen miles on the Baltic Sea was recently covered, by a man wearing water skis, in four hours.

Not Primitive Affair

Life On Australia Sheep Station Is Very Pleasant

Life on a sheep station in Australia is far from the primitive affair generally imagined by people on the other side of the world from "down under," according to Mrs. Hedley Hardman, which probably explains why she is one of a cabinet about the size of a Gladstone bag. Eighty-seven discs with the universal symbols of all the color combinations complete the equipment. One or more of the discs are placed on a cylinder which, when revolved, resolves into a any solid color desired.

A Rare Water-Plant

Grows Only In Australia And Feeds On Insects

Somewhere in a Queensland swamp there is a small rare water-plant which feeds on insects.

To find a specimen of this plant, Utricularia dichotoma, Mr. Hamilton Professor F. K. Lloyd, Emeritus Professor of Botany at McGill University, Montreal. He has arrived in Australia for the purpose.

The plant is perhaps the rarest of the 475 known species. It lived on flesh.

Since it was discovered in 1875 by the botanist Arnuitt not a single specimen of it has been found in any other part of the world. It feeds on minute insects which it entraps with its waving tendrils.

Professor Lloyd has already travelled in the Dutch East Indies, China and Central America in search of the botanical specimen. He is ready to spend at least a year in Australia on his latest quest

List Of Accidents Proves There Is Something In A Name

The following was written by Neal O'Hara, from

There's not [illegible] name after all Hugh Williams, for instance. Here's an authenticated record On December 5, 1863, the British ship Mistral foundered in the English Channel The only man to escape was Hugh Williams. In 1785, a schooner crashed into the Isle of Man Only one man was saved and his name was Hugh Williams On August 5 1620 a pleasure boat sank on the Thames, near London. A passenger named Hugh Williams escaped. And on August 19 1800, seven men were drowned when a ship from Leeds sank Two men an uncle and nephew were saved Each was named Hugh Williams

Sorry He Spoke

A beautiful young woman entered the outer office and asked if the manager was disengaged

"Well, he's either busy," replied the secretary, doing his best to be complimentary, "but he's always pleased to see pretty girls like you."

Is that so?" replied the visitor, in a voice which would make a refrigerator feel like a furnace in comparison. "Will you please tell him his wife wants to see him."

A Much-Abused Word

"Thoroughbred" Is One That Is Bred Right

A word much abused in its everyday use is "thoroughbred." A provincial government bulletin received by the dog editor is here—or was:

"The word 'thoroughbred' is sometimes misused. It means that the animal is bred right. That can be right" said a member of the council. "It sounds as if the owner was to be shot."

The regulation was redrafted, and now runs thus He who owns a dog and is seen running about the streets without a lead will be shot the dog"

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
CHESTER GRAM

"Yes, not as much as you might be the very girl I'm looking for," said Jack Allen he went on amazingly: "I've been hunting this town over, turning everything upside down, seeking that Fate would send me a girl such as you seem to be. A lovely girl who has been places and seen things, who could take her place anywhere, and probably has, even if she wouldn't want it known—a girl without family ties or other encumbrances, you understand?" His smile twinkled at her a little crookedly. "Beginning to get a little of the why of the crass examination?" And a girl with sufficient disregard for the conventions to allow herself to be molded into the type I want her to represent. A reckless, heartless, fun-loving playmate!" Again the twisted smile. "I was beginning to believe such a girl could exist only in fiction, but—"

Starr caught her breath sharply, looking at him as though searching for the Mephistophelian physical attributes his words intimated were there, then away, but in one quick glance, decided not to make the bald statement that she feared that the man was a mild way. "I—er—I assure you I'll not attempt to inflict myself upon you against your better judgment in such a business proposition—merely. You will be on a salary. You see, it will be a matter of life and death to me that I am playing, as you my you want to play, you will actually be working for me!"

"Leltak ra'ida, effendim," said Starr softly.

"Have it your own way," said the man, carelessly. "I salute you, too, and you can take it or leave it."

Starr wanted to study him, did not dare. Instead, she got a fleeting glimpse of his eyes, she was instantly ashamed of her suspicions. What-ever else this was, this "Hassan" of Broadway, he wasn't that kind—

He wasn't the kind who picked up girls on the street, who sometimes sat in cafes merely because they knew alone. He didn't have to. He had but to look at a woman and decide if irresistible to the opposite sex Hadn't she felt it herself when they were introduced? Or had it been before and after? Starr made a mental guess that her "Hassan" had kept his eyes on her from the time of the phone, drumming her pedal-fingers nails, waiting for his call

Starr looked down into the water who hovered obsequiously near. His eyes were on Starr. There seemed to be a faint smile of doubt in them for all he had said

"I've got a lot more than I thought he said. "There's plenty I've got to learn, but I'm getting the getting of here—my place isn't far away, we can have a bite of supper and talk about . . ." He was rising [illegible] go.

Starr did not answer for there was no answer She was conscious only of the soft clatter of clinking glasses, of the murmur of voices in the near-by tables, the unreality of everything as she picked up her purse and followed the man. She felt as in a daze as she felt him take her arm and guide her toward the taxi rank, though she had no will of her own

She made only one remark as he settled her in the taxi

"I'm afraid I won't be a very good companion, Hassan," she said. "Not when you drifted by I I feel just like breaking things

"Don't let that interfere with a of your childish pleasures he answered laughed, cheerfully. "Anything you want to break, break. I've got a lot of ex Christmas presents at home you can try your hand at. And the pleasure will be all mine

The name old thing merely dressed up in new words!

Starr had thought that there was no room in her tired heart for more emotion. But another worm of bitterness ate in, creeping along, lingering, making itself at home.

Yet in spite of it she found herself considering the offer. This was not the same thing she had been up against at the employment agency. It was quite another matter. No lascivious old beast who wanted to empty gyps to the guise of secretary, who wanted you to "be nice to him." This man—he represented so much of all she had looked upon from afar. He was her own kind. He represented -glamour.

Starr hitherto well catalogued thoughts on one subject whirled in a vortex, spun to a centre. Other girls—Girls she did not envy—not less than six months of life. Every day. They thought nothing of it. Why not she, who had so little to lose, so much to gain? This stranger, this New York Arabian Night's "Hassan" who had materialized from the subconscious wish, was offering her everything she wanted so desperately—except true love of course. But she did not expect to accept from any man, even though it should be offered.

Love, so much a bottle as her head lifted with the impertinence of one of those ancient princesses she read about

"And the price?"

"Hassan" sounded suddenly shocked, as if quickly he moved a bit away from her.

"Oh, you mustn't misunderstand me, Miss Allison," he said, then, in a hurry, but in one quick glance, decided not to make the bald statement that she feared that the man was a mild way. "I—er—I assure you I'll not attempt to inflict myself upon you against your better judgment in such a business proposition—merely. You will be on a salary. NEED AGGRESSIVE SELLING POLICY

A more aggressive sales and promotion policy for Canadian products in the British market is essential if Canada is to take advantage of better opportunities there and keep apace with other Dominions in the search for increased sales, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, believes, as a result of his tour in the Old Country. Mr. Gardiner spent six weeks on a mission which had as its main object to see whether agreements or no agreements, it was not possible to increase our ship means of agricultural products to the United Kingdom.

The matter came back with some apparently proposal which will be discussed at the colleagues in their capacity as well as an organization consider ... what steps if any, Canada should take to improve ... which in ... Mr. Gardiner ... to new ... amount to carry on the kind of extensive advertising and investigation which would be going on ... there is a need for more ... advertising but the ... the producers here and the producers of Canada should be kept more fully informed about ... markets needs and desires of the British buying public.

VERMILION BOY WRITES FROM GREAT BEAR LAKE

Working At Cameron Bay, Where Beefsteak Is $1.00 Pound

An interesting letter, relating to conditions in the new northern mining field at Great Bear Lake was received recently from Vic McKee. The letter was not meant for publication but contains so much of interest concerning a field of which little is known that part of it follows. Vic is a member of a carpentering crew that is working for one of the mining companies carrying on activities in the rich mineral area.

Cameron Bay.

"We landed here Saturday about 2:30 in the land of the midnight sun and what a place! It doesn't look like much from the sky, just all rocks for hundreds of miles around, and when I say rocks, I mean mountains of them and whole islands of them too. Great Slave Lake has thousands of islands in it, it's area is about 600 or 700 square miles, with water and rock taking up about half each.

We enjoyed the plane trip immensely, it would take years to tell you all about the different parts on the way out here. We just went to Ft. McMurray the first day, followed the Athabasca river, then went across Lake Athabasca to Chipewyan and down the Clive river, and this is really a steam, 1½ miles wide in places and full of islands, channels and backwaters. We went by Fort Fitz and stopped at Fort Smith for dinner. Then on to Fort Resolution, the most forsaken place on the map, via Fort Rae to Outpost Island. This is a nice sizable field to among the rock islands in Great Slave Lake. We went from there on to the Yellowknife, which is another new mining field on the side of the lake, where the Yellowknife river empties into the bay.

At the former place we had supper. Meals were $1.50 but it's a real meal. Up here meals are $1.50, eggs $1.00 per doz., bread 50c per loaf. Wood costs $20.00 a cord and they have to haul it about 20 miles.

The camps are clean, good beds, springs and mattresses. Electric lights all over, lots of washing and drying places, good water, good fishing, oats are good and lots of them. The cook is a good one and has pickles, jams, cakes of all kinds all the time. They brought in fresh celery, tomatoes and lettuce on the plane and the boys certainly enjoyed them in a big way.

We were in the head of the shaft on Sunday. It's frozen down to the 250 foot level all of the time.

The machinery is all more modern with steam heat, big diesel engines, steam boilers, fuel oil drums for tempering and treating steel, etc. Everything is run by power with compressed air for the shafts and drilling. We are working 12 hours a day and don't know how we can get all the buildings closed in before the cold weather sets in.

The flies are bad, they get into your eyes, up your nose and into your ears and bite like young pups.

HIGH SCHOOL TRACK MEET AT LLOYDMINSTER SEPT. 25

The annual high school track meet is scheduled to be held in Lloydminster on Friday Sept. 25.

The meet is open to all high schools in this section of the province and is held alternately in Lloydminster and Vermilion.

Four individual trophies are donated as well as two school trophies. Individual trophies are championship. Last year Lloydminster won the school cup for the fourth successive year, Vermilion having taken it for the three years preceding that. Last year the winner was not decided until the very last event on the program, the boys relay, was run.

Local school athletes have high hopes of coming out on top this fall and have started in to three weeks intensive training.

CHATSWORTH CHATTER

Threshing is almost completed in this district. It certainly doesn't take long when there is an outfit going on almost every farm. Here's hoping everyone gets finished with the weather.

Mrs. W.J. Fooks, Keith and Jimmie left on Sunday night's train for Arcola.

Mrs. M. Carlyle and family of Acme plan to return to their home this week end, having delayed their departure until threshing was complete out at F. W. Thompson's.

School reopened to-day (Tuesday) with regretful but rather excited children hurrying off once more. The School Fair should be something to look forward to and encourage them —a holiday after holidays—thus the children should have an incentive to work to work.

A very sad ceremony took place at Telford's (we hear) sometime last week when Jacky Milton, Topsy was the victim of a fatal accident. Mr. Eric Hughes read the funeral service and Jack, Joan and Mog were chief mourners. The last time I saw poor Topsy she was fittingly marked with a beautiful stone, flowers etc

Mrs. Hawkesworth, Mr. J. Bishop Miss Louise Bishop and Mr. C. Ill shop of Thorncliffe were Sunday visitors at the K. Thompson home.

A dance was held at Bloomingdale school last Friday in aid of E. Summers, who is ill.

Several friends of Rudy Mercosky in this district attended the wedding dance last Friday night in the Elks hall. Everybody appeared to be enjoying themselves and we all wish Rudy and Mrs Mercosky every success and happiness.

And as this is being written before the threshers get in for supper, we'll just sign off for this week

their surplus consternation and general embarrassment when the object of their interest and their own timidity, proved to be a full blooded southern lady, in plain English, a colored girl

The trustees had done their work of selection only too well, they had picked probably the only colored lady, with a teacher's certificate in the province The young lady returned to Edmonton by the next train, the trustees feeling that such action was the only course open for their own welfare as well as that of the lady in question.

NORTH SCHOOL DISTRICT FACES UNIQUE SITUATION

Choose Teacher Too Carefully

A situation, which no doubt would prove to be unique in the annals of rural school districts in the province of Alberta, was experienced by the board of trustees of a well known school well to the north of Vermilion.

This school board was forced with the necessity of engaging a new teacher and accordingly advertised for a lady teacher. A large number of applications were received for the position and after considerable work in culling the applicants, a lady with a first class certificate, was accepted to be the pick of those applying, was chosen. She was communicated with and accepted the position. On Friday last she was due to arrive at the station closest to the S.D and num groups of the young men of the district as well as some of the trustees were on hand to meet her. Judge

Canada Birth Rate Decreased in 1935

20.2 Per 1,000 Population; Death Rate Is 9.6 in Dominion

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—Slight decline was shown in live births in Canada during 1935 at 221,226, a rate of 20.2 per 1000 population compared with 221,302 and a rate of 20.5 in 1934, the dominion bureau of statistics reported Sunday.

Illegitimate births in 1935 numbered 8,337 a rate of 2.8 per cent of all live births against 8,070 and a proportion of 2.6 per cent in 1934. Still births totaled 6,444 or 2.8 per cent of all births, compared with 6,452 in 1934 with the same per cent age.

Exclusive of still births, there were 106,511 deaths during 1935, a rate of 9.6 per 1,000 population against 101,282 and a rate of 9.4 the previous year.

Deaths under one year numbered 16,723, a rate of 71 per 1,000 births against 15,870 and a rate of 72 in 1934.

Maternal deaths totaled 1,063, a reduction from the preceding year, when there were 1,167 deaths. The maternal death rate of 1935 was 4.9 per 1,000 live births compared with 5.3 in 1934.

The natural increase of the population of Canada in 1935 amounted to 115,715 against 119,721 in the preceding year. The rate of natural increase, 10.6 per 1,000, was the lowest during the period commencing with 1926 for which statistics are available

The marriages of 1935 numbering 76,883 showed an increase of 2,791 from the preceding year. The 1935 figure closely approached the total of 77,298 for the year 1929, peak year for marriages in Canada, but the marriage rate of 1935 was only 7.0 per 1,000 population as against 7.7 in 1929

Just a gentle reminder that the next Ball here is planned on Friday the September 11 with a dance. From the southern boundary line to the Airside (this is the township line) Cheatra is well and favorably known and they intend on this occasion to excel all previous efforts in dispensing dance music

Hailey White with his threshing outfit and with Bill Hinchcliffe's help threshed around here last week. Grow ers are making heroic efforts to clean the fields before frost sets in but there will not be a great deal left by the 11th, in good time for all the boys to enjoy a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael Lake is planning for an interesting debut to the social life of the district next month. Three speakers from Island Hill and three from Lemgate Lake will debate on a subject the nature of which will be given the Standard later

The funniest thing we have seen across for a long time was Hi Pyes dispatch from Edmonton announcement was made of the appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate various phases of the problems in southern Alberta but Hi W.N Thant minister of agriculture Under an order-in-council just recently passed the commission is to be composed of Mr Justice Ewing of the supreme court of Alberta who will act as chairman, Roy W. Hogg prominent farmer in the Lethbridge district, who was nominated to the commission by the Dominion government, and Dr. P.A Wyatt of the soils department of the University of Alberta.

NEIGHBORHOOD NARRATIVES

From the Neighborhood of the South-East

Is there any real reason why Vermilion cannot follow the example of Big Valley and institute a dormitory for non-resident High school students? Oh yes, we are fully aware that such can hardly be made available for this year's crop of scholars, but with a new ruling coming into effect in secondary school grades, surely it would be practical for the Vermilion inspectorate to make preparations to take care of the crowd of high school students coming along when a better economical system leads to better vocational chances.

The Woodvale Glee Club were very pleased in welcome to the last meeting a carload of the Ross family, all one with Mr. and Mrs. W. Isely and were Dorothy and Johnny. After a rather watering vote it was at last decided to hold the next Glee Club dance on Sept. 18th, since our threshing would likely be pretty well over by then.

The S. C. study group convened immediately after to clear up a few points re registration details. After this, lunch was served by hostess of the Glee Club and Mrs. Priedlar.

LOYALTY ROLL PRESENTED TO CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

VETERANS WRITE PAGE IN RAILWAY HISTORY

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 27.—A grey-haired veteran of the steel highway, forced lined by long years spent in a locomotive cab, but once a youthful fireman who rode his engine into Ottawa on that historic day of Confederation, in 1867, was typical of approximately four Canadian National Railways veterans who gathered this afternoon in the Club Room of the Union station to signalize the anniversary of their railway entering upon its second century of service to the public.

Inscribed with the names of more than 6,000 men and women on the pension lists of the system, veterans prompted to the Canadian National Railways a Loyalty Roll, enclosed in a walnut chest suitably engraved, and surmounted by a silver working model of a modern, mammoth passenger engine, made itself by a veteran who has 52 years of active service to his credit. Supported substantially by every veteran in the Canadian National Railways and its lines in the United States, the memorial was truly international in character and wrote a page in railway history which, for loyalty and unique design alone has never been duplicated before.

The presentation address was been tingly focused in esteem and dedicated the growth of land transportation from the days of the stage coach to the present time of the rails, the streamlined "Silver Dart" diesel of the vast National System was represented pictorially. Quebec by the Chateau Frontenac, Ontario Gateway inaugurated the railway epoch in Canada, the Maritimes by their pioneer locomotive, the "Albion," Manitoba by the "Lady Eighy" of 1857 and the United States lines by the native power of 1876. Western Canada by the Prairies type of 1900, and the entire system united by No. 6000.

The address read: "We, the veterans of the Canadian National Railways and associated companies, desire to give expression to the good will with which we bear to the retired and the staff. As it enters upon its second century of service to the public. We, the Canadian National carries with it the sincere good wishes of the great army of veterans—more than 6,000 men and women—who have completed their years of active railroad service but whose hearts remain loyal to their railway. To our nation wide transportation system and to the 60,000 men and women employed upon it, we pledge our loyalty and support, confident that the years ahead will bring to the enterprise full measure of success. Six thousand two hundred and seventy names and inscribed on the scroll enclosing roll of Canadian National veterans."

T. H. Hazlehurst, President of the Canadian National Veterans' Association, Toronto district No. 1, who presided, read a letter of regret from S. J. Hungerford, President of the National System, who, owing to a recent family bereavement, was unable to be present. Mr. Hungerford wrote in part:—

"We have learned with a great deal of pleasure of the action which the veterans of the Canadian National System have taken to mark the inauguration, 100 years ago, of railway service in Canada and the form which the expression of good will is taking is a happy one. The railway will feel honored in accepting the loyalty roll." The presentation to the railway was made by A. J. Shapter, of Montreal who made the locomotive model decorating the chest. He drew attention to the engraved plates, one of which read "Greetings from 6,000 C.N.R. veterans to their railway" and another inscribed with "Canadian National Enters Second Century of Service." He voiced the sentiments of all present when he declared that "My memory and that of many of us present goes back to the days of the small wood-burning locomotives and we are proud to have been actively associated with the work of supplying this system with what is undoubtedly the finest motive power to be found on any railroad in the world."

Hich tribute to the spirit which prompted the great army of veterans in making this striking demonstration of their affection for the road was voiced by R.P. Mallory, Assistant to the President, speaking in behalf of Mr. Hungerford. "This loyalty needs no such symbol or token," he said. "It has been expressed in a multitude of ways during the past years. It has been shown by the work which veteran employees have continued to perform for their company, as his

WEDDING DANCE ATTRACTS LARGE CROWD

Several hundreds of people attended the wedding dance last Friday evening in the Elks hall in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Mercosky. During the course of the evening, Mr. Fred Pirth, on behalf of those assembled, presented the young couple with a fine china cabinet. Music for the dance was provided by the seven piece Oriole orchestra.

champions and as the supporters of its cause

"Every business and industry, taking stock of its assets, places a high value upon that something known as good will. I say to you then that no finer asset of any industry than the continued good will of the men and women who have given years of their life and worked faithfully to make that industry a success. Having completed their years of active service, our veterans have not lost interest, but they continue to be members of that great family of workers who got to make up the organization of the Canadian National Railways and Associated Companies.

"We are proud that we have on this System an all-embracing contributory pensions plan, one which ensures that every employee of a certain number of years standing, who has taken advantage of the pensions building facilities afforded, is provided for in the latter years of his life That is an important feature in the conduct of any industry and it is one which will have a tremendous bearing upon the future comforts of those who, in later years, will join our their active service compleated and proud to be known as Veterans of the Canadian National."

Brief addresses of appreciation were also given by W.A. Kingsland, vice-president of the central region, J.B. McLaren, comptroller, Montreal, H. J. McTaggart, general superintendent Canadian National Telegraphs, W.E. Norman, general superintendent Canadian National Express, F.J. Butler, regional treasurer, J.P. Aitchison regional auditor, H. C. Bonnell, general passenger agent, F. R. Perdue foreign freight agent, and F. Pryor, assistant superintendent of pensions and relief, Montreal, W.G. Gilman, general chairman, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, spoke in behalf of the employees of the road, while the veteran officers were represented by C.E. Moore, formerly general superintendent of transportation and J. C. Gardon, formerly general superintendent of motive power and car equipment.

A roll call of the various delegations of veterans present showed large numbers from Port Hyron, Toronto, Portland, Me., Hamilton, London, Stratford, Montreal, Belleville, Brockville, Palmerston and Lindsay, while numerous towns and cities from long distances were represented by a member of the Association Executive. Many hundreds of telegrams expressing every division on the System were either read by the chairman or were on display on the wall of the room.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. Hazlehurst announced that the Loyalty Roll and its cabinet would be placed in the Canadian National Railways display at the Canadian National Exhibition and subsequently would be shown in various towns and cities throughout the Dominion.

VARSITY LECTURES TO START SEPT. 25

Attendance As Great As Last Year Appears Sure

Lectures in the 25th fall session of the University of Alberta will get under way at the university Friday, Sept. 25, with an attendance at least as great as last year expected by officials.

Registration of freshmen students will commence Monday, Sept. 21, while registration of other students will get under way Sept. 23.

For the first time, an entrance examination prize of $200 is being offered for competition among new students. Examinations will be of a general nature and will be held at the university Sept. 1 and 2. The prize is donated by an anonymous donor.

There will be no official initiation of freshmen students entering the university this year, but it is expected that some form of introduction of students to university life will be held.

KENILWORTH RACKELS

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the Kenilworth Rackels Annex last Friday when the young folks were royally entertained by Lavada Lavada drew a large number of people. They seemed to come from all points to enjoy the rolling floor and were royally entertained by the music. Dancing was the most popular form of entertainment, while Miss Marcelle Mayfield's little sister was the center of attraction. The music was supplied by Miss Marcelle Mayfield's little sister, who had been practicing for some time and had been pronounced quite a musician. Miss Lillie Mayfield was in charge of the refreshments. Mrs. Mayfield was in charge to make the meeting a success. We will meet every Friday evening hereafter. Thursday evening at the home of Mrs Jack Dibb. Everybody welcome to join with us in the evening.

We wish to express our appreciation to the station agent Mr Ellis and friend Mrs Bill Hatch Mrs. Hatch was one of our regular attendants at Sunday school and will be greatly missed by the young people at Kenilworth. We are glad to welcome the new district. Sincerest sympathy is extended to Mr Hanna and little son Jimmie.

Despite the busy season a dance for the benefit of harvest and threshing—so cheers for the present.

JOBLESS WILL REGISTER NOW

OTTAWA, Sept. 1.—Registration of unemployed throughout Canada will be carried on during the present month under the direction of the National Employment Commission. Already questionnaires have been distributed and unemployed persons will be asked to fill them out and return

It is understood that the registration will be handled largely through local employment offices and, in some cases, through the municipal offices in the particular locality concerned. It is hoped in this way to arrive at an accurate picture of the unemployment situation.

INOCULATING CLINIC

Dr. J. J. Knoll of Vermilion held an inoculating clinic in the Autumn Leaf school on Wednesday August 26. He was assisted by Nurse Crotsenberg and Miss Mary Louise Knoll. Forty children from Autumn Leaf district and three from Paradise Valley district were vaccinated and inoculated for smallpox, diphteria and infantile paralysis, each child after the operation was presented with a holiday sucker.

HAS EYE BADLY INJURED

Little Gerald Arthurs, eight-year old son of Mr Elsie Arthurs almost lost the sight of one eye while driving in a herd with the little stake, and the hired man who was driving, was returning with his registration papers to sign them on Friday August 22nd. The track went down a hill too fast, the brakes being in poor shape, and struck a stone causing a piece of stick to flip up and break the windshield A piece of flying glass struck the boy in the eye damaging it seriously. Dr Masters of Wainwright ordered the boy to be taken to an eye specialists in Edmonton. The specialist held out good hope of saving the sight of

AUTUMN LEAF SCHOOL RE DECORATED

Mr. Harry Schofeield of Wainwright painted and decorated the interior of the Autumn Leaf school during the week making it look beautifully attractive for pupils when school opened on September 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seale, Mrs Pollock and Mrs. P. Richardson were visitors at the home of Mr and Mrs. A. Frew for Friday evening.

FARM HOME BURNS

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Muir of Paradise valley suffered the loss of their having their home burn to the week. Some of the furniture was saved. The loss is partially covered by insurance

WHEAT YIELDS 27 BUS. TO ACRE

Mr. Bill Johnson of Paardeberg had some barley which yielded 70 bushels to the acre, and the same district Mr Perry's barley yielded 24 bushels to the acre.

We are sorry to hear of the accident to Mr. Shiek of Wainwright last week who had his right arm so badly broken and suffered other serious injuries through having a scaffolding derrick fall on him. It is fortunate that he was not killed Mr Shiek is in the Wainwright hospital

MAJORITY OF VOTERS REGISTER

Fifty-five of the twenty-seven hundred on the voters list in the district obtained registration papers and but three or four of them failed with the papers to have them signed The Registration Bureau at the Autumn Leaf school was in charge Mr W Hetherington, who was assisted by Mr. J. Little

RELIGIOUS DRAMA PRESENTED IN NORTH VERMILION FIELD

On Sunday Aug 23 Alberta's North Vermilion and Island Hill had their usual church service presented in the form of a religious drama entitled "The Way of the Cross". The eighteen players from Allandale during the development of the play very effectively brought out the important message. "Christ came to save the world." Special praise is given to Mrs Orley Gunness, who took the part of Mary, mother of Jesus so well she depicted hardships one would find in going the Way of the Cross, but in the end she as well as every one have happiness ahead and only by the crucifixion of her Son could all be saved Flower of Youth and Beauty, one of the characters, represented the lack of faith today, now too knelt at the Cross of our Lord after a full understanding The required effort had been beautifully done by the church committee after the benediction quietly left their places leaving the players reverently kneeling with eyes raised to the cross

An interesting judgement was rendered recently at Moncton, N.B. in a charge taken under the Exp Grad ing Regulations when the maintenance of Mrs Mary Louise Knoll, a widow resumed to have the charge dismissed on the basis of the judgement rendered by the Appeal Courts of the Western Provinces last year on the grounds that the dominion Regulations were ultra vires. The magistrate maintained that the original rights were fully protected by the passing of enabling legislation by the province

The Need For Flexible Loans

More cash will be needed in mortgage loan agreements covering security in Canada in future than has been provided for in the past.

In future agreements some regulation should be taken of the possibility of the interest rate of Providence in the affairs and operations of the mortgagor resulting in complete or partial inability to meet maturing annual payments of principal and interest due to no fault of his own.

Experience of the past few years of general economic and agricultural depression have demonstrated that the terms under which loans have been made in the past have been based on the false premise that the farmer is in receipt of an assured and steady income, such as, at least in theory, is enjoyed by the salaried man.

Such agreements provide for the payment on a specified date each year of a portion of principal and one year's interest on the loan, without any provision for postponement of either principal or interest in the event of crop failure which may result from any one of a number of causes over which the mortgagor has no control whatsoever.

The conditions under which agriculture has labored in Western Canada during the past five or six years, resulting in the piling up of mortgage indebtedness and now necessitating debt adjustment on a wide scale, have amply demonstrated the futility of agreements which make no provision for a measure of relief in periods of total or partial crop failure

There is no doubt that much of the work and expense of debt adjustment now in progress could have been avoided had agreements, under which these debts have pyramided, even to the extent in some cases of wiping out the mortgagor's equity, been drafted when the original loans were made, to provide for automatic reduction in the amount of repayments in years in which, because of the operation of natural forces, the mortgagor had little or no income and for an increase in payments in years of bounty, when much of the indebtedness would have been repaid

Not only would endless negotiations with loan companies and the work of debt adjustment tribunals have been materially lessened, but the debtor would have been saved years of mental torture and harassing anxiety as he watched a juggernaut of accumulating interest charges crush him and pictured the arrival of the day when he and his would be dispossessed of all they ever owned.

A form of agreement that would eliminate this dread which must necessarily haunt the days and nights of the honest debtor who does his best to meet his obligations and is only defeated because of circumstances over which he has no control, would be a godsend to all who have occasion to secure loans in the future

It should be possible to draw up an agreement that will provide for repayment of principal sums in accordance with the ability of the mortgagor to pay based on actual returns from honest effort and yet, at the same time protect the lender from loss due to human incapacity or the machinations of dishonesty.

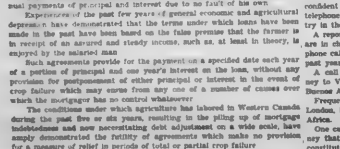
It is interesting to note that agreements incorporating the principle of paying more in times of plenty and less in times of dearth have been adopted and gone into effect with apparent success in Australia where in certain sections of the country the sheep ranchers are subjected to severe drought ravages to the extent at times of wiping out whole flocks. In that country the same principle has been made to apply also to short term credits supplied by the banks

If such a policy can be worked out successfully in Australia there appears to be no reason why it should not operate equally well in Western Canada.

It is to be hoped that some arrangement for greater elasticity in future loan terms can be made by the debt adjustment tribunals who are to be free of negotiation with the loan companies at the present time

That the necessity for something of the kind exists was referred to recently in an address by E. F. Drewry, chairman of the Saskatchewan municipal debt adjustment organization, when he said "I find there has been a rigidity in our system of making loans to farmers that has not sufficiently taken into consideration the wide fluctuations in revenue to the farmer between years of plenty and years of scarcity. Provision should be made for greater flexibility."

The fact that at least some authorities have come to this conclusion strikes a hopeful note that something more commensurate with Western conditions will be arranged for in the future



Liquid Air As Fuel

Newest Energy For Motors Being Tested In Japan

Liquid air serves as fuel for one of the strangest motors ever built, which now is operating in a Japanese laboratory, though it fulfill the task of its inventor, it may bring about a revolution in motive power for vehicles of the land, sea and air. In contrast with the fiery temperatures of a conventional internal-combustion engine, which it somewhat resembles, the new motor operates at temperatures from 230 to 250 degrees below zero. Its small fuel tank holds ordinary air that has been chilled until it is transformed from a gas into a liquid like water. The difference in temperature between this extraordinary fuel and the surrounding atmosphere provides the energy to run the motor. From the fuel tank, the liquid air passes to a chamber where it is allowed to absorb heat from the exterior air. In doing so, it turns to vapor, much as water turns to steam when boiled in a boiler. The pressure of the expanding air drives pistons in a pair of cylinders. Although from a purely system of auxiliary apparatus, virtually all the energy contained in the liquid air is expected to be recovered. Because of its efficiency and small bulk of fuel required the inventor foresees a future utilized fashion of his motor in automobiles, trains, ships, and especially in airplanes The small weight of fuel required would also be an important advantage in aircraft. -- Popular Science.

Long-Distance Phoning

Australia Claims To Have Most Calls In The World

Due to the distance from other centres of civilization, Australia is credited it best more long-distance telephone calls than any other country in the world.

A total of postal authorities, who are in charge of long-distance telephone calls, shown a few feats of the Australians have made in 1935.

Frequent calls from Sydney to London, San Francisco and to South Africa.

One call from Los Angeles to Sydney that occupied 85 minutes and cost £1,000 or $5,000. Also concerned the longest long-distance call ever made into Australia. At regular rates it would have cost $900.

A conference call from London to Australia that embraced Johannesburg, Cape Town, Durban, Melbourne, Adelaide and Perth, where everyone participating talked and heard each other as though they were there they were sitting around a conference table

Since the radio-telephone service was established, there have been 7,000 calls between Australia and the outside world as far afield as Egypt, Persia, Iraq, Finland, Hungary and Palestine

The latest hookup in the long-distance telephone network has been with Tasmania.

New Test Of Death

Will Avoid All Possibilities Of A Premature Burial

A new test of death, discovered by Drs. Salisbury and Melvin of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., is declared in the British Medical Journal.

"The general application of this test would remove forever one of the most haunting fears of mankind—the chance of premature burial," the doctors declare.

The test involves appearance of the eye. All that is necessary is an ophthalmoscope, an instrument for inspecting the retina. If the columns of blood in the retinal veins are broken the patient is beyond resuscitation. This phenomenon takes place after the circulation has been stopped for about ten minutes

Cable-Cars Are Out

Japanese Do Not Want Mount Fuji's Beauty Marred

Majestic Mount Fuji has escaped another effort at modernization and climbers who want to get to the top will have to continue doing it on foot. A proposal for a cable-car route to the summit has been rejected.

The Japanese Home Office, opposing the project, declared that such a railroad would mar the beauty of the mountain and have an adverse effect on Japan's national health.

The reasoning behind the second idea was that a railway would induce laziness and deprive many climbers of the healthful exercise necessitated by the climb.

One report was that a series of anonymous threats had been made to bomb a railway if one were built. The newspaper Jiji understood the reported threats influenced the Home Office decision to reject the request.

Fuji, noted for its perfect formation, is 12,467 feet in height. Nearly 100,000 persons climb it annually.

Home-Made Falso Tooth

Mohawk Made From Metal Crank Case Of A Motorcycle

Falso tooth made from an old motorcycle crank case are the crowning climax of a life of dental experimentation by Albert Young, road worker living in the village of Jump, near Wensleydl, Eng.

First Albert used his ingenuity on the knuckle bone of a leg of mutton but the bone was not big enough. Then he tried to make a brilliant ball which, however, had the same defect the diameter being only two and a half inches.

Success came when he melted down the aluminum from the crank case of the old motorcycle. The melted aluminum was run into an "impression" which he had taken himself

Even so, this set is only for everyday use.

On Sundays his smile reveals a "perfect" set made from the aluminum screw tops of old thermos flasks.

Centipede To Blame

Caused Breakdown At Electric Power Station In Sudbury

Sudbury, Ont., the North-West Frontier, India, was thrown into complete darkness by a centipede. For three successive evenings the city lights failed. On each occasion a breakdown occurred at the electric power station, but experts could not detect the cause. All their investigations—even to a rapid inspection of underground cables—failed to explain the mystery. Then on the fourth night, a lineman found a centipede on the wires which carry the electric current to the city. A number of its legs were ringed. This was taken as sufficient evidence of its previous expeditions.

Finds Thriving City

British Government Official Sees The Settlement While Flying

The lost city of Tong Feng, inhabited by 9,000 Chinese and situated in the mountains of the Malayan Jungle, was found by a British government official while flying over the district.

The official, who was employed in the Land Office of the native Malay state of Johore, was on a large settlement in the heart of the jungle, which he did not recognize. Next day he drove to it, and to his amazement discovered that it was the lost city of Tong Feng.

The government was unaware of the existence of the town, although it has been a thriving agricultural centre for over 100 years.

The inhabitants, who are Chinese, work as rubber planters on an area of more than 10,000 acres. They have built the town as their headquarters, and provided it with all the amenities of a native civilization.

New Centre Of Civilization

Future Development Of World Opportunity Lies Along Pacific Coast

Opportunity for advancement in the world today lies in the Pacific area, Dr. Adamantios Pyzoides of the University of Southern California has been telling audiences lately.

"The European civilization is a dying one today," declared Dr. Pyzoides. "The new centres of vital, progressive and dynamic, lies along the Pacific."

The future development of world opportunity lies, he believes, with the reawakening of Japan, China and India.

"While the various political movements in the Far East," says Dr. Pyzoides, "may not be to our liking, yet because of those movements one-half of the world's population is awakening to the future. With this awakening, the opportunity for business and cultural development of American institutions will be unlimited.

"Competition from European sources will be only negligible because the European nations are too interested in their petty 'international holyard fights' to see what they are missing in the way of truly world development."

MINIMUM PRICE FOR WHEAT SAME AS LAST YEAR

Ottawa.—The Dominion government accepted the recommendation of the Canadian wheat board, making the minimum price of wheat 87½ cents per bushel, basis bond of the lakes, for No. 1 Northern. The minimum price, guaranteed by the government, will in some cases be effect should the market price fall below 90 cents. The new minimum price is the same as that in operation last year.

Announcement was made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King following a session of cabinet council.

The effect of the decision, which was reached at a meeting of the cabinet, will be that the wheat board will not buy any of this year's crop unless the price falls below 87½ cents, when it will step in and support the market by buying from the farmers at prices offered at 87½ cents. In the meantime farmers wishing to sell will do so on the open market.

With this year's crop of wheat now pouring on the market, this is a time of heavy hedging and it is understood the board will hold off buying from the farmers until this hedging-pressure has been removed.

The amount of old wheat held in Canada at the end of the crop year (July 31) was 108,750,000 bushels, part of which is still held by the wheat board but a considerable portion of it is held by private interests.

In his announcement in the prime minister emphasized that the decision was approved only to the extent that it becomes automatically effective whenever the market price for wheat of No. 1 Northern wheat at Fort William drops below 90 cents. A drop below 87½ cents during the open trading would not affect the situation if the market improved to a point above that level by closing.

This announcement follows close upon a visit to Ottawa by James R. Murray, chairman of the wheat board, who was called into consultation by the cabinet. It was felt by the government that a fall in wheat or other action at the present time might seem to prejudice the findings of the commission headed by Mr. Justice W. F. A. Turgeon, which is now investigating the whole aspect of wheat marketing from every angle.

Celebrated Birthday

Would Affect Canada

Australian Group Asks That Trade Treaty Be Denounced

Ottawa.—The proposal to denounce the Ottawa trade agreement between the United Kingdom and Australia, if carried into effect, would indirectly affect Canada because this country enjoys the British preferential rates on some of the goods it exports to Australia. A cable from Adelaide stated the associated chamber of manufacturers have asked that the treaty be denounced.

The trade treaty in force between Canada and Australia was negotiated in 1931 and was in effect when the Ottawa agreements were signed the year following. It was not changed by the imperial economic conference held here. It was originally for three years and has since been extended.

The largest exports of Canada to Australia such as canned salmon, apples, and lumber have definite rates in the Canadian treaty and would not be affected if the U.K.-Australia treaty were killed. Neither would automobile chassis rates but in a large number of miscellaneous items Canada is given the British preference whatever it may be and if these were changed Canada would be affected. They include machinery, textiles and other manufactured goods.

Rains Relieve Drought

But Much More Needed To Bring Much Profitcrop

Ottawa.—Recent rains have partially relieved drouth conditions in southwestern Ontario, southern Manitoba, southwestern Saskatchewan and adjoining areas in Alberta, stated a crop report issued by the Dominion bureau of statistics.

Harvesting, nearing completion, has been generally interrupted by rains. Grain standing the crop in prairie wheat fields. Wheat deliveries were still increasing and would soon reach their peak. Quality was generally good with the protein content extremely high. Yields varied from poor to fair in the wheat growing areas of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. Areas in southern Saskatchewan, farmers are stacking Siberian thistle for winter feed Some hail and frost damage is to be reported in the Calgary and Lethbridge areas by a storm.

Exports From Churchill

Four Vessels Have Already Sailed With Grain Cargoes

Churchill, Man.—Exports of wheat have passed the 1,000,000-bushel mark at the northern Manitoba shipping port. Four trans-Atlantic ships have already sailed with grain cargoes and five more are expected to go outward bound before the season ends early in October The record year for the port was 1934 with 13 sailings.

Since the S.S. Firby sailed August 9 to open the season, shipping season 1,377,000 bushels of grain have been exported and inbound cargoes have included mining equipment, glass and general merchandise for prairie points. The other ships which have already sailed were the Westerwith, Baltavon Post and Jean L.D

Under Tourist Exemption

Largest Amount Of Goods Brought In From United States

Ottawa.—Canadians brought into Canada from the United States goods valued at $793,141 under the $160 tourist exemption during May, June and July, the national revenue department disclosed.

In May, out of a total of $118,893 brought in under the exemption rule, $107,178 came from the United States. In the following month the amount more than tripled, $316,684, worth of goods coming in from the United States out of a total of $349,-

In July there was a slight drop, with $328,129 entering from the United States and $41,256 from other countries, a total of $380,490.

Food Supply Not Affected

Survey Shows United States Supply Up To Average

Washington.—The department of agriculture economists said that the drouth would have little effect upon the United States food supplies from now until the end of next June.

A special survey on "the food situation" by the bureau of agricultural economics said "the supply of food available for domestic consumption will be almost as large as last year."

Taking into consideration prospective yields and available supplies from the previous season, the report said the total food supply for the period ending June, 1937, would be three per cent. below that of last season and one per cent. under supplies following the 1934 drouth.

RED CROSS IS WILLING TO HELP IN DROUTH AREAS

Toronto Norman Somerville of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian Red Cross society, announced the society would care for extraordinary relief cases in the section of the province where the provincial government considers a case of emergency exists.

The Red Cross gladly accepts the task the Dominion government has asked it to undertake," Mr Somerville said His announcement followed the drouth statement by finance minister Charles Dunning who said at Ottawa the government would co-operate with and co-operate with certain problems arising from drouth.

At the same time Mr Somerville announced J W McConnell of Montreal telegraphed an offer to contribute $50,000 provided the society is prepared to raise and administer a special relief fund to care for the extraordinary needs of those suffering because of drouth in western Canada

The government will provide feed, clothing, fuel and feed," Mr Somerville said in a statement accepting the Red Cross assistance in the crisis.

Should Be Abolished

Jury In Quebec Inquest Rules Against Level Crossings

Louiseville, Que A coroner's jury decided level railway crossings should be abolished "wherever possible" to prevent such tragedies as the one that shook this little village on August 15 when a Canadian Pacific Railway freight train collided with a farm truck and 22 of the two-score occupants were killed.

The official verdict at the inquest was that the 22 villagers met an accidental death.

The six jurors, presided over by Dr. Thomas Caron, district coroner, heard evidence of 23 witnesses, several of whom were survivors of the crash, youths who had jumped or been thrown from the truck as it bumped over the crossing on the way home from a political meeting at St. Justin.

Two other suggestions came from the grave little jury after they had deliberated 25 minutes in a small anteroom One was highway police should apply traffic regulations more rigidly, and the other that application for drivers' permits be more closely examined.

EMPIRE TRADE TALKS HAVE BEEN OF GREAT VALUE

Toronto Recent trade talks between British and Canadian cabinet ministers "proved invaluable in creating an understanding of each other's position which must be the preliminary to sound mutually advantageous agreements." Rt. Hon. Malcolm Macdonald, Dominion's secretary in the British cabinet, declared in an address by trans-Atlantic telephone as he opened the British trade section at the Canadian National exhibition

To a distinguished gathering in the government building in the exhibition grounds, the son of Ramsay MacDonald spoke of inter-imperial trade after he illuminated the building by pressing a cable here in the British general post office London, on the eve of the exhibition opening. Development of mutual trade between the United Kingdom and Canada "is a matter of importance to both as a contribution towards securing employment and maintaining a good standard of life for the people in each land" Mr MacDonald said

"Inter-imperial trade should be taken as the basis," he continued "It was with this object before us that after the Ottawa conference we established Empire entry into our market of Canadian goods which under our new fiscal revolution would be free or enjoy a definite preference. What the contribution toward increased prosperity would result in a new trade between these two countries and the hope has been realized We confidently believe you will find a genuine desire for a fair opportunity to compete in your home

His recent weeks as one of my colleagues and I have been engaged in discussions with Canadian ministers in London. We were taking stock together of the results of the Ottawa agreement and considering many steps which we can take to encourage future trade between our countries. The government of Great Britain welcomed the presence of Mr Dunning (Hon Charles Dunning, Dominion minister of finance) and his colleagues here, our talks together proved invaluable in creating an understanding of each other's position which must be preliminary to sound, mutually advantageous agreements. The results of the discussions are now being examined by the two governments, but I hope that the ultimate outcome may be fruitful to both peoples."

MECCA OF CHAMPION CANADIAN PLOUGHMEN

Whatever changes may be wrought by modern progress in the mechanization of the farm, the keen eye and steady hand of the ploughman is as necessary at the present time as it was in the primitive days when sturdy oxen straightened as a great impetus thereto and goals as a means of farm motive power. The straight furrow still excites the thrill of high achievement and moreover is hailed as the work of a master craftsman. To simply demonstrate at the forthcoming annual ploughing match conducted by the Ontario Ploughmen's Association, the Secretary-manager of which is J.A. Carroll, East Block, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario. This four-day meeting, which will be held from October 6th to 9th near Cornwall, Ontario, promises to be one of the most important annual agricultural events in the annals of Eastern Canada. It will not only afford a demonstration of skill in the broadest phase of the art of field husbandry but will also combine a particularly interesting exhibition of home and farm machinery.

This year's ploughing match will be more truly international than in any recent years. Many competitors and visitors are expected from the United States, but the most extensive support will come from Quebec province, from which 25 miles distant from the Quebec border, but, apart from that, notification has already been received that a strong contingent of skilled Quebec ploughmen will be on the prize-winners in contests in that province will attend the meeting. So Ontario ploughmen will have to look to their laurels.

Progress in horse-breeding will be demonstrated at the meeting by plough teams of each breed common in Canada, including Percheron, Belgian, Clydesdale and French Canadian. The French Canadian horse was evolved in the province of Quebec and is the only breed of horses originated in Canada. As the World's fourth will be given to the meeting by the appearance of several yoke of oxen from the province of Quebec

Redemption of Certificates Sept. 10-12

Issuance of any provincial prosperity certificates beyond the $250,000 released as remuneration for July work by unemployed, has not been decided by the government and in any case revaluation of an additional amount is not likely to take place until it is determined how extensively the first issue is moving, Premier William Aberhart declared on Friday.

In the meantime officials are waiting the first redemption of the certificates which will take place on Thursday Friday and Saturday of this week Sept 10 11 and 12.

On those three days, whole salers, retailers and others who establish their bona fide as having accounts to settle outside the province, will be able to redeem the certificates for cash.

The certificates issued so far were to those who had no purchasing power and until these are redeemed and circulated none are available, in view of the government's decision not to issue any new certificates for the time being

SOCIAL EVENING IN AID OF BOY SCOUTS

In order to stimulate interest in the Scout movement the local association are launching a campaign to hold a social evening toward the end of this month under the capable direction of Canon Levesque and his assistants. The boys have taken a keen interest in all branches of the work, and great progress has been made during the past few years.

To maintain the high standard of the splendid work and to see it carried forward local association ask the cooperation of all parents and those interested in Scout and Cub work, in attending the meeting.

Mr. W.S. Beckman Provincial Field Scout Executive Secretary is expected to be present. The Scouts will have a small exhibit of their excellent work and will take part in a short program. Refreshments will be served. Date will be announced later.

CUP RETURNS HOME

C. N. R. Bowling Club

On Labor Day it was fitting that the C.N.R. bowling green should be the scene of some good games, with the result that the local bowlers succeeded in wresting the cup and four rinks' honors, Lloydminster The bowlers brought up some good players and were skipped by an old Saskatoon bowler but the locals were right on their game this time and played consistently. The first game was won by the men and the second was won by the lady bowlers in which game they claimed a seven end win and added out a commanding lead of the opponents. After this a three was in sequence games and they went also 4 to win easily. The third and final game was already in the last by the local players running in some close work right from the first 3 ends.

A very pleasant day was brought to a close by the presentation of the cup and a dainty supper.

It is interesting to note that the Saskatoon tournament team which reached the finals in the Alberta provincial tournaments stopped off on their way back and gave the local players a game or two. Both Saskatoon and Lloydminster players expressed their amazing at the quality of the rinks which despite adverse circumstances for over half the season have been kept in remarkably good shape.

REOPENING OF CAMROSE LUTHERAN COLLEGE

Attention of the educational realty is drawn to the advertisement of the Camrose Lutheran college which announces its reopening for the fall term. The attractive new has a very fine calendar of College on hand which may be examined by anyone interested

RESULTS OF LABOR DAY GOLF TOURNAMENT

A strenuous day's golf was played on Monday when the rink held a competition attended by the majority of its members. The ladies at the last moment, organized and produced refreshments, which greatly added to the enjoyment of the day. It is to be hoped that these ladies will continue this popular item.

The first event was the mixed couples, which was won by Messrs Wiebe and Carman Lenz. The run here up. Mrs Luman and Mr Kaiser made the victors do their best to edge out a victory.

The ladies championship was won by that well known player, Mrs. Lipsey.

In the last event, the gentlemen's championship, Art Wiebe turned in a magnificent 34 to win.

The Hon. President, Mayor Robinson and Mrs Robinson attended the mayor showed us a few fancy golf strokes, before making a humorous speech in announcing the results.

Had Struggle With Grizzly

Mountain Climbers In Rockies Attacked By Mother Bear

The story of a struggle with an enraged mother grizzly bear protecting her cubs in interior British Columbia was related by Mr and Mrs Don Munday. Alpinists who returned to Vancouver from an expedition to the Coast Range.

As they completed a hazardous passage through a 12-foot left in Bearpaw ranges Mount Waddington the Mundays related they looked down on a grizzly cub standing apparently alone.

Darkening their footsteps they [illegible] their cameras on the cub but before they could take a picture the roar of the mother grizzly distracted their attention.

She was standing on the same ledge as they [illegible] was.

Thinking the Mundays began, to yell but the mother bear started her advance. About a yard away she growled off but came having a moment later more fiercely than ever.

Finally Mrs Munday succeeded in reviewing one of the axes and as the bear was in rush at Mr Munday swung his trip ax and had at the bear with [illegible] caused her to drive off.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Editor
The Vermilion Standard
Sir Editor and Fellow Citizens

A great deal of misrepresentation on the Grain Board question has prompted this letter. A little study of the matter would convince every farmer that this method of a reasonable fixed price has been a great advantage All season till the last few months the Grain Board price was higher than the open market sometimes as much as six or seven cents occasionally even more

Instead of knocking the Grain Board the farmers being confirmed "Old Sorts" by nature why not set behind the Wheat Pool movement to establish a course grains board which is it ensures a fair price for your outputs in the end

The Wheat Pool appears to be the only grain buying organization which is in any way under the control and management of the producer Why not get behind the Pool to this matter and show a little spirit in your organization instead of being a drag as the marketers which a few far seeing men are trying to set in motion

Yours for fair prices to all pro ducers

PROTEST MINIMUM WHEAT PRICE

(From Calgary Herald, Sept. 1st)

Directors of the Alberta Wheat Pool, meeting in Calgary for their regular monthly session passed a resolution protesting against the fixed minimum and also the conditions which prevents the wheat board accepting delivery until the price level goes below 80 cents a bushel.

In the words of the resolution the ruling "was considered tantamount to ordering withdrawal of the wheat board from fulfilling the function for which it was formed."

The Pool board expressed the opinion that the federal government in its action failed to consider its producing members as married wheat at world levels and return to the grow ers in Canada a price commensurate with the cost of production.

"What the government's move vir tually amounts to," the Pool directors stated "is an order to the wes tern producer to accept inferior rewards for their labor based on world levels What other class in Canada, outside primary producers, are thus treated."

We feel that the policy of the gov ernment is discriminatory and that the interests of the wheat growers are not receiving the consideration they are entitled to particularly in view of the considerable investment given to wheat growers by the governments of virtually every other important wheat growing country in the world.

The Pools obtained a wheat board after a long struggle and view its inclusion in legislation with a great arm and regret The world wheat problem is not solved by any means and the wheat board an active and an creative wheat board

CHATSWORTH CHATTER

Threshing is completed in this vicinity now and if Sunday night's rain hadn't halted operations this week's work would have seen the end of threshing for this year in all localities hereabouts.

Miss Chrisp spent the week end at her home south of town.

The following conversation took place between two men of a threshing crew :—

No. 1 said to No. 2 (who is working without a shirt)— "What, have they thrashed the shirt off you already"

No. 2—No Abe'hart got it

No. 1 — Abe'hart got it, how?

No. 2—Yes, I had to sell it to buy stamps for my Prosperity Certificates.

The weather has cleared up once more and threshing outfits plan to start again today (Tuesday).

The school children are busy preparing exhibits for the school fair. Here's wishing them the best of luck

News from North Vermilion Circuit, United Church of Canada

This circuit is looking forward to the visit of the Rev. H.A. Boyd, our synod friend, on Sunday September 13. He will preach at Ottawa and at Hawthorn.

Our plans for presenting our religious drama at the fifth point on the circuit have had to be cancelled owing to the fact that Miss Ruth Armstrong has left for Camrose, Miss Vera Adamson for Edmonton and Mrs Adamson is leaving soon for Winnipeg We wish them every success in their new endeavours

Plans are complete regarding all the interior woodwork of North Vermilion church We are indebted to the Sherwin Williams Co of Canada Ltd. for the gift of varnish stain to do the whole job. Will those who do not already know please accept this invitation to work with us on Monday, September 14th. Work will begin early

On September 16th Mrs. Homer Campbell will be hostess to the Rosylvia Woman's Association. There will be a sale of home cooking, a hearty invitation is extended to all On the evening of that day there will be a chicken supper at Allendale. An enjoyable time is anticipated.

Friday the 18th a Box Social is to be held at Island Hill school. There will be a programme also, which will include a short play.

THINKS STANDARD BEST WEEKLY IN DOMINION

A representative of a large Montreal firm who was in Vermilion last week changed his ideas about the general appearance of weekly newspapers when shown last week's issue of the Vermilion Standard. Before being shown the paper he remarked that all weekly newspapers regard loss of their content were untidy in appearance and poorly printed. Mr. W. B. Elford took him up on the charge and produced as proof of his contradiction a copy of the Vermilion Standard. The worthy traveller examined the paper closely and declared that it was the cleanest, neatest, best made up and nicely printed weekly newspaper that he had seen in Canada. He also noted a real purpose in the town by fostering in his paper columns so much of local importance and by bringing endeavors that should be supported to the attention of the populace of the town and district.

HEAVY PRIMARY WHEAT DELIVERIES

An unusually early harvest due to the dry summer and fine weather for threshing has resulted in heavy primary deliveries of wheat in Western Canada. During the first four weeks in August western farmers delivered over 50 million bushels to boot, or nearly four times as much as in the same period in 1935. There is a tendency of the growers to sell more freely and some indications that, where the grain is sold outright, the seller has purchased the May option

QUALITY OF WESTERN CROP

The Board of Grain Commissioners reports that early samples of wheat of the 1936 crop are of high protein content. An average of the samples received graded 16 per cent protein which is approximately 5 per cent higher than last year's crop. The grain will also likely grade much higher than last year, it being estimated that only 15 per cent of the total crop will fall below three Northern.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO ALBERTA POULTRY RAISERS

As an encouragement to the poultry raisers in the province of Alberta who undertake Record of Performance under Federal jurisdiction, the Poultry Branch of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, will provide free flock approval and blood-test service this year to all flocks entered and in good standing. R.I.P

Full particulars with respect to making entry in R.O.P. and details of the work, may be obtained from the Dominion Live Stock Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa As the period for receiving entries are early in the fall, those interested are advised to act with as little delay as possible. G. Corrie, Poultry Commissioner, in making this announcement, points out that each year shows a decided increase in the demand for R.O.P. stock and this is another means whereby Alberta poultrymen can create additional markets for their products.

CAMROSE LUTHERAN COLLEGE
CAMROSE, ALBERTA.

Anyone desiring bookkeepers, stenographers or office secretaries should write us as we have a number of efficient graduates anxious to accept positions.

CAMROSE LUTHERAN COLLEGE is not a large school. Its ideal is not that it shall be a large school, but that it shall be a good school, recognized for the superior type of instruction given by the teachers, scholarship attained by its students, and that wholesome Christian atmosphere which makes for development of character.

Our College emphasizes the following three basic elements in its educational programme:

1. A strong faculty of scholarly teachers, with special training for their particular subjects.
2. Personal interest in every student with regard to moral, spiritual, physical and social development.
3. Individual instruction in all courses in classes small enough to make possible thorough attention to individual difficulties and personal problems.

Camrose Lutheran College is a residential high school and business college. It offers the regular Alberta High School and Commercial courses as outlined by the Department of Education and prepares students for the Departmental Examinations. It also offers Short Courses in business subject. Our school has been in operation for a quarter of a century and welcomes to its halls all young men and women who are in earnest about making their school years count for the most.

It is just at the "high school age" that boys and girls enter upon the most difficult and trying time of life, and it is just at this period that the basic elements of character are developed. What a person is as he comes out of this ordeal he will generally continue to be in after life.

Year's Operations Of Alta. Pacific Grain Co.

Operates 371 Country Elevators

Operations of the Alberta Pacific Grain Company Limited for the year ended June 30th last resulted in a loss of $14,145 compared with a profit of $4,491.13 for the previous year, according to the financial statements made public today by H.E. Sellers, President of the Company. Bond interest of $164,282.47 was met and $351,283.26 added to depreciation reserves.

In view of the uncertainty of the outlook for the coming year on account of the poor harvest in Western Canada, necessity of considering further extension of suspension of sinking fund operations in connection with the company's $3,500,000.00 first Mortgage bond issue will be considered by the directors during the current year, the report indicated.

The report of the directors to the shareholders also states, in part :

"Further impairment of $291,253.47 in working capital position was effected during the year. The arrangement made with the First Mortgage Bondholders in 1934 for the suspension of Sinking Fund payments for a period of three years, expired on June 1st, last. The result of operations during the current year will be the deciding factor on whether application for an extension of suspension of Sinking Fund payments will be made to the bondholders.

"Drought conditions returned to the Prairie Provinces again this year for the seventh time in the past eight years, and indications are that the 1936 crop will be the smallest harvested in many years.

"Company's properties have been maintained in good repair. Taxation continues to be a heavy burden in the districts served by the Company. During the year under review an amount of $92,876.90 was contributed to Dominion, Provincial and Municipal governmental bodies in the form of direct taxes."

The Alberta Pacific is one of the large elevator companies operating in Canada. The company operates 371 country elevators located throughout Saskatchewan and Alberta, and terminal elevators at Vancouver.

Directors and officers of the company are: H.E. Sellers, President, K.C. Allen, General Manager; Cecil Lamont, Secretary; C.J. Bingley, Treasurer; A. P. Greer, Montreal; C.W. Band, Toronto; H.W Webster, Winnipeg, L. Killam, Vancouver and R.W. Ward, Calgary, Directors.

The annual general meeting of shareholders will be held in Calgary, October 27th.

WELL KNOWN FARMER IS SELLING OUT

Alex. Coutts of Vanesti Having Mammoth Auction Sale

Alex G. Coutts, one of the best known farmers in this section of Alberta will shortly have a mammoth clearing off auction sale at his farm, located 23 miles south of Islay. Bills advertising listing and date of sale will be out within the next few days.

Mr Coutts is giving up farming and he and Mrs Coutts intend spending the winter in Ontario

New General Manager is Appointed By A. P. Grain Co.

Announcement was made today by Mr. H. E. Sellers, President of the Alberta Pacific Grain Co. Ltd., that R.C. Allen had been appointed General Manager of the company to succeed J. R. Murray, who formerly occupied that post, and is now Chief Commissioner of the Canadian Wheat Board. Mr. Allen was formerly western manager of the company. His headquarters will remain at Calgary. Mr Allen is well known in grain circles in Winnipeg and Vancouver as well as throughout Alberta.

YOU NASTY MAN!

Someone in High River has a mean eye this week and he's on the lookout for one particular chap with a true sense of retaliation and a sense of humor of a deep-rooted and devastating type. There is much chuckling about town when listening to the story supposedly true—of the chap who entered a hardware and requested "A dollar's worth of nails, please." The clerk very politely asked the customer what size nails he preferred. "Small" he knew shingle nails true but nails he did he prefer spikes." Having spent his life dealing with particular people he was a bit amazed when the reply came "Oh, just nails those up. I'll have a few of every variety." Now a dollars worth of nails means somewhere about seven pounds, but the clerk poured them into the bag and counted fully tying them up, handed them to the purchaser.

In return he was handed a crisp new Prosperity certificate stamped cancelled. "But we don't accept those," he exclaimed. "Oh that's all right then" was the reply. "How take back your nails." The customer and clerk literally walked accross and up or more hand in hand beside the counter gravely betting a sack of salt to sand respecting theorems or violent red nails of a long standing.

High River Times

Although the bulk of Canada's trade with the reduced island of Malta consists of wheat and flour, other important supplies are inland with other commodities which in 1935 included grains, cheese, feed and preserved fruit, canned meats, lard substitutes, condensed and evaporated milk, cheese and confectionery, tanned leather processed and dried fish, wearing apparel and footwear, motor vehicles and automobile accessories.

RESUME OF BILLS PASSED AT SPECIAL SESSION LEGISLATURE

Of the 35 bills introduced at the special session of the legislature which was prorogued Tuesday night of last week, 17 were finally passed and enacted, including some of the most drastic legislation any Canadian province has ever seen.

Of the 17 now acts, 11 became law and effective as soon as Hon. W. L. Walsh, lieutenant-governor of Alberta, raised his hand in signing the same.

The other six are to become effective only upon proclamation by the cabinet.

As in the legislation passed at the regular session last spring, the cabinet is given wide legislatory scope and power in many of the newest acts. It is given power to vary the terms of many of the acts as it desires, or to extend the authority of many of the clauses.

Following are the bills passed during the special session. Whether they act came into effect upon receiving royal assent or whether it becomes law only upon an order-in-council or proclamation by the cabinet is noted in each case:

Alberta Credit House act—Provides for establishment of credit houses under the Social Credit scheme. Proclamation.

Debt Adjustment act amendment act—Extends provisions of act four years to July 1, 1936; makes impossible appeals from decisions of debt adjustment board; gives cabinet power to declare 10-year moratorium. Assent.

Reduction and Settlement of Debts act—All private debts contracted prior to July 1, 1932, replaced by total made since that date; these debts to be paid in 10 annual instalments without interest; maximum interest rate collectable on debts contracted since July 1, 1932, set at five per cent. Assent.

Municipalities Securities Interest act—Prevents municipalities from paying more than three per cent interest on securities. Proclamation.

Prosperity Certificates act—Valid size issue of scrip and authorizes Edmonton to enter into agreement accepting certificates. Assent.

Trade and industry act amendment—Provides for formation of board to investigate price spreads and also fix prices. Assent

Hours of Labor act—Sets maximum 48-hour work week for factories and 54-hour work week for mines; provides employers must allow employees at least 24 consecutive hours of rest in every consecutive period of seven days. Assent

Judicature act amendment act—Prevents any legal action against government or any member of the government. Assent

Minimum Wage act amendment—Provides for inspections of premises of employers, provides penalties for false information and gives Industrial Relation board under Hours of Work act the right to set wage scales on overtime work. Proclamation

Male Minimum wage act amendment—Placing administration under Industrial Relations board, and giving it right to set wage scales for overtime work. Proclamation

Factories act amendment—Giving relation rights to set regulations in sanding inspections of factories, and the fees for inspection. Proclamation

Licensing of Trades and Industries act amendment—Providing for cancellation or license for business of the Hours of Work act as well as of the Industrial Standards act. Assent

Provincial Securities Interest act—Validates order-in-council of June 1 holding interest on provincial debt. Proclamation

Teaching Profession act, 1935, Amendment act, 1936 (No. 2.)—Clarifies

No Extra Pay Given Members Legislature

Get $200 Advance, $450 More if Wanted, on 1937 Indemnity

Only payment which any member of the legislature received for attending the special session just closed was a $200 advance on the next regular session's indemnity of $1,200, with the additional provision that if any member wants to borrow up to $450 between now and the opening of the regular session on the security of the next regular indemnity, he may do so and the provincial treasurer will pay to the leader the amount of the sum borrowed.

This was decided as the indemnity bill was discussed in the committee of the whole house Tuesday after noon, before getting third reading and royal assent.

Actually, the members of the legislature are receiving no indemnity for the special session, it was pointed out, except for the value of the six or eight months' interest on the $200 advance which was paid out to each member as soon as the special session closed.

ISLAND HILL

Mr. George Mead and family, of Campbell Lake district are leaving Friday for Mc Murray. George has obtained a lucrative position at the coast and the committee of the new hall regret his orchestra cannot fulfil their engagement at Friday's dance. The Burt orchestra has been engaged and this well known organization will display some music. Watch for bills. The committee wish to tender their sincere thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hughes for lending their piano for the occasion

We had the pleasure of a call on Saturday from Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hawkes, who landed happily when we asked him who won the A.B.M.A. partner. If Bill is not careful it will be written into the minutes that his resignation be accepted before he tenders it. This sounds like an Irish Bull but we cannot expect young lads with no experience to run an organization perfectly. As they grow older they will find out that peop object to being left out. Have a look at things from different angles and they must be prepared to listen to different points of view. There is no room in Canada for a Hitler or a Stalin

We had a postcard from the Mc Carlins stating that they arrived safely at Greenock, Scotland after a good voyage.

Some years ago think we can remember, we called Greenock and from there we took the steamer bound for Erin's Isle. We met value for our money the minute the boat left Greenock looking heavenward where we thought we would be before nor time another minute she was shooting into the trough of the waves and down, down she would go until we were afraid we would land in the other place before day light. By the way, why is a steamer always called she? Here is what a famous captain once said—Because like a woman she requires rapid handling and is not ready to manage.

We had some rain here sunday night which delayed threshing but one more days of good weather will see all the fields cleared around.

We are informed Mr. J. Pym the Campbell Lake threshing boss is laid up.

George Field is building a new residence. Pat Dukes is to shingle.

GRIZZLY BEAR MINUTES

A meeting of the Council was held in the municipal office at Wildmere on Saturday September 5th. Deputy Reeve Noah Kelly acting in the absence of Reeve Cunningham. Councillors Gardiner Tennant and Carmichael present. Reeve Noah and Councillor Winter arrived later. Minutes of the previous meeting and financial statement were read and on motion adopted as read. Winter was appointed a committee to get in touch with the M.H.O. and investigate the case of W.H. Evans who is a present inmate in the Mental Hospital Battle River. Agreed on motion that P.J. Nash be appointed Deputy Returning Officer for Polling Sub-division No. 1 on behalf of the Wainwright Hospital Board outlined a plan for free immunization of school children also to petition the Lieutenant Governor in Council to have Grizzly Bear Municipal District No. 13 created. Accounts were read and on motion ordered paid. Council then went into committee of the whole to consider the matter of petitioning the Lieutenant Governor in Council to have Grizzly Bear Municipal District No. 13 created

A Quid Pro Quo

If the Dominion government is to open the gates ajar for the admittance of more British migrants to Canada on a colonization basis, it would seem appropriate to suggest that any agreement which may be made should include some provision for the sale of more Canadian produce in the Old Country.

From the viewpoint of Western Canada where new settlers must necessarily engage in a competitive venture with farmers who, in recent years at least, have been forced to suffer their wares in narrowing markets, such a proposal would only be a reasonable quid pro quo for accepting new settlers.

It is true that colonization schemes in general and the Hovsby scheme in particular, which are now being mooted and are apparently being accorded serious consideration in some quarters, contemplate safeguards to ensure that few at least five years after admittance to the country migrants would not become charges on the administration and that failures would be returned to the country of their origin.

While this may be regarded by some people as satisfactory on the face of it, such safeguards are not sufficient for the protection of thousands of farmers in the prairie provinces who during the past five or six years have not only experienced the greatest difficulty in making a bare livelihood but have had the misfortune to stagger—and are still staggering—under an accumulating burden of indebtedness.

Such colonization schemes, insofar as the west is concerned, have land settlement as their objective which means, of course, that the newcomers will be engaged in the production of agricultural commodities. If they are successful in their efforts the volume of produce offered for sale must necessarily increase with a resultant tendency to reduce returns to all producers of similar commodities.

The only way that this trend can be offset is the creation of new or expansion of existing markets for such produce and the latter might be attained by agreements which will ensure a greater volume of sales of Canadian farm products in the country from which these migrants come. Such agreements, if consummated, coupled with rigid guarantees that the new settlers will be self-supporting, might be expected to at least minimize any indirect loss which the older settlers would sustain as a result of existing conditions.

New Zealanders, who have been sounded out on the subject of British migration to their country have something of the kind in mind, as evidenced by the report of William Nimmo, who recently visited Australia and New Zealand to examine opportunities for British settlement in the two Antipodean countries for, with respect to New Zealand, he is quoted in a recent issue of the London Times as stating:

"From both these Dominions I came away with the impression of young people in young countries convinced of the future of their race, convinced that they had something to contribute from the West to their neighbors in the Far East, and convinced that they still had a lot to do in their own countries before they were ready to admit too many strangers. They seemed, however, quite willing to admit a few under careful and proper auspices.

"It struck me that the best opening was in New Zealand, and that there could easily be achieved through the New Zealand Government (no other large body being sufficiently interested) and by a definite economic bargain for the purchase of New Zealand goods."

Without at this time debating the reasons advanced, Mr. Teeling found that prospects for British migration to Australia were practically hopeless at the present time.

Thus it would appear that any British colonization in New Zealand must necessarily be very limited and must be accompanied by an economic impact as a consideration, a suggestion that should certainly be given great weight by Canada in safeguarding her interests before any agreement is entered into for additional colonization in this country.

Proponents of further colonization in this country have argued that new settlers are consumers as well as producers. This is true, but if they are to be successful they must produce more than they consume, in which event a market must be found for the excess production somewhere. If they do not produce more than they consume, colonization is for them a failure and it would be better for them and the country, if the scheme were abandoned before birth.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Bursting For Joy

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile juice into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. It poisons the system and you become constipated. Headaches and dizziness get into the body, and you feel sour, sick and the world looks gloomy.

A mere laxative cannot make the liver do its duty. You need something that will start the bile flowing freely. Dr. Chase's Liver Pills are just the remedy for this purpose. They are purely vegetable and have anything else. Use Dr. Chase's Little Liver Pills for sure! Insist on getting them. 25c a box.

Professor Makes Discovery

Finds Green Peppers Contain The Previous Vitamin C

The green peppers that Professor Albert Szent-Gyoergyi, Szeged, Hungary, sprouted at dinner one night gave him the richest source of orange vitamin C he had sought for a long time.

On that particular evening his wife had revolved her hen on his after-hours work, and he retired to his laboratory to continue his hunt for the anti-scurvy substance.

He took the peppers with him, intending to eat them later. But he mused, he subjected them to tests just as he had almost everything else available—and found what he wanted in the vegetables that abound in the neighborhood.

In a few weeks he managed to produce a pound of pure vitamin C from 4,000 pounds of green peppers which he discovered, have three times the vitamin C content of oranges and lemons, and are cheaper.

Supposts To Discover Large Amount Of Gold Dust

Housecleaning may mean dust and dirt to most people, but it means gold, running to thousands of dollars, for the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa. When the smelting furnaces at the mint are moved to the new wing, officials of the institution where all Canada's coinage is made and all gold handled, will thoroughly clean the rooms being vacated. According to J. C. Campbell, master of the mint, it is expected that a very large amount of gold will be recovered in the process of cleaning the floors ceilings and walls.

This reclaimed gold consists of billions of tiny particles which have been carried off by smoke and gases from the huge smelting furnaces and which eventually come to rest on the walls and floors of the rooms.

Wonder House On Exhibit

Everything Electrically Operated In New Type House

Ease and convenience for persons lacking domestic servants and spare time were revealed in a "wonder house" on exhibition at New York.

There was an electric range which turned itself off when a roast was done, a refrigerator which made ice without being touched to admit housewives with armfuls of dishes, an illuminated keyhole for the bashful and a vacuum cleaner which blended with the furniture.

The mail nursery an electric eye set off a series of chimes when anyone approached the baby's cradle, and a burglar alarm harnessed with the window near the cradle was opened, to make it difficult for kidnappers. Another closed doors were opened, lights immediately flashed on inside.

An electrically-operated goldfish bowl with floodlights and an underwater air fountain required only one change of water each month.

Another Mystery To Solve

Bronze Silicon Turns Into Potash When Subjected To Heat

Science has one mystery yet to solve in silicate, the most dangerous of all dust diseases.

The mystery is why silica, the dust responsible, turns into a poison when ground to particles the size of bacteria. The surprising behavior of silica was explained at the Harvard tercentenary by Dr. W. Irving Clark and Prof. Philip Drinker of the Harvard school of public health.

Bronze used to almost pure silica, silicon is part of the beauty of sands and occurs in quartz, flint, sandstone, jasper and many other common substances. In all of them it is harmless to human beings.

When ground fine enough to fly in the air particles of silica cause a distinct, new lung disease.

Used To Motor Cars

Reason So Many People Have Never Ridden On Trains

Every once in a while nowadays —much more frequently than in the past—stories appear in the newspapers about passenger trains, the service they give and the people who ride on them. And in some of these stories the fact is mentioned that many people are riding on trains for the first time in their lives.

These people are from away back woods region, either, where a train would be something of a curiosity. They are from towns and cities, and in the course of their lives have frequently watched trains go by, possibly from the station with their friends. But they have never been passengers themselves, and the reason is that they have grown up since the day the motor car displaced the train as the chief means of travel.

People who have never ridden on trains are not common in Fort Erie days. There are too many railroads here, and railroad men and their families get passes when they want to travel. But in many parts of the railroads aren't a leading industry it is not an uncommon thing to find men of 50 or more years of age who have done all their travelling by car or bus.

Now, however, train travel is becoming popular again and the next generation may be more train-conscious. The railroads are responsible for a great many of the people in their trains. In the last two or three years they have publicized their service intensively and built up a improved service, and worked hard to eliminate the attitude of unconcern and indifference that developed on the railroads a few years ago.—Fort Erie Times-Review.

Asks Farmers To Co-operate

Eastern Cattle Men Urged To Aid Feeder Plan

Hon. J. G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, made an appeal for the co-operation of farmers of eastern Canada in the government's efforts to aid cattle losses in the drouth areas of the prairie provinces. He was addressing the livestock exhibition in the Central Canada exhibition in Ottawa.

"I am told that here in the eastern areas, there is an abundance of roughage and hay," Mr. Gardiner said. "That is why I am looking for the success of our plan. But this plan will not be for the benefit of the western farmers alone. I want it to be true that we are offering to pay the farms of those who go west to buy feeder cattle.

"And if these cattle after being brought east are fed for three months, the government will pay half the freight paid to bring them here. There is a direct benefit to come for those who do take the cattle for feeding."

Japan's Low Labor Cost

Encourages Them To Undersell Other Countries' Manufacturers

The St. Catharines, Ontario, Standard says a copy of the Knit Goods Weekly, U.S.A., received in their office, contains an article which shows that cotton hosiery from Japan is making tremendous strides in the market to the south. It is shown that if the tariff were raised 100% per cent. to what it is now, Japan could undersell the home product by 16.6 per cent., all due to the labor costs of the Japanese. Male hosiery knitters in Japan earn $3.20 a week and female $1.35. That is the story behind the industrialization and world market drive of the Japanese manufacturers.

A Scot entered the shop where he had recently bought a bicycle.

"It's about the bike, mon," he said. "Hasn't it arrived yet?" said the shopkeeper.

"It has," said Jock, "but where's that free wheel?"

Apricots, peaches, pomegranates, and oranges were referred to by the ancient Romans as "apples." They distinguished the fruits by the names of the countries where they were grown.

Not Very Long Ago

Boston Had Sky-Line Forbidding Building Without a Window

Cleanly Anglo-Saxons on both sides of the Atlantic have been shocked at the revelation, by an American plumber who has just returned from a European jaunt, that though the Hohenzollern Palace at Potsdam contains 600 rooms, there are only two bath-rooms in it. And the plumber found, also in Germany, a castle of 300 rooms which had no bath-room at all.

But there was a time when the Boston city fathers passed a by-law forbidding anyone to have a bath except by doctor's orders, and this was not repealed till 1862. Again, just over 100 years ago, when the Lord Mayor of London asked for a shower bath to be installed at the Mansion House the request was refused, as "the need of rame has not been heretofore complained of."—London Answers.

Building Without Stairs

Will Have Ramps So Car Can Park On Any Floor

Hotels and offices in which cars can drive to any floor and houses with more than one floor, but no stairs, are being designed in London. The buildings will have ramps, like those in some large garages. The young designers claim that their plan will do away with traffic congestion, make it possible for drivers to drive their own cars into the house and park them outside their doors, make roofs into car parks, and provide overhead roads. The inventor is an architect, Dr. Moretz. Already buildings on his principle are being put up in Leeds, England and in France. The Leeds building will contain a 150 bedroom hotel, a 170 car garage in the basement and a motion picture theater. Cars can be driven right into the building, according to any floor.

Little Animal Has Courage

Man Tells How Gopher Rescued His Helpless Mate

The gopher, unassuming and somewhat ratty animal, attains heights of courage that merit him a better name, says A. D. Bain, superintendent of a chain of bungalow camps in the Canadian Rockies.

On a recent inspection trip, Bain saw as he approached in his car an injured gopher lying helpless in the middle of the road. Nearby stood another of the little animals, bristling and showing his teeth, although obviously frightened.

When Bain stopped the car, the second gopher put his teeth into the scruff of his dying mate and dragged her to the safety of the long grass beside the mountain road.

Lightning Kills Birds

Found Underneath Large Tree Which Was Not Struck

Included among the freaks of the severe lightning storm which struck Raleigh, North Carolina, was the discovery of between fifty and sixty sparrows roosting in a tree which was not struck by lightning. The sparrows were found underneath the large tree. Since the tree was not struck it is believed the heavily charged atmosphere killed the birds, present given off by electric wires in the vicinity, resulted in the electrocution.

Gives Excellent Results

Excellent Results From Blood-testing poultry flocks are reported from all parts of Canada. A brother in British Columbia who had his flock blood-tested last fall at a cost of $16 sold hatchery eggs to the value of $200 in the month of January at the hatcheries. At a sale of Record of Performance certified stock by an Ontario breeder to a breeder in the United States, R.O.P. certified flocks sold for $5 each and as R.O.P. made for $15.

If you're not already acquainted with Ogden's, take a little tip—try this mellow, fragrant cigarette tobacco. (The Red Route" refers to the all-British route, British countries being colored red on the map).

"In the house of lords and commons we have been impressing on our government that every effort should be done, by subsidies or other means, to make possible the maintenance of this route in the face of present competition.

"It would urge upon all of you, whatever your governments, whether they be in Canada, Great Britain, Australia or New Zealand—I speak not as a politician—the necessity of arranging to preserve for the British empire this vital part of the red route."

Twenty-five per cent. of the vegetables and fruits people eat were unknown even ten years ago. They come from strains of plants that didn't exist a decade past. CANADA MUST DECIDE REGARDING DEFENCE MATTERS

Vancouver.—Viscount Elibank, president of the British central chamber of commerce, voiced an admonition to Canadians to make up their minds whether or not they were to remain in the British empire or out of it.

Speaking of the possibility of war involving Great Britain, Viscount Elibank said:

"If London is vulnerable today then, in the event of war, every city of the empire are vulnerable.

"We have got to make up our minds whether we are going to stay in the empire or out of it—there is no shirking that question. We must make up our minds now, once and for all, if, in fact, the empire is worth having and worth saving."

The viscount did not reply directly to Defence Minister Ian MacKenzie's reference to him as a "peregrinating imperialist." After mentioning defence means by other parts of the empire, he said: "I do not propose to speak to Canada for fear I limit someone's susceptibilities."

Lord Elibank said that in Australia and South Africa extensive, vigorous preparations were being made for defence. Air strength was being given special attention. In other dominions, he continued, they had given serious consideration, he said.

Great Britain, to retain its place in the fore of nations, must rearm intensively and be prepared for the worst, the speaker said.

Lord Elibank said it would be "an economic shame and great folly" if the "red route" to the Antipodes were ever broken. (The Red Route" refers to the all-British route, British countries being colored red on the map).

"In the house of lords and commons we have been impressing on our government that every effort should be done, by subsidies or other means, to make possible the maintenance of this route in the face of present competition.

"It would urge upon all of you, whatever your governments, whether they be in Canada, Great Britain, Australia or New Zealand—I speak not as a politician—the necessity of arranging to preserve for the British empire this vital part of the red route."

Must Pass Driver's Test

Car Owner For 30 Years, Loaded Motorist Must Comply With New Law

London.—Sir Walter Windham, pioneer motorist and a car owner for 30 years, has been ordered by the telephone police court to pass a driver's test. Until the test is passed Sir Walter cannot exhibit the sign "L" (Learner) on his car fore and aft.

As the king's foreign service messenger, Sir Walter was the first man to drive into Whitehall court with foreign despatches. It was stated in court that he had never had an accident.

But the Marylebone police magistrate considered that for a month, fined him £3 ($15) including costs on a charge of driving dangerously and ordered him to take a driving test before he drove again. The magistrate said it was obvious that Sir Walter's eyes and ears were not what they once were.

The Straight Highway

First Step In The Direction Of Making Motoring Safe

Charlottetown The straight highway was the first step in the direction of safety first, A. A. Smith, chief engineer of the Ontario department of highways said in a paper read before 200 delegates at the 23rd annual convention of the Canadian Good Roads Association.

Public works officials from all the provinces, motor vehicle officers and automobile association officials attended the three-day convention, general theme of which was improvement in Canada's highways

Arthur Dixon, deputy minister of public works, British Columbia, was among those who addressed the delegates.

New Chinese Railway

Hankow, China The Canton Hankow railway was opened formally, signalizing a tremendous step in the development of Chinese domestic communications. The line, connecting the Yangtze river port of Hankow with the south coast metropolis of Canton, has been almost a half century in the building.

Explains How Price Works

Canadian Wheat Board Tablets It Has Not Been Understood

Winnipeg. — The Canadian wheat board issued a statement explaining the 1936-37 fixed price for wheat announced recently From Ottawa. The statement said:

"In some quarters the Dominion government policy regarding the new fixed price for wheat for the 1936-37 crop has been misinterpreted.

"A fixed price of 87½ cents basis No. 1 Northern in store at Fort William has been approved provisionally by the Dominion government. The fixed price does not become effective unless the closing price for No. 1 Northern wheat in store at Fort William should go below 90 cents.

"The position, therefore, is that if No. 1 Northern wheat in store at Fort William should, on any day, close below 90 cents the fixed price of 87½ cents becomes effective immediately. This fixed price would then be effective for the balance of the crop year, and irrespective of subsequent fluctuations in the open market price, the grower could deliver wheat to the board.

"It is clear therefore that producers have an absolute stop-loss at 87½ cents. Producers who believe that higher prices for wheat are warranted can hold their wheat with the assurance that under no circumstances will they have to accept a lower price than this for No. 1 Northern."

Substitutes On Display

Germany Showing Synthetic Materials At Leipzig Fair

Leipzig, Germany. — The third nazi's redoubled efforts to put Germany's foreign trade back on its feet were reflected in the annual Leipzig autumn fair.

At Leipzig are first shown the latest achievements of German scientists in the way of "ersatz", or substitute materials for those that cannot be obtained now in view of foreign exchange considerations. Among these are various synthetic textiles which are to conform in shape, size, color and location.

The speaker suggested a special Dominion provincial committee be organized to deal with route marking uniformity, or alternatively, that the ministry of transit at Ottawa be asked to submit the question to the permanent interprovincial committee on highway transportation.

Discussing Mr. Dixon's paper, Hugh A. Lumsden of Hamilton, Ont., suggested the provinces take up the matter of "keeping the 'L' signs up tomorrow" by conducting campaigns to teach school children the rules of safe driving.

No Longer Slaves Peasant

New York.—Mr. and Mrs. Diner, Normandie arrived, the blue pennant of Atlantic speed supremacy conspicuously absent from the liner's mast. Captain Pierre Thoreux, commander of the ship, said no attempt would be made this summer to regain the right to the emblem which was surrendered when R.M.S Queen Mary established her record for the eastward crossing.

Uniform Plan For Marking Roads Is Urged

Charlottetown.—Uniform highway marking throughout Canada was advocated before the Canadian Good Roads Association here by Arthur Peters, provincial minister of public works for British Columbia. The suggestion was met with favorable comment by delegates from other parts of the different provinces.

In his province it was the sentiment that any scheme of numbering and route marking would be hared on a scheme which would be uniform for all Canada, "from the east to the western provinces," and it should also be in agreement with the system in use in the United States, the chief travellers crossing the international or interprovincial boundaries will be able to follow denired routes without confusion.

Of first importance, Mr. Dixon said, had been the numbering of transCanada highway, now nearing completion. He suggested a route number for each province, for example, a route number of one digit, the name of the province, and that all such route numbers should conform in shape, size, color and location.

The speaker suggested a special Dominion provincial committee be organized to deal with route marking uniformity, or alternatively, that the ministry of transit at Ottawa be asked to submit the question to the permanent interprovincial committee on highway transportation.

Discussing Mr. Dixon's paper, Hugh A. Lumsden of Hamilton, Ont., suggested the provinces take up the matter of "keeping the 'L' signs up tomorrow" by conducting campaigns to teach school children the rules of safe driving.

Ride Above The Clouds

Vice-Regal Party Have Thrilling Experience In Rockies

Banff, Alta.—An automobile ride through clouds in the Rocky Mountains was added to the thrills experienced by Canada's governor-general, Lord Tweedsmuir, and Lady Tweedsmuir and the vice-regal party on their tour of western Canada.

At Their Excellencies motored to Emerald Lake from Field, B.C., the clouds at times rested on the highway, and at other times rolled back, bringing into view majestic peaks. So taken with the drive was the vice-regal representative that he expressed an intention to return here unofficially next year and take a hunting trip.

Sends Congratulations

King Edward Pleased With Performance Of White Star Liner Queen Mary

London The Cunard-White Star line announced that its president, Sir Percy Bates, had received two telegrams from King Edward congratulating the line on the Queen Mary's record-breaking westward and east ward Atlantic crossings.

The first was received immediately after the king had been apprised the liner had made the fastest westward run on record. The second message was sent when the Queen Mary passed Bishop's Rock in three minutes under four days to set a new mark for the voyage in either direction.

The Percy answered with wires of thanks and ordered the king's messages posted on the officers' and crew's bulletin boards on the Queen Mary.

Cleaning Up Slum Districts

Ottawa.—Municipal Britain would be rid of slum districts within five years, declared Sir Raymond Erwin Evans, member of the British government's advisory committee on housing and planning, who with Lady Evans arrived here on the steamship Newfoundland from Liverpool A program was at present being executed to provide an additional 1,500,000 homes

New Zealand Advocates Creation Of Force For League

Geneva New Zealand suggesting League of Nations reform presented a memorandum advocating the creation of an international land, sea and air force to be placed at the disposition of the league to combat warmakers

National plebiscites were suggested to approve the contribution of armed forces to the league Separation of the league covenant from peace treaties also was urged

Disarmament and systematic application of the anti-war measures already included in the covenant are the best assurances of peace, Foreign Minister Halvdan Koht, of Norway, told the League of Nations secretariat in a communication replying to Geneva's request for discussion of proposed reforms

DENOUNCES GRAB BAG RAIDS ON PUBLIC TREASURY

Calgary.—People of Canada are not seeking to change their historic form of democratic government for the alternative of a system of fascism, declared Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, here

They may be in error in their expectation of what the government can accomplish but they are not in the fatal error of thinking that tyranny or dictatorship is the way out of our troubles, Sir Edward told members of the Calgary Canadian Club.

"To me it appears a perilous and fatal step to which would lead many hundreds of miles in this country can and will be cured by an improvement in our conduct of our present system of government and not by some radical change in the relations of the state and citizens."

The railway president defended political leaders against the charge that present conditions was all their fault

In plain truth," said Sir Edward they arise from the incompetence of public authorities" and the "grab-bag treasury raids" by groups seeking benefit without thought of ultimate consequences

"Unchecked indulgence in a program of bounding public authorities to do things which public authorities should not do will end in the breakup of democratic government by the bankruptcy of public authorities."

If such a breakdown occurred it would not be the fault of the ordinary citizen, he declared.

However good a government we elect Sir Edward added, "its skill in functioning will be only as great as the ordinary citizen will let it be."

The theory that parliament is nothing but a national board of directors, Sir Edward considered fallacious.

Our present system of democratic government can ever choose parliaments of legislatures competent to conduct the affairs of the state as a board of directors conduct the affairs of their corporations.

Discussing national transportation problems, he said Canada could gain nothing from a "flip flop" in the attitude towards modern transportation problems

Sir Edward said it must be admitted that there never was a time in the history of Canada when democratic government was so little held in respect as it is. And yet" he added "the average personal qualities of the men who sit in our legislatures are at least as high as any

If government in Canada is to Sir Edward said the main trouble was apathy, that prominent citizens are not willing to sacrifice personal interests to things which benefit mankind as a whole.

Another great national difficulty of our present day is the tendency to look to the government for everything. Governments have their proper functions to perform and they are not capable of performing many of the things which are expected of them.

U.S. FLYERS MAKE RECORD FLIGHT ACROSS ATLANTIC

Llangadock, South Wales.—Forced down by an exhausted fuel supply after having flown the Atlantic, Harry Richman, the crooner, and his veteran pilot, self-spoken Dick Merrill, slept in their plane, "Lady Peace," surrounded by curious cows in a remote Welsh field.

Merrill brought the plane down safely and undamaged about 175 miles from the flyers' Croydon goal, after they became lost over Wales due to failure of their radio apparatus. They flew around for about an hour and a half. Richman said, before their supply of 1,000 gallons of gasoline gave out and they picked out the little field near this sparsely populated community.

Richman said they had landed at 3:30 p.m., British summer time (7:30 a.m. M.S.T., making a total elapsed time of 17 hours and 53 minutes for the flight

The flight was projected as a record-trip jaunt between London and New York but when or whether the plane would depart for Floyd Bennett field was undetermined

They flew an air ... miles, without any accurate and official knowledge of their flight as could not be established whether the fliers had beaten the 10 hour and 50 minute record of Bennett and Griffin and Mattern from Harbor Grace Nfld to the Irish coast four years ago. Griffin said the first news from New England that he and Richman had landed in Britain on 18 hours and 40 minutes

After landing Richman did all the talking for the pair as Merrill vetoed any radio and transpiring and modestly secluded himself in the cabin of the ship

Said Richman: "The plane ran beautifully. We didn't see a mountain for more than an hour at a time All the way we flew at about 2,000 feet Everything went according to plan except that about halfway across the plane went into a steep dive and we both were thrown from our seats That certainly was a scare

"Our radio went out of commission while we were trying to talk to London. We circled about for an hour and a half before we could find a suitable landing place"

Richman standing beside the plane, then essayed several "cowboy cracks" for the edification of the door-looking Welsh folk who had come to see the ship

"Are we in Scotland?" he asked, and when told of the location - "Why, I'm a Welshman"

Surveying the scene with mock gloom, the crooner went on - "I never thought I'd see as many cows in the world such nice gentle cows but still it's just too darn still around here"

FAMED HOCKEY COACH MAY SPEND WINTER HERE

Bill Hoffman Interested In Local Prospects

Bill Hoffman, well known all over Western Canada as the man who put Lloydminster on the hockey map by building up their famous Pro-Lite hockey team, is seeking fresh fields and has intimated that he might settle in Vermilion this winter. Mr. Hoffman farms in Saskatchewan and in the winter follows his hobby of hockey. He provided Lloydminster with a first class hockey club at no cost to the business men and solely the support of the people and boosting in return. His team is on a couch speaks for itself and he would no doubt prove a boon to the hockey players of the town and district, and also to the hockey loving public here by providing them with many a thrilling hockey encounter this winter.

TOWN TO INSTITUTE A STRICT CHECK-UP ON RELIEF

All Stores To Share Equally

Recipients of relief from the town, whether direct or otherwise, will not from now on have the privilege of selecting the store in which to place orders for advances made on this account. The town council at a meeting on Monday night checked over the whole matter and found that two or three merchants were getting practically all of the relief orders, while those who did not were among the heaviest taxpayers. A resolution was then put through directing that the secretary-treasurer distribute relief orders in future such that all of the merchants of the town will get a proportionate share of the business.

In the discussion it was hinted that in some cases items in the orders were sometimes changed and others cash substituted. Concrete evidence of these substitutions would be pointed out, prove a very serious matter to all parties to the transactions.

An appeal is made to all recipients of relief to assist the town in having their requisitions reduced as much as possible in view of the terrific burden relief is placing upon the shoulders of the taxpayers. It was suggested that they ask for only what they actually need and possibly get along without The possibilities are that the coming winter will see a greater demand than ever upon this department of the town's civic business and it is to be hoped that the authorities are asking recipients to make their requisitions as reasonable as possible.

Has Made Last Attempt

Hugh Ruttledge, Gives Up Idea Of Scaling Mount Everest

Hugh Ruttledge leader of the 1936 Mount Everest expedition, which was beaten by bad weather, says he has made his last attempt to scale the world's highest peak.

In future he will live in a yacht on Bosham Inlet on his home coast, be satisfied with climbing smaller mountains.

He added these remarks when he arrived at Plymouth from India.

"We can't say the old objection to the head was reached height of about feet but never had a chance because the summit broke from the river before.

Mr. Ruttledge believes that Everest is unclimbable one day.

There will be no difficulty in obtaining permission for another expedition, he said. The old objection to climbing it on the Tibetan government has vanished. We were defeated by the height at a point only 9,000 feet from our base camp.

"But I do not think there offered reasonable chance of success. I have no desire for departure [illegible] would have. However, if an attempt is to be made, it must be on a scale to make the expedition a sporting success. There are difficulties, who are willing to [illegible] from our path at the foot of the mountain.

Mr. Ruttledge said: I shall never climb Everest. All I can do now is to watch the climbers from the valley. They can see better than the big peak from there."

Purchase Canadian Seed Grain

Russian Representative Here To Purchase Red Bolshevist Grain

Before he left [illegible] with wheat [illegible] Mr. Ruttledge [illegible] Russian representative here to purchase seed grain for the Soviet Union. It was announced yesterday. Mr. Kasperovitch is a scientist [illegible] and is the head of the Soviet Union's agricultural experimental station at Saratov, on the Volga river.

Mr. Kasperovitch and his party arrived in Montreal on Wednesday and left for the west on the same day. They came to Canada to purchase seed grain for experimental purposes. They have already visited Winnipeg, Regina and Saskatoon, and will visit Edmonton and Lethbridge before they return to Montreal. They will leave Montreal for Russia on the Empress of Britain on September 19.

Mr. Kasperovitch's headquarters are in Moscow. He came to Edmonton from Regina. At the latter city he was the guest of the federal department of agriculture for the purpose of examining the experimental farm there.

Before leaving Canada, however, he has gone even further into the general principle outlined above. In a recent announcement he stated that after reaching agreement with [illegible] on the purchase of seed grain a mission would be sent to Canada to study the agricultural methods in use here. The mission would consist of [illegible] and would remain in the country for a year. Its purpose would be to study Canadian methods of agriculture, and to report to the Soviet government.

Mr. Kasperovitch's visit to Canada is the first step in the carrying out of this plan. He has been accompanied by [illegible] of the Soviet government, who has been studying the methods in use in the Canadian grain trade.

Forecasts Increase In Gold

Minister Of Mines Urges Help For Engineering Students

Addressing a conference that Canada would produce $150,000,000 worth of gold in the year, Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Natural Resources, and President of the Board of Trade at a luncheon in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, urged the big mining companies which were represented by the delegates present at the meeting to endow scholarships in Canadian Universities for students taking mining engineering courses. It would attract the attention of the people of Canada to the importance of the mining industry and encourage the young men to take up the study of mines. In order scholarship he suggested that a number be given a year in the ore laboratory of the Mines Department at Ottawa.

Last year Canadian mines produced $150,000,000 worth of gold but the total production looked as if it would reach $175,000,000, and Mr. Crerar prophesied that in five years it would reach $250,000,000.

War Bursaries

I.O.D.E. War Memorial To Children Of Soldiers Killed Or Disabled

The national executive council of the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire announced 17 bursaries of a total value of $20,400 had been awarded under the I.O.D.E. war memorial to children of soldiers killed or disabled in the war.

The national educational secretary stated the bursaries had been awarded in Saskatchewan as follows:

Ivan G. Blair, Regina, son of the late Donald Blair, died of wounds. Clifton D. B. Hardie, Moose Jaw, whose father was killed in action; John Alexander McGregor, Kerrobert (Particulars incomplete).

Special partial bursaries were provided for seven other children whose fathers had been killed in battle or permanently disabled. Four of these students live in British Columbia and three in Ontario, but their names were not announced.

Adventurers Saved

Waged Battle Against Snow In Himalayan Mountains

Five men, including Fazal Elahie of the Survey of India, were carried into Mussoorie all suffering badly from exposure and frost bite, after being marooned for seven days near the famous Gangotri glacier, India, at a height of 18,000 feet.

The party, counting on the fine weather, had sent back their coolies ten miles to bring up rations and fuel but during their absence the weather suddenly changed. The monsoon, which is exceptionally violent this year, penetrated the Himalayan range and, for two nights in succession eight feet of snow fell on the surveyors' camp.

The supply coolies failed to return. After two days the party had no more fuel left; they had burned even the tent pegs and had run short of food.

They had no alternative but to try to cut their way out. For three days the battled against the snow which was so soft that they sank in it up to their necks and could make progress only by crawling on their hands and knees and by tunnelling.

Then the rescue party arrived and they were helped and carried down the remaining three miles to camp by the coolies. It would [illegible] quisite taken in to Mussoorie for treatment. All of them were making good progress and should recover completely.

Deserted Towns

Baron Two-thousand And Forty Pay Visit

A Rocky Mountain ghost town, flashlight shots which towers the 10,000 foot peak of Cascade mountain at [illegible], was visited recently by Canada's governor - general, Baron Tweedsmuir and Lady Tweedsmuir.

In the one prospering town, deserted a few years ago by its 2,000 inhabitants when work in a mine, its chief source of industry, was halted, stands a lone caretaker, to commemorate the money was dealt. There the governor-general stood in silent prayer after placing a wreath in tribute to the warriors. Only a few persons witnessed the ceremony.

Paying tribute to the part played by Canadian soldiers in the Great War Baron Tweedsmuir warned that Canada must still fight for her place among the nations of the world.

To the Banff school children whom he visited, he said "Think of your king not only as your king but also as your neighbor."

Does Fine Embroidery

Eighty-Seven-Year-Old Man Exhibits Exquisite Work

One of the most enthusiastic needleworkers who visited the Women's Building at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto, was Thomas W. Willoughby formerly of Burlington, and now of Newmarket, according to a report from the Women's Building.

He announced his age to be 87, and after showing a practically disabled right hand opened a box of fine linen embroidered in silks with shaded colors.

"I do this to fill in my time; to cure boredom," said Mr Willoughby. "But I want you ladies to understand that I had never had a needle in my hands until a few years ago. Of course as a boy I used to do rugs but this is different."

Mr Willoughby's exhibit received a special display in the building. He did not enter it for competition.

Little Things Count

Springs are little things, but they are sources of large streams; a bolt is a little thing but it governs the motion of a ship; a bridge-tit is a little thing but rest its use and power; nails and pegs are little things but they hold the large parts of buildings together; a word a look, a frown are all little things but powerful for good or evil. Think of this and mind the little things.

Scotch Curse Effective

Ancient Stronghold Turned Into Playground For The Wealthy

On the mountainside where the Campbells mustered the Mac-Gregors, a kinsman of the Earl of Breadalbane raised beautiful Teymouth Castle, which every MacGregor and MacDonald has cursed these last two centuries.

And now the curses of the MacGregors have come true. The last mighty Campbell, the Laird of Breadalbane, can no longer afford to keep up his giant fortress, and the ancient stronghold of his mighty Scottish clan is now a hotel and playground for the wealthy.

A Campaign of Falsehood

The opponents of the present methods of grain marketing are using freely the weapons of abuse and misrepresentation in endeavours to discredit the grain trade, to force their own policies upon the country and to obtain an unfair advantage for the Pools at the country elevator points.

THE FOLLOWING FACTS ARE TRUE:

1. The Western Pools are and have been since their inception, members of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. They continually use the facilities of the Exchange for the benefit of their customers.

2. When representatives of the grain trade were called upon to give advice to the Dominion Government in 1935 concerning the establishment of a Wheat Board, they appeared publicly before a Parliamentary Committee. On that occasion, as the first witnesses called, they advised the Government to appoint a Wheat Board, to provide a minimum price for the protection of farmers and to use every available channel to market Canadian wheat and to maintain Canada's place in the wheat markets of the world. The representatives of the Western Pools, on the same occasion, demanded the Wheat Board Bill in its original form under which no provision was made for a minimum price but only for the establishment of a compulsory marketing system.

3. The Winnipeg Grain Exchange is one in the chain of world's grain markets. It is a meeting place for all buyers and sellers of grain. The grain trade has no quarrel with those who think a better method can be found, but up to date no one has discovered a method of marketing that will better serve the interests of the farmer.

4. It is the interest of the grain trade that the farmer should obtain the best possible price for his product and the maximum Government support in the hour of his need. The interest of the grain trade is not thus at variance with that of grain growers; on the contrary, the grain trade recognizes keenly that the prosperity of agriculture is essential to the well-being of the Dominion and all of its industries, including that [illegible].

5. No line elevator company, any more than a Pool elevator company, designs to make profit from the fluctuation of grain prices, which are determined by world conditions that are not and cannot be controlled by the grain trade, the Wheat Board or the Pools.

6. As has been stated before on numerous occasions, in the plainest possible terms, the grain trade and the Winnipeg Grain Exchange have made no representations to the Government against the fixing of a high minimum price nor in favour of the dis-establishment of the Wheat Board or the curtailment of its activities.

THE FOLLOWING QUOTED STATEMENTS ARE FALSE:

1. The Western Producer, which is the organ of the Saskatchewan Pool, states in its issue of September 10, 1936, that the Government has decreed the death of the Wheat Board and thereby has complied with the supreme desire of the grain trade. THIS IS FALSE. The grain trade has expressed no such desire.

2. The same paper, in the same issue, states, "The work of a generation is to be scuttled and if its present intentions are carried out next year, and for many years thereafter, the farmers, if they have a crop, are to be thrown to the wolves of the Grain Exchange." This statement is merely abuse and its implications libellous. If it is intended to mean that the members of the Grain Exchange, which comprises all the elevator companies (including the Pools), the mills and merchants, both foreign and domestic, who compete for the sale of the Western Canadian crop, are organized for the purpose, not of service to the producer but to prejudice his interest, this statement is not only false but must be known to be false to the editor and owners of the paper.

3. The following statement is contained in a circular forwarded to various organizations throughout Western Canada by the Saskatchewan Provincial President of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation: "The Government, by setting the pegged price at $1.07 per bushel, has in fact, given the 70c to the farmer—had taken money from you and given it to the Grain Exchange." This statement is false and can only be based upon complete ignorance or extreme malice. No line elevator company, any more than any Pool elevator, designs to make any profit from the fluctuations of grain prices. The grain trade challenges the gentleman who made this statement to explain it and to prove it. It is inconceivable that the Wheat Board and the elevator companies who have served the producer of Western Canada for so many years, efficiently and honourably, should be willing to continue to belong to an institution which is organized for any such evil purpose.

The preposterous statements being made throughout the country by propagandists that the grain trade is desirous of any thing but the welfare of the farmer, or has brought pressure upon the Government to interfere to the Wheat Board or the wheat policy of Canada, is untrue.

NOTE: It is understood that a Commission will shortly inquire into the grain marketing situation. The grain trade invites those who have made the above statements and similar misrepresentations of fact, to appear before the Commission and support their statements by evidence and argument.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR
Sept. 15, 1936.

The Editor,
Vermilion Standard.
Dear Sir;
Please accept my sincere thanks for the very hearty co-operation you have extended to me during the past five months in the carrying out of my duties. At all times you have been very obliging in printing news items and notices of Church services in your fine paper. "The Standard". I am sure that this has always been a help in keeping our people well informed of our meetings and activities.

I might also say that I have enjoyed reading the Standard regularly, and find it a very fair and fair in what it publishes. With best wishes for your continued success.

I am, Sirs truly.

ISLAND HILL

The opening dance held here Friday at the new hall was a huge success. Numerically and financially speaking it was unprecedented in the annals of the district. Visitors were present from all districts within a radius of thirty miles. Never before in this district has been witnessed such a large number of cars as were parked around the hall. Everyone had a good time, dancing dancing and had a very jolly time, Burt's orchestra dispensed the music and it was the highest class. During the special request the dance will be repeated Friday Oct. 2. During the evening a very lucky dollar, the gift of Mr. Manners, Manager Vermilion Co-operative was auctioned off and was knocked down at five dollars. Pretty nice stranger! When the Alberta government hears that their dollar scrip is valued at five dollars in Island Hill they will be shocked. Mrs. McDonnell kindly donated a turkey to be balloted for and realized a goodly sum. Neilson of Islay held the lucky ticket. The dance committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. McDonnell wish to thank everyone who assisted. They wish to thank particularly Mr Cooper, editor of the Standard for the publicity given in his paper and there is no doubt about it the publicity given helped in a considerable degree in making the hall the great success it was. Mrs. McCumbridge, Mrs. Butler, Mrs McDonnell and Mrs Mc Lauhed served a dainty supper. The collectors Chas. Brady, Bill Nelson, Horace Hawkes and Pat Dynes deserve a special word of praise. The ditty committee also thank Tom Dwyer and the C.W.L. under their president Mrs. Robso. Vermilion, for their kind assistance. See advertisement for particulars of next dance

The United church ladies are opening a tea room in the hall at the school and there will be a splendid musical program.

Mr. Anderson having completed his contract at the new hall has joined Pat Dynes in building the new res idence for Geo. Field.

M. WENER & SON
"MEET YOUR FRIENDS AT WENER'S"

WILDWEST WINKS

Threshing is over in this part of Alberta for another year. Fall work is going on on most farms, during being done chiefly as it is the dry to plow.

Miss Ellie Cleland of Auburndale spent a few days visiting friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A Smith, Wildwest.

Mrs. A. Cameron, Vermilion, and her two sons, Mrs. Washington of Edmonton motored out and visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith Wildwest, on Friday last.

Wildwest League meeting was called off last week owing to rain, the last meeting in this Thursday at which Rev. Mr. Anderson, Albernon's last Sunday with us this fall Rev. Mr. Boyd is coming on Sunday, Sept. 27th.

Albert Howard, with his threshing outfit pulled over and threshed Mr George Ibbson on Saturday afternoon last.

Otis Sharp, we are pleased to say is on the improvement list again but still sporting some sore spots, and a very sore eye caused by infection. Good luck, Otis

Mr and Mrs. Ed. Rund, Otelia, Elsie and Johnny Rund of Triangle, Tom Bent, L. Graham and Teddy Riley Wildwest, were all visitors at the Wallington home on Sunday.

Reg Porter of Vermilion brought out a new Stewart-Warner Radio to the Willingham home on Monday last taking back their old one. And the new radio is certainly a big improvement over the old one which is 14 years old. Some of the many batteries are required for the new one—it only using a wee battery. Tom and reception are splendid.

Ed Schroeder, Wildwest, and Wilson Tennant of Prospect Alta, on fishing up Hubsland on A. Carlson's outfit left on a trip for parts unknown on Thursday last

Old Jack Frost has now visited on this last coulpe of nights. The air feels so wintry, makes one wonder what they did with their summer's stake

Mrs. Cliff Cruthers was down help ing her sister Mrs C Morand whilst she had the threshing crew on hand.

Pumpkins thing seen—Wee A. Reid of Island Hill, at home with L. Graham, exhibiting one was stained on the back of the bungy by the size of their tummies.

SIX DIRECTORS ARE NAMED FOR C.N.R. CONTROL

Ottawa. Six of the seven directors who will in future control the Canadian National Railways system were announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King at the conclusion of a cabinet council. The seventh, who will be a representative of labor, will be chosen by agreement between the railway workers acting through their various unions.

Legislation authorizing restoration of the director system will be proclaimed Oct. 1, when the new board will take over. In the meantime the government will reach a decision as to the status of the board of three trustees who have been administering the road since Jan. 1, 1934.

S. J. Hungerford, who worked his way up from apprentice machinist to become head of the Canadian National system, will continue in that capacity as chairman of the new board.

Appointments for three-year periods went to Mr. Hungerford, Jas. Y. Murdock, K.C., Toronto, president of Nortanda mines, and Wilfred J. G. Gagnon, financial manufacturer.

For the two-year period, as provided in the act, the directors will be Herbert J. Symington, K.C., Montreal, and the representative to be chosen by labor organizations.

For one-year periods the appointees are Donald H. McDougall, mining engineer of Stellarton, N.S., and Montreal, and Robert J. Moffat, a prominent farmer of Brownell, Sask., and director of the Saskatchewan wheat pool.

The board will be asked to consider advisability of appointing regional advisory committees to cooperate with the directors in each of the Atlantic and western regions.

Chairman Hungerford will receive a salary of $15,000 a year, while the directors will receive $5,000. It was felt necessary, the prime minister said, to refer to these two points adjacent to the head office because of the likelihood of frequent meetings.

In permitting the railway workers themselves to nominate a member of the directorate, the prime minister said the government was taking a step he believed industry in general might well follow. This, Mr. Mackenzie King said, would give a voice not only to those who invest their money in the system, but to those who invest their lives and their brains in the operation of the road

Plans For Unemployed

Governments May Pay Single Men For Farm Work

Ottawa. Farmers and those engaged in other primary industries may be in the position next winter of being provided with labor at the cost of board and lodging only, it is possibly without even that expense. This was made known in the government's announcement of plans to care for single, homeless unemployed adults.

In co-operation with the provinces the government proposes to pay half the cost "of such plans as can be worked out in conjunction with the provinces for the purpose of absorbing in primary product industries all physically fit single homeless adults."

The proposals, explained by the Hon. Norman Rogers, minister of labor and A. P. Purvis chairman of the national commission on employment and relief, involves placement of such men on farms, forestry projects and in other fields of primary production and the province concerned sharing equally in assuring the man a wage reasonably approaching that paid ordinarily for the same class of labor in the same area

Support From Alberta

Province Will Back British Columbia Freight Rate Plea

Ivan Westwood, M.P., British Columbia, will be supported by Alberta in its appeal to the Dominion government for equalization of freight rates. It was disclosed by Tom Reid M.P. for New West minster. Reid said he had received word Alberta is intending to send representation to Ottawa to assist him in the matter of equalization of freight rates on domestic grain with that for export purposes

Made Indian Chief

Official Delegates To League

Three Who Are Responsible For Government Going To Geneva

Ottawa. — Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Hon. Raoul Dandurand, government leader in the senate, and Labor Minister Norman Rogers will be Canada's official delegates to the forthcoming session of the League of Nations. Dr. O. D. Skelton, undersecretary for external affairs, and Dr. W. A. Riddell, permanent advisory officer at Geneva, will be alternate delegates.

In making this announcement the prime minister said that because of the importance of this league session, and the great responsibility attaching to everything that may be said there, he had decided against having any delegates other than those responsible to the government or its administration.

Col. C. P. Vanier, a member of the staff of the Canadian high commissioner in London, will accompany the party to Geneva as expert adviser.

Senator Dandurand will bring to the delegation a wealth of experience in league affairs, having attended all league sessions, served a term as president, and always maintaining a strong personal interest whether he was an official capacity or private observer.

Labor Minister Rogers, one of the youngest men in the government, has been a student of League of Nations developments and was selected partly because of his comparative youth, because of the government's desire to have the sentiment of the younger generation represented.

The prime minister himself, Dr. Skelton, Dr. Riddell and Col. Vanier have attended many sessions of the league.

Objects To Loyal Toast

South Africa Party Leader Leaves Banquet In Protest

Capetown.—A toast to King Edward VIII, "King of South Africa" caused Lieut.-Col. C. F. Stallard leader of the Dominion party in the provincial assembly, to walk out of a government banquet in Johannesburg.

The loyal toast was given twice first to the king of the United Kingdom and Ireland, then to the king of South Africa. Stallard left the hall as a protest against the second toast.

Stallard said afterward he considered the fact the king was singled out as king of the Union of South Africa for a separate toast was a deliberate affront to the sovereign and deliberately emphasized a doctrine against which he has always protested.

Commenting on the affair the Argus said:

"The official explanation that the toast list was arranged in accordance with the usual practice of international etiquette does nothing to resolve the absurdity. It shows the external affairs office is not equal to the task of interpreting the individuality of the dominions."

Will Keep Colonies

France Refuses To Yield To Menace Of Germany

Paris Informed sources said that it is the face of Chancellor Hitler's demands for return of his colonies, would refuse to yield her share in Africa under the menace of the German army.

Officials previously had taken the attitude that France would keep Togoland and the Cameroons Mandated jointly to France and Great Britain, at any price But there has been no immediate official comment on Hitler's proclamation

Le Temps, well-informed Paris newspaper, said, however, of the German colonial question:

"No people will refuse to discuss a just and equitable organization of the European community on an equal footing with the German people But no nation, even the weakest, will consent to how before a peace imposed by German force."

Plan Visit To Ethiopia

Rome The prospect that Premier Mussolini and the king-emperor, Victor Emmanuel, will visit their new African possessions arose when it was announced the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway in Ethiopia had ordered special cars built for them and for Viceroy Rodolfo Graziani The orders were placed with Italian companies

Leaves For Churchill

Montreal The British steamer Avon River, first freighter to clear Montreal for Churchill this season, sailed from here to load grain at the Hudson Bay port. Only other ship going to leave here this summer for Churchill was the government supply ship Nascopie.

Reward For Honesty

Scottish Court Sets It At Five Per Cent. For Found

Glasgow.- The reward of honesty was set by a Scottish court at five per cent.

Mrs. R. Lynn of Glasgow found two £10 notes ($100 each) on Argyll street in Dunoon. The money was claimed by Miss Alexandra Cameron of Dunoon, who offered a reward of a shilling a pound.

The finder asked two shillings.

The question was referred to police court, which allowed a shilling a pound (five per cent.).

PEGGED PRICE BRINGS PROTEST FROM WHEAT POOL

Ottawa. — Regret the government has not disposed to reconsider its decision which pegged wheat prices at 87½ cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern, was voiced here by W. A. Macleod, spokesman for the central executive of the Canadian wheat pools.

Comprising L. C. Brouillette, chairman of the central selling board and president of the Saskatchewan wheat pool, P. Dyment, president of the Manitoba pool elevators, and Georges Bennett, Alberta pool board, the executive met with the wheat committees of the cabinet.

The delegation protested the 87½ cents initial basis in No. 1 low and also objected to the provision under which wheat must drop to 90 cents before the fixed price becomes effective.

Hon. W. D. Euler, minister of trade and commerce and chairman of the wheat committee, however, told the delegation its representations would be laid before cabinet. T. A. Crerar, minister of mines, and James G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, are also wheat committee members.

Recalling the 87½ cents pegged price became operative with the re-election Mackenzie King, the wheat board would be accepted only if the open markets price closed below 90 cents a bushel, Mr. Macleod expressed disappointment, in a statement regarding the government's policy.

"We believe that this restriction on the operations of the board is contrary to the spirit and intent of the Canada Wheat Board Act and to all intents and purposes may be regarded as repealing the wheat board legislation by making it entirely ineffective, except in the contingency of wheat prices dropping to such a level," the statement said. "With producers denied the right to deliver their wheat to the board, it must inevitably go out of business. If such should be the deliberate intention of the government, the policy will be received with alarm and dismay not only by the producers but by world-wide Canada generally.

"We believe that a higher minimum price basis is justified by the heavy losses which were shipped from Montreal in July The top prices were $440, $435, $410 and $400, mostly for Clydesides. The average price was about $315.

The department also announced that Canadian animal products trade commissioner in London had written a well known British dairy farmer who was to sail for Canada this month to buy heavy work horses for shipment to the United Kingdom.

Churchill Busy Port

Grain Ship From France Makes Second Trip

Churchill, Man. — The motorship Jean L. D., owned by Louis Dreyfus and Company, docked here on her second visit of the season after making the voyage from France in less than nine days, her average speed being more than 14 knots an hour.

The vessel sailed from here on her first voyage Aug. 22, carrying 322,000 bushels of wheat. At that time it was believed the vessel, one of the fastest and newest ships in the grain trade, could make three round trips between this port and Europe during the open season.

On her way here, the ship carried fuel oil for the Canadian government patrol boat, H.M.S. H. M. McLean, and the oil was transferred to the latter craft at Wakeham bay

The Jean L. D. was loading some 330,000 bushels of number one northern wheat for Liverpool delivery.

S.S. Willerpool sailed with 300,000 bushels for Liverpool. Fort Garry Queen and S.S. Brandon is loaded and will sail with 325,000 bushels of wheat for Queenstown. S.S. Trudpool was expected to dock the following day, while S.S. Drakepool is partly loaded and is at anchor awaiting sailing instructions.

Ship Horses To Scotland

Shipment Of 84 Horses From Montreal Being High Prices

Ottawa.— Canadian horse breeders are shipping Clydesdales back to Scotland. The Canadian progeny of the famous Scottish breed of draft horses brought substantial prices Jean sold at Perth, Scotland, recently, according to a statement issued by the Dominion department of agriculture.

Horse dealers in Scotland spoke highly of the quality and condition of a heavy horses which were shipped from Montreal in July The top prices were $440, $435, $410 and $400, mostly for Clydesdales. The average price was about $315.

The department also announced that Canadian animal products trade commissioner in London had written a well known British dairy farmer who was to sail for Canada this month to buy heavy work horses for shipment to the United Kingdom.

The General earned the gratitude of the Hungarian people, when, armed with only a riding whip he frustrated an attempt of Roumanian soldiers to despoil the Hungarian National Museum of valuable treasures

Harbors Board Appointed

Members Will Have Jurisdiction Over Principal Canadian Ports

Ottawa. — Completing a move initiated soon after taking office last October, the government appointed a permanent national harbors board which will have jurisdiction over principal Canadian ports at places of the individual harbor commissions formerly existing.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced that Ralph Campney, one-time member of his own secretarial staff and now a lawyer in Vancouver, has been named chairman of the board. Col. A. E. Dubuc, chief engineer of the department of railways and canals, and H. J Roberts, assistant deputy minister of finance, were named members of the three man board.

Study Imports Of Stock

Prince Edward Island May Take Cattle From West

Charlottetown.- Serious consideration was being given movement importation of cattle to Prince Edward Island from the drouth-suffering areas of western provinces, according to letters from Premier Campbell and Hon. W H Denna minister of agriculture, read before a meeting of Charlottetown board of trade

The board discussed arrangements for the annual meeting of the Maritime board of trade here, Sept. 23 and 24. Hon. C. A. Dunning, Canada's minister of finance, is to address the annual dinner.

NAZI LEADER WOULD REGAIN LOST COLONIES

Nuremberg, Germany. — Fuehrer Adolf Hitler in a speech before 800,000 Nazis assailed Bolshevism, democracy and Christianity.

Der Fuehrer's personal address followed a proclamation from him earlier in the opening day of the fourth annual Nazi party congress defining the Nazis' next immediate goal as repossessing of her colonies and rebuilding of her economic structure.

Asserting "the rock of foundation of the state is an authoritarian will," Hitler said.

Unlimited individual liberty leads to anarchy.

All states have experienced the destructive effects of democracy.

"Bolshevism seeks to destroy culture as we see in Spain where the best blood of the leading personalities are Jews."

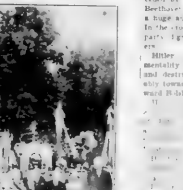
In his 12,000-word proclamation read to the 800,000 Nazis earlier in the day by Adolf Wagner, Bavarian Nazi leader, Hitler set forth the goal of regaining Germany's lost colonies

In the fashion Hitler said, would Germany a financial basis for trade and the increased markets would provide work for her unemployed, building up "our raw material forces."

Germany's pre-war colonies, either taken from her outright or placed under various Allies or removed from her control, predominantly under league mandates, supported 1,052,753 square miles and included territories in Africa China and islands in the Pacific.

Hitler's attack on the Jewish influence in art and politics was preceded by the Nazi leader's playing Beethoven's ninth symphony before a huge audience in the opera house. In the course of his address Hitler particularly censured modern art and music.

Hitler condemned the Jewish mentality as fundamentally negative and destructive and tending inevitably toward decadence in art and toward Bolshevism in politics.



LABOR CONGRESS SUPPORTS LEFT WING IN SPAIN

Montreal.- Support for Spain's left wing government and hope for an early and victorious finish to its fight with rightist rebels was unanimously voted by the annual convention of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada

Without debate and in the space of a minute the delegates, representing labor unions in all parts of Canada, put themselves on record as declaring the rebellion was against the best interests of the working classes and a violation of the true spirit of democracy.

The resolution of sympathy with the Spanish government was brought in by John Bruce of Toronto who had to obtain unanimous consent of the convention as rules provide that all such motions must be submitted 24 hours before the convention. The consent was given and when a vote on the motion was unanimously passed.

Tom Moore, of Montreal held up proceedings a bit by demanding a French translation. He was told to come to the platform and translate himself. He objected he was not an official translator but came forward and read out the resolution in French. Then came the vote

The resolution follows: "Whereas a state of civil war exists in Spain in which all the heroes of race are existing with tragic consequences to the whole population:

"And whereas the people of Spain by democratic methods have elected a government of workers with a well-known leader of the trade union movement. Caballero as prime minister;

"And whereas hostile forces opposed to the labor movement in Spain and from such countries as Germany and Italy are aiding and abetting the rebel forces in their criminal intent of trying to bring about the destruction of democratic institutions by supplying arms and munitions thereby hoping to establish a fascist regime

"And whereas this congress, representing the organized expression of the workers of Canada, is of opinion that this is inimicable to the best interests of the working class and the labor movement and a violation of the true spirit of democracy and a direct assault upon the workers establishing a higher degree of civilization.

"Be it resolved that this congress wishes to express to the workers of Spain our sympathy in their splendid fight in defence of their liberties and especially of their democratic institutions and government, constitutionally elected;

"And be it further resolved that this congress places itself further on record in the interest of international solidarity as expressing to the Spanish workers our sincere interest in their struggle and extend to them our wholehearted support in their fight for further freedom and progress and our hopes for an early and victorious finish."

Migration Plan Not Feasible

Industrial Workers Not Suited For Farm Work States Delegate

Plymouth, Eng.—Scheme for placing British industrial workers on Canadian farms are not feasible, the British delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor congress, told the Trades Union congress here.

"We have heard much about schemes to place emigrants on the land," said Robertson. "If those emigrate are not farmers in the first instance, I doubt the feasibility of the project. Our experience is that an industrial worker is not easily transformed into a farmer and will eventually return to industry.

"There is a apparent reason why this should not be the case in the United States in the past as we must take the lessons of success from any country."

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

An upturn in the world trade in 1935 the first in any year since 1929 was reported by the League of Nations review

The Daily Mirror says 70 brides honored the departure of the British Mediterranean fleet from Alexandria, the port of Cairo. About half the brides are British, the others being of various nationalities

Mrs Margaret Louise Bishop 79 year-old mother of Canada's premier was nee Alice Maud Marshall, William Avery Bishop, V.C., died at her home in Owen Sound Ont., after a brief illness

France will send no more prisoners to the French Guiana penal colonies including the famed Devil's Island pending action in parliament on the government's prison reform bill It has been disclosed.

A further decrease of 36,133 in the number of unemployed, revealed in figures issued by the ministry of labor, brings the total unemployed in Great Britain down to 1,412,946 the lowest figure in six years

A total of $50,000 including $35,000 first prize, will be offered in the automobile reliability race around Australia in 1936, if efforts of the race committee to raise funds in Sydney are successful.

Germany has placed orders for a large number of ultra-modern tanks capable of speeds of about 50 miles per hour on hard ground and 30 miles per hour over rough country the diplomatic correspondent of the Manchester Guardian said.

Harold F. Nissen, Astronomer Royal of England, and H. G Wells, the novelist, have approved the "Rational Calendar" of eight months of 30 days and four of 31, with a "New Year's Eve Day," to be submitted to the League of Nations.

It was disclosed in London recently that more than 2,000 people were injured during 1935 through the opening and closing of railway train doors. In the same period 14 were killed and 1,600 injured attempting to board or alight from moving trains

Valuable Metals Located

Silver At Goldenlake May Produce Good Commercial Ore

Chiefly noted for gold discoveries Goldenlake Sask., mining field may produce other useful metals in commercial quantities, according to reports brought in by engineers

Molybdenite used for strengthening steel, has been reported Wolframite, the ore containing tungsten, also used in tool-making and as filaments in light bulbs, has been discovered in several [illegible] as [illegible] lead, zinc, silver and copper

Pitchblende carrying radium has also made its appearance The field is still too new to know just how large the deposits of the various metals are and whether they can be mined at a profit

Big Price For Sheep

A ram cattle sheep [illegible] on record prices at the closing day of the Nation's Wm. Grosvenor [illegible] ing a ram, can sale at Nat Lake City. James Laidlaw of Rupert, Idaho, paid the top price of $1,000 for a two-year-old Suffolk ram offered by the Suffolk Sheep Meadows Farm of Lakeside, Ore. The ram was undefeated champion of the 1935 Royal Canadian show

Edison Expects Success

Dr John Clyde Hostetter, consulting N.Y. glass expert, returned from a meeting of glass technologists in London with the startling news the experts are trying to decide what guns to Dr Hostetter directed casting of a 200-inch telescope for the California Institute of Technology

Mine Laboratories Busy

Heavy Receipts Of Gold Ore For Testing Are Reported

Reflecting the steady and widespread improvement in mining throughout Canada, the Mines Branch Laboratory of the Canadian Department of Mines reports that receipts of gold ore for testing during the first half of the year exceeded those of any like period in past years In the majority of cases the ores are from the many gold properties throughout Canada that are entering or nearing production Full advantage is being taken by operators of the modern equipped ore dressing and metallurgical, laboratories of the Department of Mines where the ores are being tested mainly to determine suitable mill treatment processes for the several enterprises

Three research projects relating to the treatment of gold ores are underway One is on refractory gold ores such as those that occur in the Bridge River area British Columbia The second is an investigation to determine the relationship of the mineralization and genesis of the ores to treatment problems and the third is an examination of the modes of occurrence of gold in sulphides and the effect on ore treatment of such associations.

Nearly two years is under way on base metal ores than in 1935, but the number of samples received is small in comparison with pre-depression years, when the high prices of the base metals provided a stimulus for exploratory effort. A notable feature is the increase in the number of requests for test work on nonmetallic ores. The increase a traceable mainly to the distinct revival of activities in the building construction industries. Tests are being carried out on the beneficiation and uses of such minerals as china clay, silica, sands and sandstones, quartzite, calcite, gravel, and on the use of tailings from asbestos milling plants.

French Adjudicator

Judge Of French Theatre May Preside At Empire Festival

Col. H. C. Osborne, honorary director of the Dominion drama festival, returned from Europe and said he will be adjudicator of the drama festival will be a judge of the French theatre, if present plans materialize.

"A judge of the French theatre for the coming finals will give new ideas and a new point of view," Col. Osborne stated. "Naturally, at this early date it is impossible for me to make any definite announcement as to the individual. It is very hard for a man to say at the present time that he will be available to come to Canada late next winter, but the groundwork has been laid and I expect to make a definite announcement in the near future"

Col. Osborne also said he expected to be able to announce by the end of October who the regional adjudicators will be.

Telling Him Gently

The fat old man was in a bad temper

"Where the dickens is the ambulance-room in this place" he shouted The hotel porter remained calm

"There is a door over there with Lounge, Gentlemen only' on it," he said "you ignore that and walk straight in."

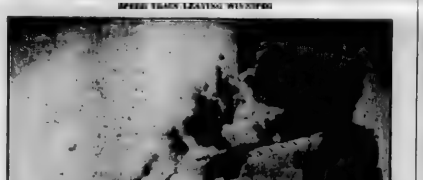
Speed Trains Leaving Winnipeg



Charging into space in the straight away leaving Winnipeg, the Canadian Pacific Railway's new light-weight speed train clips into its stride of 110 miles an hour. To satisfy his artistic demands, the photographer's request for a plume of smoke was granted, although the engineer on the new "2001" takes pride in the almost smokeless performance of the streamlined beauty. The train, with company officials aboard, was turned out of the yards for the start of the journey to the prairies. By the end of September it will take over its regular daylight run between Calgary and Edmonton.

Presents Real Problem

Man Returns To Prison But Cannot Be Admitted

Authorities of Blackpool, that Lancashire resort by the Irish Sea, are baffled by the case of George Santus, a motor mechanic. Santus paid his own fare to complete a three months' jail sentence. But prison authorities won't let him in.

Santus pleaded guilty at Blackpool to a charge of loitering with criminal intent. He was sentenced to three months with hard labor.

Four days after Santus began to serve his sentence he decided to appeal. Bail was granted but there was a delay in obtaining suitable sureties. Santus expected the appeal would be heard at Preston but the appeals committee ruled the appeal could not be heard as he had not secured bail within 21 days of his conviction.

Santus then surrendered himself at Walton jail, Liverpool. But as there was no commitment, he could not be admitted. He offered himself at two police stations. The police also declined to have him.

Now Blackpool's courts and magistrates are wondering what to do. The clerk explained that although the bail and sureties arrived a day late he had no course but to accept them. He also doubts whether he had powers to issue another commitment.

Brings Big Sum

Old Limestone Sold In London For Over £10,000

In the year 1644 or thereabouts a French painter named Jean Fouequet drew on a small piece of paper a swift likeness of a Papal legate who had a hawk nose, full cheeks, and searching eyes.

Just recently the likeness was bought in London for the astounding sum of £10,710 by Lord Duveen, biddings at Christie's during the third and concluding session of the Henry Oppenheimer sale of old master drawings.

Sampiro, a Celt 36 inches high, claims to be the smallest man in the world and says that three-quarters of a yard of cloth is sufficient for a suit for him.

Message From The Dead

Sir Edward Beatty Gets Wire From Major Bell's Bella Rogers

Sir E. W. Beatty, president of the C.P.R., received a message from the dead when he passed through Revelstoke on the transcontinental last night en route to Vancouver. As he alighted on the station platform, with representatives of the city and Board of Trade in solemn array, the following telegram was handed to him:

"Have nearly completed your blankety-blank railway through mountains and expect soon after to at Lake Louise to see construction. Can show you better route than Eagle Pass which they say I discovered back in eighties. P.S.—Bring your own raisins as my supply exhausted." (Signed) Major Heinz Bella Rogers.

Sir Edward bends into a laugh as he finished reading the wire and then declared with a stern voice: "I will see Major Heinz Bella Rogers when I get to Lake Louise."

The inside of the story is that the message was from Farrell Macdonald who is portraying the role of Rogers in the Gaumont British film "The Great Barrier," scenes of which were being taken in the vicinity of Lake Louise. Major Rogers was the engineer in charge of construction of the first transcontinental railway through the Rockies and it was he who discovered the necessary pass through observing the flight of an eagle.

Sir Edward was considerably amused when he was told that "The head office of the C.P.R. will be transferred from Montreal to Revelstoke for the next few weeks" when board room accounts will be "moved" to the local rink. In three scenes the characters of Van Horne, Stephen, Smith, Shaughnessy, James J. Hill and Sir John A. Macdonald will be depicted as during the trying times of the building of the railway.

New Postage Stamps

Specimen Sets Were Sent To King Edward For Approval

Specimen sets of the designs for the new King Edward VIII. postage stamps were recently submitted to the King for his approval.

The first of the new issue is to be on sale to the public early in 1937.

Four weeks experts were engaged in preparing drawings of the proposed new issues, and several new ideas have been incorporated.

Before the specimen sets which were sent to the King were prepared every design submitted was considered at the post-office by a committee appointed by Major Tryon, the postmaster-general.

It is possible that a special issue of Coronation stamps may be made in May, but no final decision has yet been reached.

CHRISTIAN LIVING

Golden text: Christ liveth in me. Galatians 2:20.
Lesson: Romans 12.
Devotional reading: Romans 8 21-39.

Explanations And Comments

A Call to Consecration for Service, Romans 12:1, 2. The "One Volume Commentary" says: "Paul's address verses thus: God's redeeming love should be answered by the living sacrifice and the spiritual, ritual service of a life of purity and self-denial and work for God. Do not follow the fashion and customs of the worldly society around you, but let your ways of thinking be so changed by the Holy Spirit that you both know and recognize God's will and love to do it."

The meaning of these two verses has been aptly expressed by another in these brief words: "In view of all that God has done for us should not henceforth live for him."

May Open New Market

Canada Has Sent Trial Shipment Of Lard To Cuba

In Cuba fried foods are used considerably and Canada has consequently quite a market for lard. Heretofore the United States has been the chief source of supply, but with the shortage which is looming up in that country, there are possibilities for other exporters. The hog supply of the United States for the balance of 1935 and probably throughout 1936 has been estimated as sufficient only for the home market and not over 70 per cent. of the usual foreign demand. Dealers in Cuba estimate 2,500,000 kilograms of lard will have to be imported during the next year from other sources, according to the Industrial Department of the Canadian National Railways. Already a trial shipment has been made from Canada [illegible] also after the manu.

Most of the inventions in Britain in the last year were connected with aviation and motoring.

Two Western Boys Get Free Scholarships In McGill

The coveted award of two free scholarships in McGill University, offered every year by the Canadian Pacific Railway to apprentices and other male employees under 21 years of age, enrolled on the permanent staff of the company, and to minor sons of employees, was announced in Montreal by D. C. Coleman, senior vice-president of the railway.

George Stewart, Assiniboia high school, son of Thomas Stewart, locomotive engineer, Manitoba, Sask., and Howard Campell, western Canada high school, son of Nelson H. Campbell, fireman, Strathcona, Alta., were the winners.

These young men, each of whom is 17 years of age, won the scholarships in competitive examinations against 37 others contestants from all over Canada, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, and since both of them passed out of school with junior matriculation status, they can enter the university to begin their science. They have notified acceptance of the scholarships and shortly will be students.

The scholarships cover tuition of four years, on senior matriculation, in the faculty of engineering, with

CHATSWORTH CHATTER

The weather has been far from being pleasant during the past week We've had very cold strong winds which usually abate before evening but are blowing just as strongly the next morning. The frost which occurred on Tuesday and Thursday of last week didn't do much damage to the majority of gardens but Sunday night's frost left ice on water-troughs and rain barrels. Tomatoes, beans and other tender plants and most potato patches are black.

Most farmers in this district are busy with fall-plowing, discing etc. which has not been pleasant work during the past week. Judging by the black faces (the dust has certainly been blowing) and the shivers they are glad to get into the house.

Church services at the United church, Octavia, have been cancelled for this season. Mr. Lambert's last Sunday service having been held on Aug. [illegible] Rev. [illegible] will conduct the service on next date.

Mrs. M. Carlyle and family of Arnes, who have been visiting here during the past three weeks, returned to their home on Thursday, Sept. 10.

Mr. R. W. Taylor and Miss Taylor left Monday for Calgary to visit Mrs. and Claud Taylor on the Bon Little wood farm. We hope they are enjoying the crowning of coronation week in this and in the Ottawa districts.

The attendance at the school Fair must have been rather disappointing to the workers and disheartening after much hard every year to make the Fair a success. It seems a pity that it is not possible to keep up the public in general. The work which the children do is certainly worth while and the exhibits are always of interest. It also takes quite a lot of the teachers time to have the children enter.

There seems no reason why as little interest should be shown by the public in this important yearly function.

Magdalene Klaschinsky is to be congratulated on winning the first prize for sweet peas. There was a fine display of these flowers. Mrs. Newman also was the winner of a large number of prizes in canning, knitting etc. in fact the pupils of Chatsworth school as a whole are showing in almost every class

CAMROSE LUTHERAN COLLEGE
CAMROSE, ALBERTA

Anyone entering bookkeeping, stenographic or office secretarial should write us so we have a number of efficient graduates available to accept positions.

CAMROSE LUTHERAN COLLEGE is not a large school. Its ideal is not that it shall be a large school, but that it shall be a good school recognized for the superior type of instruction given by the teachers and influence exhibited by its students, and that the wholesome Christian atmosphere which makes for development of character.

The college emphasizes the following three basic elements in its educational programme:

1. A strong faculty of scholarly teachers with special training for their particular subjects.
2. Personal interest in every student with regard to men al, spiritual, physical and social development.
3. Individual instruction in all courses to insure small enough to make possible thorough attention to individual difficulties and personal problems.

Camrose Lutheran College is a residential high school and business college. It offers the regular Alberta High School and Commercial courses as outlined by the Department of Education and prepares students for the Departmental Examinations. It also offers short courses in business subjects. The school has been in operation for a quarter of a century and welcomes to its halls all young people in search who are in earnest about making their school years count for most.

It is just at the high school age that boys and girls enter upon the most difficult and trying time of life, and it is just at this period that the basic elements of character are developed. What it permits to be the scenes out of the ordeal he will generally continue to be in after life.

It is estimated that the commercial apple crop in the United States this year will be $1,500,000 bushels, compared with 92,866,000 bushels in 1935 and 97,285,000 bushels, the five-year average.

The Live Stock Market Report for August 27, issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture emphasizes the fact that the market is receiving increasingly large numbers of unfinished lambs and sows. This condition, the Report points out, is disastrous to prices as well as to the keeping up of a regular supply volume of finished lambs for the home and export trade. Every reasonable effort should be made to keep back unfinished pigs and maintain sow breedings.

$1450.00 IN CASH PRIZES

FOR THE BEST SLOGANS FOR ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR

PRIZES:

1st	$500.00
2nd	250.00
3rd	100.00
4th	75.00
5th	50.00
6th	25.00
10 prizes of	5.00
500 prizes of	1.00
TOTAL	$1,450.00

This is What You Do

Merely write a slogan of not more than two sentences, relating to Royal Household Flour and good enough to describe this favourable brand. It's easy to do. Here are a few examples: "Start by Triple Test"; "Made by the Master Millers" or "A Guarantee of Uniform Baking Results".

You may send in as many slogans as you wish, providing you follow the simple rules below.

3 This contest will close on November 30th, 1936. All entries must be postmarked not later than that date.

4 Send your slogans to "The $1450 Prize Contest, The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Limited, Winnipeg, Canada."

5 Contest is open to all residents of Canada except the employees of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co. Limited and their families.

6 In case of a tie the prize money will be equally divided. The committee of judges is composed of three independent, disinterested persons in no way connected with The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company Limited and their decisions will be final. No correspondence will be entered into and all slogans submitted will become the property of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co Limited.

YOU MAY WIN A VALUABLE PRIZE

We want a slogan for Ogilvie Royal Household Flour and for the best ones submitted during this contest will award prizes as outlined above. Read the simple contest rules and send in your entry. You may win a valuable cash prize.

There's a treat in store also for you if you've never tried this popular flour — Ogilvie Royal Household. It is a flour of the first quality — good for bread, cakes and pastry. It's triple-tested ensuring quality before milling, tested for flour quality during milling and tested for baking quality after milling, all before you buy. Get a bag today.

216 PRIZES TO BE AWARDED!

Here Are the Simple Rules:

1 Use a plain sheet of paper and write out your slogan. Write your name and address clearly at the bottom and on the other side of the sheet write the name and address of the store where you purchase your Royal Household Flour.

2 You may submit as many slogans as you desire, but with each one send the words "Royal Household" cut from the small leaflet in every bag of Royal Household Flour. Or you may send in a reasonably accurate facsimile of same.

RETAILERS

You share in this, too. The retailers named by the first six prize winners will each receive $25.00 cash.

Thou Shalt Not Love

— A NOVEL BY —
GEORGIA GRAIG

I told myself then that if I saw you again that it would be a sign to me that at last I had found the girl I wanted. Heaven knows I've turned the town upside down, looking for somebody who could look the part, as well as act it. When I saw you again tonight — well, you know what I said—Three times and out.' I guess you didn't understand." He leaned over and looked her straight in the eyes. "I don't know who you are, nor anything about you, except for the scene that I witnessed, but I don't want to know anything else. The past is gone. Your life begins this minute.

"You want to play—to be envied; loved . . . I'll make you the talk of the town do a better press agent job than any movie actress ever heard of. It's a natural. You'll start out with an advantage no siren in history ever had. Your reputation is already made for you! All you'll have to do is live up to it! You won't be with a Broadway background, either. It will be among the 'best people' in town, those with money you'll mingle, on whom you'll cast your spell. Your every wish shall be realized. You are beautiful, and that, of course you know. I'll provide the clothes and all the stage scenery. Every woman is to be the envious of you; every man will want to make love to you. Play up to it. Play!"

He paused to let his words sink in. To Starr it was still all part of that unreal dream she was sure was not yet finished. But he looked real enough. His voice was no figment of her imagination, his earnestness was genuine. He was advocating, seeing her quiescence.

"All I ask is that you keep your name in the headlines—not of course with any remotest connection of a Starr Ellison that was. That girl's dead from this minute on—dead and buried. A new one, the famous, or infamous author, has arisen in her place." He could not, or would not, see the stricken look in Starr's eyes as he made his emphasis, nor could he know of the chaos in her throat that kept her from crying out. "Dead and buried"—he had said. . . . He was interested only in his own scheming. "Starr Ellison, the author, must be kept on the front page, if possible, right from the go-off. I don't care how. It won't matter. What will be of account will be the name mention you get will increase the sales of the book. You'll make a fortune for me—and I will for myself, accordingly."

He stopped and studied her a moment more, nodded his satisfaction.

"Yes, you look the type all right—know it from the start—with those wide-open eyes of yours and all. We'll have to cook up some kind of story—you gave me an idea with those few words of Arab gold of yours—a small matter—leave all that to me. The important thing is that you keep your role. If you haven't by any chance read the book I'll tell you that my 'Play-Girl' is a symbol of blatant sex appeal, beauty without emotion, without a soul. Do you understand? Do you think you can play the part?"

Could she? Dared she try? Oh yes, she understood, and the understanding was rather staggering. The book, devil-may-care, social-climbing Michael Fairbourne was ashamed of the book he had authored. He wasn't at all his behind the shirts of a woman—so that his precious royalties could go on!

He was to help him make a fortune so that he could marry the proud Stephanie. She was to sacrifice her own personality—he didn't care the flick of a wrist about that; he had said so in no unmistakable terms. She was to quit being Miss Starr Ellison she had known for almost twenty-three years and allow herself to revolve into a glamorous fiction character, a creation of the brilliant mind of Michael Fairbourne—he had admitted it.

She flung up her head proudly, in that gesture her father had so often likened to the disdainful haughtiness of his beloved ancient Egyptian princess. She wanted to tell him so many things. Then she withheld the revelation of everything came back to her; things she had forgotten; the six months of life—Tut-Amen-Ra—

Michael Fairbourne wanted her to do this thing. Well, why not? Six months of life after all, were all she had left. She would have no future in which to harbor any lingering regrets. She had rallied against the fate which condemned her to be a dark, falling star. This man was right in the headlines—not of course through those last six months, a flaming meteor. It could be Fate—Destiny—that had led her to the Egyptian gods and their curses.

To do as he asked meant that she could drink deep of the gay bitter wine of life. In her few months she could crowd in a lifetime of thrills. Defy grim destiny in a reckless round of pleasure. Surely she had the right to do that, she who was doomed?

A strange excitement possessed her suddenly. Her cameo features glowed. She said, impulsively

"I can do it!"

Michael's hand came across the table. A big warm hand clasping her cold small one to seal their bargain. She lifted her lashes to look at him, out of her long, mysterious eyes. It didn't seem just exactly right. She must make some protest. After all, if they were to be so intimately associated, would it not be better if she confessed to him—a few things she had said softly:

"But after all, we're strangers. Why should we trust one another so far? You know nothing of me . . ."

He flung up his head, smiled engagingly, but the hardness in his tone was not so noticeable.

"I thought we'd passed that. But what does it matter? Strangers—yes, perhaps. But do any of us ever truly know each other? Even after we've lived in close companionship all our lives? Aren't we lonely souls —all of us? Strangers"—The one word glimmered—he allowed her into the inner mind passed instantly. Once again he was the coldly calculating business man. He continued then, as though it were an afterthought:

"If he hadn't behind the shirts of a woman—so that his precious royalties could go on!

He was to help him make a fortune so that he could marry the proud Stephanie. She murmured as though to herself:

"A few months will be—enough"

CHAPTER VI.

"We've got to have a background for you," Michael had said, not in the least interested in what she might have a perfectly gold one, ready-made. And so he proceeded to furnish her with one which would have made an excellent plot for some other book he might some day write! Which actually he did, evidently. In this new role she didn't want to be reminded of the Starr Ellis— of many days, nor will she have anyone care to be identified back in her New England home town with the Starr Ellison who was the "original Jay-Girl."

She entered into all Michael's schemes enthusiastically surprised at herself that she no longer shrank from all his talk about Egypt and Egyptian things. Her communion with the priestess on a case in the Museum had done that. In fact she rather thrilled at the thought of having Egypt revealed in every way much as a wound can be temporarily eased by the anesthesia of further wounding.

It was Michael's idea to say she had come from China, that there was to be considerable mystery about just who she was, but he would see to it that there were no questions asked in few words of Arabic you picked up, though God knows where Michael Caleno ever found time to orientalize and find out all these things.

"You see," Michael explained, "I would all work out splendidly—with those eyes of yours and your mysterious air, to say nothing of your few words of Arabic you've picked up, though God knows where Michael Caleno ever found time to orientalize and find out all these things.

"It's only fair to tell you that the public's fickle, forgives. It may not last long at all. That's rather up to you—and to me, I suppose, as your manager-promoter agent. Public fancy's fickle. You will be 'Play-Girl' only as long as people are interested in the book. It may possibly be but a few months. Then you will have to go back—wherever you came from."

A dagger of ice stabbed at Starr's heart. Her great black eyes assumed that wistful haunting expression that suggestion as of looking upon things remote and unearthly, which was part of her greatest beauty.

Michael Fairbourne wanted her to do this thing. Well, why not? Six months of life after all, were all she had left. She would have no future in which to harbor any lingering regrets. She had rallied against the fate which condemned her to be a

It is quite impossible that an idle floating spirit can ever look up with clear eyes to God spreading its mercantile anarchy before the sympathy of his creative Mind. In the midst of a disorderly being that has neither centre or circumference comparable before the glorious sky that everywhere has both, and for a life that in all future turning to the Lord of the silent stars, of whom it ought it is that "not one faileth." The brethren with their everlasting faithfulness walk their circle and the contradiction than the staggard and careless in their prayers.

Collected Rare Alpine Plants

Naturalists Return To Victoria After 8,000-Mile Trip

After collecting 20,000 rare Alpine plants, Ed and Joe Lobbrunner, Victoria naturalists, came back to civilization after a 3 and one-half trip on the fringe of the Arctic.

"It's difficult to say what a rare plant is," Joe Lobbrunner, said. "Where we were these plants are plentiful but they are rare down here."

On the Quitzie range on the border of Alaska and the Yukon Territory the Lobbrunners waded through Rhododendron millions of them as far as the eye could see. There they collected and [illegible]

CHILDREN'S HOME MAKING AN APPEAL FOR FUNDS

To Increase Accommodation

Under the auspices of the local I. O. D. E., a committee has been formed to canvass the citizens of Vermilion for funds for the work of the Alberta Protestant Home for Children which is situated in the city of Edmonton.

This fine new home has been in operation for a little over a year and in that time has cared for 90 sets of children with a total of over 300 children's days to its credit. In caring for orphans and under privileged homeless children the Home has a particular emphasis upon the all round development of the child. Under the expert leadership of its superintendent and his wife it seeks to build up in these little ones strong bodies, keen minds, and lovely high moral and social ideals so that they may become the finest types of citizens.

With an accumulation for thirty children it is filled up at the present time and needy cases are continually being turned away. Accommodation in the present building can be enlarged to take care of fifty five or sixty children and we are asking you to take a share in this fine piece of work and help us meet the cost of enlarging it. The Home is non denominational and most of its work is purely charity. Give a generous subscription to the canvassers and invest your dollars in our splendid [illegible] program, which gives returns in good citizenship and happiness to the

Student of V.H.S. Sets Record In Royal Navy

The following clippings from the Edmonton Bulletin in its issue of September 22, will be read with interest by the schoolmates and friends of "Bud" Boyer who attended high school here until leaving for England in 1934.

"The all-time record of winning the general proficiency gold medal and eleven first prizes was achieved by Cadet F. J. Boyer, 18, son of T. W. Boyer, manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, Strathcona, on his graduation from H.M.S. "Conway", at Birkenhead England, according to advice received by his parents here. Cadet Boyer is continuing his education in seamanship with the Canadian Pacific Steamships, being received as a cadet on the Beaverford running between Antwerp, Hamburg, London and Montreal.

He has been nominated as a midshipman in the Royal Navy to train with the fleet for about six months each year until he obtains his commission in the Royal Naval Reserve.

In addition to the gold medal for general proficiency, Cadet Boyer won a sextant valued at $200 and three telescopes valued at a similar amount, a set of nautical instruments, as well as numerous gold and silver medals. It is estimated that the value of the prizes captured by him is in excess of $500.

Born in Alberta on September 15, 1918, he left to take the course on the Conway from Vermilion in Aug ust, 1931. He was educated at the Vermilion public school, Strathcona and at High River and Vermilion."

GAS WELL MAIN TOPIC AT BOARD OF TRADE

The chief topic of discussion at the Board of Trade luncheon meeting on Monday last was the gas well, at present being prospected and the future of the Tenwell Gas Company. A. F. Kaiser introduced the matter and stated that in the interests of the town it was the duty of all business men to see the well through to its completion. If the present company were not able to raise sufficient funds being extracted when operations was required to bring it into production. A government test was then made to ascertain what gas was been obtained in quantity and quantities. J. W. S. Morrison spoke in support of Mr. Kaiser's remarks. J. H. Jardine was to actively associated with the development of the well and a few words had stated the present small quantity of gas at present be forthcoming.

It was decided by the Board that Mr. Kaiser act [illegible] of an immigration conference with the Herald plan [illegible] ment which is being held at Vermilion this week.

D. Scott was in the chair and [illegible] ... Waring to handle the next meeting.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION OCTOBER 7TH AND 8TH

Enterprise Work Will Be Main Subject

The annual convention of the Vermilion Inspectorate Education Association will be held in the United church Vermilion on Thursday and Friday Oct. 8 and 9.

The program is now in the process of completion and will evolve around the new Enterprise method. It will prove of great benefit to all teachers especially those in ungraded schools. Inspector MacLeod and Mr. McIntosh, principal of Edmonton Normal school will be two of the speakers.

A banquet will be tendered teachers on Thursday evening when a dance open only to the teachers and their immediate friends will be held on the same evening.

There were 128 teachers in attendance last convention but the number is expected to greatly exceed that figure this year. The occasions are open and visitors are cordially invited to attend any or all of them.

Mr. A. V. Majury is the enterprising president of the association and Jas. J. Part is secretary.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Maine elected a Republican governor and three Republican congressmen in the recent state election.

The Dominion government will pay 100 per cent. of the cost of direct relief in drouth-stricken southwestern Manitoba, Premier Bracken announced.

C. W. Goyder, 28, who invented a radio transmitter and held the first two-way conversation between England and New Zealand, has been appointed engineer-in-charge of All-India radio.

Coal boring with canes under to the claim of navigation of the river, will be suspended from Oct 3 to May 31, except for the pass offices of Cardross and White Horse. The service will be suspended to Champagne from Dec. 1 to March 31.

Grain experts in Ottawa agree with a forecast from Chicago that Canada's wheat surplus will be disposed of by the end of the present crop year, July 31, 1937. It would not be necessary to sell as much as last year to accomplish this.

Arthur E. Cavanagh, general manager of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, said that amalgamation of shop, car and yard facilities of the T. and N.O. and the Canadian National Railways at Cochrane is under consideration.

Calgary's application to the bondholders for reduction of interest rates to possibly three per cent. in order to save that city $400,000 a year is to be taken up with the Investment Dealers' Association of Canada.

The League of Nations Society in Canada, announced appointment of Miss Elizabeth P. MacCallum, New York, as officer in charge of the newly-established international affairs information service to serve its members and the general public throughout Canada.

Former president of the Alberta Municipal Districts' Association, Frank H. Holmes, of Beaver Mines, Alta., has been appointed to the upper house of the Yukon, owing to the federal creditors arrangement act in the province, it was announced.

A Famous Fisherman

Zane Grey, Noted Novelist, Has Broken Another Record

Zane Grey, novelist and big-game fisherman, has broken another record by landing with rod and line a giant devil ray, off the Queensland coast, which weighed more than 1,900 pounds.

It measured 12 feet across the "wings" and was 16 feet six inches long, he reported. It is one of the few giant rays ever caught with rod and line, and was landed only after a terrific struggle of nearly four hours.

The devil ray is a giant species of the stingaree or "stingaree," and has been known to exceed 20 feet in width and half a ton in weight.

Grey recently broke the world's record by landing an enormous shark with rod and line off the New South Wales coast.

Operated By Remote Control

Driverless Car Observed All Roles Of The Road

Those New Yorkers gasped at a vacant automobile which observed all the rules of the road as it wove through traffic on a busy Manhattan street.

Patrolmen watching for traffic violations investigated to find that the automobile was being operated by remote control by the driver of another car which preceded it.

They thumbed their traffic law book in vain to find an ordinance barring driverless cars and finally took the automobile and Harold J. Otis to the police station.

Jonas explained that Charles A. Harnett motor vehicles commissioner had met he knew of no law barring remote control operation and had given permission for the experiment.

The police sergeant made an entry to this effect on the blotter and the drivercless car moved down the street.

Regular brewing establishments first were erected in 1703.

There are 3,480,000 cattle and calves on the farms of Canada.

BLINDING HEADACHES MADE HER HELPLESS

Forced To Lie Down For Hours At a Time

Other sufferers from headaches will be interested to read this letter:—

"Until last summer I was subject to very bad headaches. While they lasted I seemed to lose my sight and all power in my hands, and was forced to lie down for hours at a time. My aunt (who has taken Kruschen Salts for 12 years with beneficial results) suggested my trying them. I did so, and I've not had any return of those headaches for months in fact I feel quite better. I shall always take Kruschen regularly in future."—Mrs. M W.

Headaches can frequently be traced to a disordered stomach, and to the unsuspected retention in the system of stagnating waste material which poisons the blood. The numerous salts in Kruschen assist in the complete elimination of waste matter, resulting in a purer blood-stream, and thus helping to bring relief from headaches.

Plan Largest Liner-Cheap

Sister Ship Of Queen Mary To Be Fastest In World

The sister ship of the Queen Mary, the best of which will probably be laid in November or December, is to have a peak speed of 36 knots, according to the London News-Chronicle. Leading draughtsmen of John Brown and Company are now plotting out the final theoretical designs for "535".

As soon as they are finished work on the 1,000 working drawings will be tried out in the company's experimental tank.

The liner will be about 80,000 tons and at least 12 feet longer than the Queen Mary.

These stipulations will make her without doubt the largest and fastest liner in the world.

The best features of both the Queen Mary and the Normandie will be embodied in the new ship. For economic reasons the Queen Mary beats the Normandie. But the French liner is said to be better streamlined.

The geared turbine system of the Queen Mary has satisfied the experts that it is superior to others, and the same type of engine will be adopted in the sister ship.

Cousins tests by John Brown and Company engineers, the Queen Mary left the Clyde have demonstrated that the turbine system can be perfected to save about 15 per cent. more in running costs.

Arrangements have been made to build the extra mess required for building the ship.

As soon as the decision will by the yard is made, 2,000 men will be employed and by the end of next year, when she is expected to be launched, about 4,000 will be engaged on her construction.

From then until the ship leaves the yard in 1938 the number of men employed will steadily increase until at the peak of the fitting out in her last months at least 12,000 will be working on the ship.

Built Up Odd Profession

Man In London Is Consulted Living Expert On Noise

There is a man in London who lives on noise. Noise has become one of the great problems of our age, and this scientist and engineer was quick to see the possibilities. He has made his profession out of quiet, or noise. In fact he has built up out of noise what might be regarded as one of the most unusual jobs in existence, that of "Noise Consultant."

This man with the unique job is Prof. Arthur Eve, who has specialized as a pioneer of wireless and an expert on popular science, whose articles have appeared in many of our papers. He has devoted 25 years to the study of noise, ever since he listened to the noise made by a motor-cycle engine.

Today you voyage in a modern ocean liner because of the almost absence of the multitudinous noises common to many ships. Nine tenths out of ten of the Professor Eve's knowledge which has eliminated them. You buy a new car and comfortable because of

BRAND HILL

The members of the United church who sponsored the box social here Friday have every right to be proud of the result of their efforts. Jim Williams performed the duties of auctioneer in an efficient manner and there was keen competition in the bidding. A very pleasing musical program was staged under the chairmanship of Mr. P.A. Lambert, student missionary. The program consisted by all singing "O Canada."

The following contributed and all the items were well received: Miss E. Evans, Miss F. Mix, D. Birming ham, O. Stephens, P.A. Lambert, J Williams, Edgar Williams, Miss C. Barker, Mrs. Chas. Mix, Miss Jack ins, Peter Birmingham. Miss C. Barker was accompanist and the program was brought to a close by all singing "God Save the King." Mr. P.A. Lambert, who was very popular took his departure Monday by the C N R. for Montreal.

In our report of the dance held in the new hall we regret we overlooked mentioning a few very interesting items. Miss Frances Antoine, a young lady of great promise contributed a number of songs and her sister, Miss Marie Antoine acted as accompanist. Chas. Brady and his daughter Miss Margaret Brady also danced an Irish Jig and received the hearty applause of the audience. The next dance which was advertised for Oct. 2 has been postponed until the 9th.

The following gentlemen have been appointed trustees of the new hall: Robert Butler, Daniel Acheson, Geo. Sullivan, Michael McKinnon and P. McIntosh.

When you find a gentleman who voluntarily pulls out his car at 2 a.m. to accommodate a neighbor you will say without a doubt that man is imbued with a real Christian spirit Such a man is Mr. Wm. McCrea of Gap Lake district and we wish to thank him sincerely, and you will a give dear reader, if all men were of the calibre of Mr. McCrea this world would be a better place in which to live.

Council meeting was held in Solman school with Crs. Hetherington, Pleasey, Ramsay, Hills, Dow and Currey present and Reeve Pleasey presiding

Minutes of August 8th meeting were read and after correction, time sheets for $60.75 and $92.50 being for relief are to be charged to municipal account and not to divisions, were adopted

Hospital notices for the month were read when the sec was instructed to write the Royal Alex, re Mrs Crowe

Further correspondence was read re deportation of Jim Kane and his family Mr Kane was present and agreed that he would furnish evidence and guarantees that he would not become a public charge in Scotland The sec was instructed to write the M.H. Director at Ottawa re the matter

It was moved and carried that Where as this council had no power to amend the original Relief By-Law No. 7, Municipal Doctor By-law, under Sec 116 of the Municipal Districts Act and by-law this original by-law still stands and Whereas the amendment under Sec 100 of the Mun Districts Act was passed and duly advertised as a by-law Therefore be it resolved that the amendment be duly designated By law No. 3 and that Ottawa request the Minister of Health for approval of the Municipal Doctor Agreement under By-law Nos. 7 and 3

Several ratepayers who had received Seed Grain Advances were present to request that part payment be accepted and balance be carried over to next year in some cases as owing to that if full payment were made that relief would be required The council would not refuse the payment in any case and advised it anyone had to have relief it would be given Mr T.G. Upshall agreed to deliver his grain and pay for the feed and was given 3 days work drawing gravel at $3.50 per day as relief for the month of Sept. and is to be paid the per load for the gravel each amount is to be applied on taxes

The matter of returns was discussed Secretary to advise in all cases that grain is to be delivered or payment made by end of September

Carried that a final notice be sent in all cases where lands were included in 1935 Tax Sale and are now liable to forfeiture, advising that if payment of arrears of taxes is not made in 20 days that final acquisition will be made.

Hon. W. A. Fallow's reply to our communication re Prosperity Bonds was read, when Cr. Ramsay carried that same was very unsatisfactory

Letters were read re Agricultural Relief and surplus cattle, sec. to reply; University Hospital and Vivian Baldwin, sec. to reply; Circular re telephones, no action; Mr. Pinchbeck re convention, $15.00 fee to be paid. Application for O.A. pension by A Wirtz, recommend full pension, Joe Strovec, no action; J.J. Wadsworth, part of road work given for relief and to be so applied. Requisites For Safe Driving

The Ministry of Transport has prepared the following list of requisites for safe driving of automobiles and for the protection of drivers and passengers in the three provinces. The [illegible] accidents together with the [illegible] information was available. The [illegible]

It is not too much to expect figures showing the number of accidents and the toll of dead and injured. These will be available later, but indications are that there will be little if any reduction below the 1935 record. Despite the numerous campaigns waged by governmental authorities and numerous committees, organizations interested in the subject, through the public press, over the air and through motion picture presentation.

It does not necessarily follow that such campaigns are a failure, but it seems to indicate that public education has reached a level at which the capacity of automobile drivers to avoid accident, no matter how well-intentioned or how careful they may be is below par. The latter is probably a close approach to the correct diagnosis of the situation.

Mechanical and scientific skill on famous and available data on the causes of automobile accidents [illegible] year came to the conclusion that the number of accidents arising from defective equipment or faulty mechanism is comparatively insignificant from which it follows that the human element the capacity and capability of the driver is in the majority of cases the factor mainly responsible for disasters on the highways.

In other words a large percentage of automobile accidents, can be traced [illegible] the part of the driver. The [illegible] charged up against [illegible]

[illegible] the causes of a number of crashes and the opinion is gaining ground that a substantial percentage of accidents is caused by drivers who are ordinarily careful but who have had no [illegible] experience to sense danger in time to avoid it or who [illegible] enough to resort to the proper [illegible] failure in time to prevent disaster.

These considerations [illegible] the adoption of courses of training for those who wish to [illegible] special speeds from [illegible] by examination [illegible] which would not be feasible to insist on making such tests the sine qua non for the right to drive for those who have previously been granted licenses. Courses of training [illegible] properly carried out by competent persons would at least [illegible] if not completely take care of lack of training.

As for accidents caused by lack of experience these can only be overcome by experience supplemented by instruction. Test drivers ran and do [illegible] from [illegible] which warns them of impending danger in the [illegible] London, England, where the [illegible] of the driver of [illegible] is causing grave concern. Coronation Ceremonies

Question Is Raised As To Whether Queen Mary Will Attend

The question whether Queen Mary will attend the coronation of her son King Edward VIII, next May is being discussed with some animation

The interest seems to be centered in the personal desires of Queen Mary and His Majesty

There is no precedent in England for a widowed queen attending the coronation of her husband's successor but amongst members of the royal family of the present and immediately preceding generation precedent often has been jettisoned

Queen Alexandra widow of King Edward VII, did not attend the coronation of King George V and Queen Mary in 1911 although there was talk at the time that her absence was not against her own will

The present situation is somewhat different as there is no question of rivalry

Workers Who Fill Endless Needles Have Trying Job

If you had to take time to review with precision three million needles during the year would you? Maybe you had better not answer that if you had a job requiring such radical concentration and visual demand Yet somewhere in this country there are workers who have that job. Many of them are women. Their task is to inspect packages of needles after they have been counted by machine. Their fingers run over the packages and their eyes scan the needles. Their job is to find the bent ones.

Two Sides To Story

Human Body Not Fitted For Modern Cruise For Speed

Four thousand miles, from New York to Central Europe, in five days' That was the record achieved by the recent test in which a specially-chartered Imperial Airways air-liner met the liner, Queen Mary, at Cherbourg, and flew with a party of passengers via Paris Munich and Vienna to Budapest. As soon as the ocean liner reached Cherbourg, the party which were to make the 1,020-mile flight to Budapest were conveyed by motor launch to the aerodrome where the air liner was waiting Within an hour and a quarter they were in Paris a distance of 209 miles Zurich, 306 miles, was reached at lunch time In less than an hour they reached Munich, then on to Vienna and Budapest, at a speed reaching 170 miles an hour. A radio-telegraph service now enables passengers by air, sea or land to keep in touch with each other and with the world. Government officials flying along Empire routes can receive and send messages while they travel Stations are kept in touch with their headquarters throughout the journey. But there is another side to all this story of ever-increasing speed The human body was not built for working or playing at the rate suggested by this way of living - The New Outlook.

Circumstantial Evidence

British Author Gives Reason For Dismaying Rumor About King Edward's Marriage

Renewed rumors that King Edward VIII of England would get married, maybe to Princess Irene or Princess Catherine sisters of King George II of Greece, was indignantly dismissed by John Drinkwater noted British author who writes a weekly piece about Edward for a London magazine

On the subject of the King's marriage Drinkwater writes "We have a reasonable circumstantial evidence that the King at present is contemplating such a step. His new suite at Buckingham Palace, in the preparation of which he has taken personal interest, is designed for the accommodation of his existing bachelor establishment That in itself should be an indication of his intentions"

Drinkwater continues: "If the King decides to marry, official announcements will be made immediately Anyone outside the King's family circle professing to have inside information is not worth listening to."

King Edward Requested Three Encores In Vienna Club

King Edward has a favorite song and it deals with the rustic life of Austrian peasants.

His Majesty heard the song in a night club in Vienna and requested three encores after which he tipped the performer liberally.

"That's my favorite song," he said

The song, in dialect, refers to the lower Austrian village of Langenlois.

To Fight Jap Menace

Russia Is Building In Secret A New Submarine Flotilla

Russia is concentrating a new and secret submarine flotilla at Vladivostok, reliable sources disclosed today guard against the possibility of attack from Japan.

The submarines are the "mystery fleet" of the Pacific. They are unlisted in regular naval manuals. No paying eyes are permitted to fathom their design.

Soviet officials admit no specific number Informed sources estimate that between 40 and 50 submersibles are stationed there. Japanese sources state 90 are based within the Vladivostok area.

The submarines are new, small and easy to conceal, capable of quick manoeuvre—this much is known, observers say.

They are believed intended chiefly for defensive purposes because of their small size. They are subject to no restrictions or treaties, however, because the Soviets retained a free hand on construction in the Pacific.

Intended for the Pacific, information related, they were manufactured in European Russia. Knocked down for delivery they were transported 4,000 miles to secret shipyards at Vladivostok, these informants continued, and assembled. Now personnel is being trained constantly to handle the craft as their numbers increase, it was learned.

The Soviets have no capital ships, cruisers or destroyers in the Pacific, it was stated. But an army entrenched at Khabarovsk is designed to the far eastern territory to back up submarine and aerial defenses.

Have Real Tunnel

Engineering Students At Oklahoma Can Visit Huge Project

University of Oklahoma engineering students will have a chance this school year to find out things about 250-mile-an-hour wind.

A new tunnel, eighty-five feet in length is near completion on the campus. A 600-horsepower engine, using natural gas as fuel, will drive the wind through the steel tunnel so research workers at the other end can find out what happens under certain conditions.

Works Progress Administration technicians constructed the tunnel at a cost of $16,000. It was designed primarily for research in aeronautics.

It will be used in testing the wind resistance of airplanes, automobiles, trains and boats, according to Joseph Liston, associate professor of mechanical engineering. Addition of the tunnel to the school's facilities will enable it to offer new courses in airplane testing and aerodynamics research.

Something Worth Guarding

Democracy Protects People And Gives Them Every Freedom

Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London, told members of the Canadian Club at a luncheon meeting in Toronto that the trend in Europe brings home the fact is British peoples that democracy was not just a textbook word.

While the democratic form of government has been thrown overboard in countries where it was given a half-hearted trial, and tendencies are either to the extremes of either right or left with dictatorships following in its wake, it is noteworthy that in those countries under the British flag the people and for the people" is more jealously guarded than ever.

The British Empire and the United States still represent the main bulwark against undue curtailment of liberty. The freedom we enjoy is something that cannot be valued too highly.

We have religious liberty, freedom of the press, a generous measure of free speech. Moreover, when a government isn't doing what it should we elect another in its place to carry out the will of the people. Isn't that a combination of privileges worth while guarding jealously?—Kitchener Record.

Treasures From Japan

Priceless Objects Being Loaned For Exhibition in Boston

Two of the great cultural institutions of the United States, the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and Harvard University, have been honored by the Japanese Emperor.

As a tribute to these educational centres, Japan is allowing the exhibition in Boston of some of her priceless art treasures. The exhibit is to continue until October 29.

Besides the examples of painting and sculpture on loan from the Imperial household and Japanese museums and art schools, there are many valuable Japanese art treasures owned by the Boston Museum. It was because of the great interest the museum of fine arts has shown in Japanese art for more than 30 years, and because of the tercentenary of Harvard that the treasures were selected to come to Boston as a tribute of the Japanese people.

The collection consists of 136 objects. They represent the finest in Japanese art from the beginning of Buddhist art in Japan in the seventh century to the close of the Tokugawa period in the middle of the nineteenth century.

What is said to have been the greatest calamity in history was the Black Death, a pestilence which spread over Asia, Europe and northern Africa in the 14th century, and took the lives of 67,000,000 people.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

OCTOBER 4

THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY

Golden text: Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations Matthew 28:19.

Lesson: Acts 15:36, 16:15; Romans 15:18-21.

Devotional reading: Hebrews 11: 8-16.

Explanations And Comments

The First Converts in Europe, Acts 16:13-15. There could have been no synagogue in Philippi, or Paul would have gone there on the Sabbath. Beyond the city limits by the riverside there was a place of prayer, and Lydia the purple merchant had to meet a company of women, among them Lydia, a prosperous merchant from Thyatira, who dealt in purple-dyed garments. She was a Jewish proselyte, for it is said of her that she worshipped God. Paul gave his message to these women, and the Lord 'opened her heart to give heed unto the things which were spoken by Paul"; and she believed the good news, and with her household was baptized.

Lydia besought the missionaries to make her house their headquarters, and this they did. Hospitality was always a marked characteristic of the early church: 1 Peter 4:9; Romans 12:13; 1 Timothy 5:10; 3 John 5, 8.

Paul's Pioneer Work, Romans 15: 18-21. Moffatt's translation makes these verses clearer: I will not make free to speak of anything except what Christ has accomplished by me in the way of securing the obedience of the Gentiles, by my words and by my deeds, by the force of miracles and marvels, by the power of the Spirit of God. Thus from Jerusalem right round to Illyricum across Asia Minor and the Aegean to Greece behind Rome, I have been able to complete the preaching of the gospel of Christ—my ambition always being to preach it only in places where there had been no mention of Christ's name, that I might not build on foundations laid by others, but that (as it is written)

They should see who never had tidings,
And learned about him,
And they who had never heard of him should understand.

"Paul seemed like a lost-master of the lives of men, who had no money begun to weave a piece of canvas and had got the pattern of warp and woof prepared than he was driven away—to start again and be interrupted once more. How futile it seemed! But what really happened was that instead of Paul completing his tent at one place, he left it and centre after another men and women who had caught the pattern and the plan and would work it out after he had left them. He was the scout riding on perilous ways ahead of the main army: the heroic pioneer missionary" (Basil Mathews).

Home Rule For India

Provincial Autonomy To Come In April, 1937

The Marquess of Linlithgow, viceroy of India, said in his initial address to both houses of the Indian legislature that the stage was set for provincial autonomy in April, 1937. He added there was a strong probability the transitory period between that achievement and the inauguration of federation in India would be of short duration.

The government of India bill, passed through the British parliament in 1935, provided for these changes.

Appraising this prospect, the new viceroy said: "It is the more impressive by reason of its contrast with the ominous background of the contemporary world. While in Europe nations are arming, while in Asia there arises an army of dictatorships, Great Britain and India are about to initiate an experiment in representative government which for breadth of conception is without a parallel in history."

An Unexpected Accident

Mr. J. R. Williams of Los Angeles was looking for an accident about to happen. Two cars appeared headed for a collision in front of his home Williams ran to obtain a closer view. There was no collision But Williams fell and broke his leg.

Airways Traffic Control

United States Uses Radio To Avoid Congestion In Air Lanes

Traffic cops have finally taken over the United States sky lanes.

It hasn't reached the no-parking stage yet, but the bureau of air commerce is rapidly setting up an airways traffic control system which directs 'planes as the policeman at the corner bosses autoists.

Each station has a large map showing the air routes in and out of airports. A couple of men study maps, ear-phones over their heads and their eyes fixed on a sea of tiny wooden tabs representing ships.

Along half a dozen routes, measured in hours instead of miles, 'planes move at various rates of speed.

One of the watchers sees six 'planes moving on an airport within a few minutes of one another. Immediately he takes charge of the situation.

By radio he pushes the nearest one down to a lower level, the next to a level a little higher than the rest, the third to a still higher level and so on. If this is not sufficient to avoid congestion, he reduces the speed of one or two.

Nagging Will Cause Sickness

Medical Research Council Reaches This Decision After Survey

A higher sickness rate is likely to prevail in offices where the atmosphere is fretted with nagging than in those where a harmonious atmosphere exists, the British Medical Research Council has concluded after a survey.

"A general attitude of grousing among workers is a good medium for the cultivation of disease germs," the Council states. "When employees feel they receive justice and consideration there is mental environment that will prevent the easy yielding to every chance of sickness."

One case quoted in that of a company employing a number of stenographers doing the same work. It was found that during a recent influenza epidemic most of the girls in one office were away only while in another there were few absent. The head of the first office was declared to be a petty nagger, while the head of the other was a person with a sunny disposition

A Dangerous Plaything

Many Children Have Been Blinded By Toy Guns

The air-gun or B.B. gun and the sling-shot, so coveted by boys and so freely advertised by certain conscienceless business houses, are contemptible not only for the death of hundreds of beautiful and useful birds, but for sad and permanent injuries to others. A circular issued by the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teache ...the institution for b... ...ch... are 300 children who will never see again because their eyes were put out by toy guns. IS THERE A FIRE BUG IN YOUR HOME?

The greatest fire loss in Canada last year, over $2,750,000 was caused by 1,300 fires traced to defective or carelessly handled stoves, furnaces, boilers and pipes.

Disastrous fires from cookstoves and heating stoves come from many causes, the most common one being turning on the draft and leaving the room. If the stove for either cooking or heating is too small it is dangerous because by forcing the fire the stove overheats with grave risk of setting fire to wood partitions or of the soot in the pipes or flues. If large stoves are used, the fires will not have to be forced, thereby eliminating this hazard.

The floor should be protected from chance sparks by a sheet of metal or asbestos cloth placed under the stove. A stove should not be placed near than 18 inches from walls or partitions or either wood or plaster and the wall should be protected by a sheet of tin, zinc or sheet iron hung loosely on hooks allowing space for the air to pass between the wall and sheet of protector. It should extend from a few inches above the floor to at least a yard above the stove pipe.

All tin and plaster or wood refining over a large range should be protected by a metal hood or vanilla ning pipes.

Many fires result from grease or oil boiling over on the cooking stove. Throwing water on the stove only causes the blaze more dangerous as it causes the flame to spread. Ashes from the coal, lime or salt should be used to smother the flames.

Stovepipes should be cleaned every autumn and where the pipes become rusty or perforated, prompt condition is caused by the steam from sulphur fumes from coal, the affected pipes should be replaced. See that pipes passing through a roof wall floors or ceiling are protected by a metal collar surrounding them in which there is at least one inch of air space.

A party consisting of Miss F. Mitchell, Miss Morris, Miss C. Barker, Jim Williams, Eric Hawkes and Edgar Williams motored to town saturday and after partaking of lunch paid a visit to the picture show and they report a very jolly time.

All is not for another big night at the school house. Special arrangements are being made to have the best dance music available and the hall is in tip top condition so come along and you will heartily enjoy a real good time in a spacious hall with hardwood floor.

Mrs. Acheson had an unfortunate experience last Sunday night. A few minutes after parting with a few friends she encountered a skunk on the road the latter had all the odours ready in the first shot and Mrs. Hugh had to bear a hasty retreat. She visited Hugh to a real odorous bath and on his Sunday lunch would be alright by the time he had to call at his next date. He is not to call this week.

We had the pleasure of a visit on Sunday from H. Williams, Jr. Mountain, Mrs. Powell Turkey Hill. They said the roads would be a big county part from this district at the dance here on the 9th.

THE accumulated assets of the life insurance policy-holders of Canada are the largest—by far—of any single class of investment holdings in the country. They include every type of non-speculative investment, but owning to the nature of the insurance contract the greater part of them consists of credit claims against property, with principal and interest payable in fixed dollar amounts, rather than ownership equities whose value and income depend upon earnings. The owners of these investments are only nominally the insurance companies themselves, some of which are wholly mutualized, and all of which administer funds in the shareholders' proportion is an almost infinitesimal part; the real owners are the policy-holders themselves. And in spite of the existence of a fair number of very large policies which may be regarded as a class of rich men's investments, the typical policy holding is a matter of a few hundreds or thousands of dollars, the chief asset and the metaphorical or thousandfold worker who has not commercial or professional worker who has not important asset, never will accumulate any other.

Not the loss of destruction or partial destruction of the value of any such credit claim, be it a government bond, a municipal bond, a public utility bond, or railway bond, or an ordinary industrial bond or mortgage on property mortgage, can ever fail to impair the assets of the life insurance policy-holders of the country. Any widespread destruction of such values must necessarily render the assets of the companies inadequate to perform the functions for which those policy-holders rely upon them. The same is true of any tampering with the value of the unit of currency in which these credit claims are expressed. Policy-holders who have credit claims are the interests of their beneficiaries—the vast majority of life insurance policies are taken out—should set their faces implacably against all government tendencies leading to partial or complete repudiation of debt contracts, for such tendencies are destructive to the whole system of insurance.

The object of insurance is to make something sure. The effect of repudiation is to make everything unsure.

CLANDONALD BOYS GRAIN CLUB CAPS HIGH STANDING

Robert Gray, Greenlawn, Makes High Individual Score

Scoring the highest average, Grande Prairie junior mixed club, in competition with 22 clubs in the province, numbering 378 boys, has captured the Alberta Seed Growers' association cup. Clandonald club won second place and Wasel sat club, name third.

As sponsor of the standing crop contest among junior farmers, the United Grain Growers had again provided free to each boy of 15 to 22 years sufficient registered seed to sow four to five acres of clean land. Under direction of the district agriculturalists the grain has been grown. It was judged by field crop officials of the provincial department of agriculture.

With a score of 96, Hans Geuchey, of Bezanath, led in individual scores. Robert Gray, Greenlawn club, Dewberry, and John MacDonald, Wembley, came second and third, fractionally under 93

Except two, all of the clubs growing oats are in the northern half of the province and following completion of threshing the juniors will proceed to select half-bushel samples of the seed for competition at junior seed fairs this fall.

Several of the clubs were put out of the running by hail and drouth damage, which lowered their average despite the fact that many of the boys had fine yields.

ELTHAM EDITION

Someone has suggested that it's almost time for the sophomores to put themselves on the map, by an attempt at news in the Vermilion Standard. So here goes for a start!

Harvesting operations are practically finished in this locality. The yield was certainly not high, but the quality seems excellent and many cleaners throughout the country are running the weed seeds. All that is now required is a fair price. Binder has already begun to the elevators at Clairmore. Even the threshing machines were surprised at the rapidity with which their work was done. To our experienced ear they seemed to hold an inquiring note through their racket. Never mind, perhaps there will be a longer run next year.

School has been under way at Eltham for three weeks now. There is a decided decrease in the population apparently, only ten children attending so far. The school marm got quite a shock when confronted by so many empty desks. But only the threshing machines got a shock. We note a searching look in her eye, every yet, no doubt she is still on the alert for the truant. In the meantime, the parents are being besieged with demands for flour, suit, paper, etc. which probably explains the rush in enterprise. Long may it flourish!

Advance notices had been plentiful and alluring about the event at which "Play-Girl," the star, was to make her debut, take off her mask, as it were, and face the world she had fooled. She had been living in New York for some time, the newspapers discovered—with the help of Michael Fairborne in charge of the Tattler Publishing Company's publicity department—and because she had become the most-talked-of, and up to then, retiring, of all anonymous celebrities, it was fitting that she should come out of that retirement with a flourish of publicity trumpets.

Everybody was curious about "Play-Girl." Some insisted that she would be discovered to be some sex-starved and disappointed old maid who had sought expression through the imagery of her book. Others voted for a blase divorcee—several names were mentioned—while still others insisted there was no "Play-Girl" at all (they got it from scientific sources, of course) but that the whole book was a symposium of collected experiences which had been plagiarized by the firm's own Beatrice Fairfax who was, they were assured, fat and well past fifty with several quite up and coming grandchildren. It was hard for anyone to believe that there really existed in the flesh any young and beautiful woman who could have sinned as violently as "Play-Girl" and then cold-bloodedly and analytically have written about her experiences, playing with them with the same skill that a surgeon exhibits in wielding a scalpel.

At all events, it was inevitable that everyone wanted to be among the first to see "Play-Girl" when the Tarrance Company introduced her to an eagerly awaiting public.

On the night of Starr's debut, therefore, the grand ball room at Pierre's was crowded. Everybody who was anybody socially, and everyone enough to be seen where "Play-Girl" was seen, was there. Hot pellol would get there a few hours later, and have an opportunity to chase after her when she went to theatres and night clubs, pursuing with their autograph books as though she were a movie celebrity. In fact, before "Play-Girl" made her appearance, she was more exploited than any cinema star, for while they only portrayed the emotions of reel persons "Play-Girl" had lived hers. And still lived to tell the story.

With all the fanfare preceding her, Starr made a poised, effective entrance the night of her debut, descending at any pictured staircase to the ballroom, scarlet-tipped fingers resting lightly on the arm of Michael Fairbourne.

Her gown was a seductive sheath of clinging black chiffon velvet, daringly cut, a sensational foil for the dark sultry pallor of her face. She had been sitting on one of her low chairs beside an inlaid table when Michael had come for her and he had stared. Starr recalled how he had shaded his eyes, looking at her, surveying her from her close black hair to the table edge. She had asked him, at the surprised look in his eyes:

"D-d-don't you like my hair?"

And Michael "I was just looking for it."

It was that kind of debut frock, a daring modiste's triumph.

Her face, with the camelia skin, was as perfect as a cameo carved out of ivory. Her mouth was a painted, scarlet smile. The long black eyes—so perfectly carved that artists and stories about her young Egyptian ancestry were as deeply mysterious as those of any pictured prostitute. And a soft mass of unrestrained, cloudy black curls added an oddly naive note to a picture of worldly sophistication. The one touch of color was the enameled necklace and bracelet which is a piece apparently of fabulous worth as antiquities.

That was how Starr Ellison looked on the occasion of her debut into the glittering night life of New York, highly social or otherwise Starr Ellison the infamous "Play-Girl."

A long murmur of interest that almost held a touch of awe greeted the arrival of the astonishingly lovely young woman who had at last cast off her anonymity in a sensational burst of publicity. It broke immediately into little individual murmurs

From the men:

"Gorgeous!"

"I'd like to meet her!"

"I've got to meet her! No long distance worshipping for me!"

"Snappy number, eh, what?"

"If there's a good Egyptian sample, no wonder old Marc Antony went bayw!re!"

From the women:

"Brazen hussy!"

"You wouldn't think she'd dare to come here or any place else with the reputation she's got!"

"As if it isn't bad enough to have lived the kind of life she's lived without writing her experiences for everybody to read!"

"I can well believe that about her Egyptian blood. They've always been decadent, I've read!"

"And they say that terrible book has made her a fortune, my dear!"

It was quite natural that some of the remarks should reach the girl on the steps, but she betrayed no embarrassment. Black eyes beneath unbelievable long, dusky lashes swept the ballroom with a glance of nonchalant bravery, with an odd, disdainful aloofness with which some long-gone princess might have looked on her slaves.

Her palmist smile never wavered. She turned and whispered to the man at her side something which her audience took to be one of the sarcastic witticisms of the variety with which her book was spiced:

What Starr Ellison actually said was

"Michael-Haaaen, I'm scared! My legs feel wabbly. I don't think I can walk a step farther."

Warm gray eyes reassured her. Michael patted her hand. Seared through with the heart of a man. He hadn't thought of it in that light before Didn't know the thought had ever come to him by degrees during their intimacy of the preparation days . He had been preferring to remember where he had found her - Rol, all of it! She had been a La Luna habitue. . . "Rough and ready."

He whispered tenderly:

"Keep your courage, kid. You're doing great. Cleopatra herself couldn't have knocked them any harder!" Then his eyes narrowed as he shot her a quick glance. "And for the love of mud, don't call me Michael-Haaaen any of them might not understand that—"

Starr's long eyes passed over him slowly.

"I understand, Has- Michael. Don't let it worry you. Everybody will understand that your name is Payling-girl is because you're so loyal to the interests of your firm."

Michael flushed at the unexpected rebuff, but said nothing. Perhaps he had made a mistake in assuming with the girl an air of camaraderie. After all, theirs was a most meticulous business arrangement.

In short order Starr was introduced to more people than she could ever hope to remember. It was bewildering. She was conscious all the time, too, of an undercurrent of antagonism, disapproval in too many cases. She knew she was being measured by her reputation. The kiss-and-tell girl.

Men sighed her, drinking in her fragile loveliness. Some of them managed to inject an undertone of suggestiveness beneath their casual remarks.

Starr understood. They were women here or any place else with the reputation she's got!"

"As if it isn't bad enough to have lived the kind of life she's lived without writing her experiences for everybody to read!"

"I can well believe that about her Egyptian blood. They've always been decadent, I've read!"

5th 50.00
6th 25.00
10 prizes of 10.00
500 prizes of 2.00
TOTAL $1,450.00

This is What You Do
Merely write a slogan of not more than 10 words relating to Royal Household Flour and good enough to describe this favourite brand. It's easy to do. Here are a few examples "Best by Taste Test", "Made by the Master Millers", or "A Commander of Uniform Baking Results".
You may send in as many slogans as you wish, providing you follow the simple rules below.

216 PRIZES TO BE AWARDED!
Here Are the Simple Rules:

1 Use a plain sheet of paper and write out your slogan of not more than 10 words. Write your name and address clearly at the bottom and on the other side of the sheet with the name and address of the store where you purchase your Royal Household Flour.

2 You may submit as many slogans as you desire, but with each one send the words "Royal Household" cut from the small leaflet in every bag of Royal Household Flour. Or you may send in a reasonably accurate facsimile of same.

3 The contest will close on November 30th, 1936. All entries must be postmarked not later than that date.

4 Address your entry to "The $1450 Prize Contest, The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited" and mail it to the nearest Ogilvie office as listed.

5 This Contest is restricted to RESIDENTS OF CANADA, ONLY. Employees of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Ltd., and their families are not eligible to compete.

6 In case of a tie the prize money will be equally divided. The committee of judges is composed of three independent, disinterested persons in no way connected with The Ogilvie Flour Mills Company Limited and their decisions will be final. No correspondence will be entered into and all slogans submitted will become the property of The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited.

YOU MAY WIN A VALUABLE PRIZE

We want a slogan for Ogilvie Royal Household Flour and for the best ones submitted during this contest will award prizes as outlined above. Read the simple contest rules and send in your entry. You may win a valuable cash prize.

There's a treat in store also for you if you've never tried this popular brand of flour—Royal Household. It is flour of the first quality—good for bread, cakes and pastry. It's triple-tested—tested for wheat quality before milling, tested for flour quality during milling and tested for baking quality after milling, all before you buy. Get a bag today.

Duplicates Of Crown Jewels

London Firm Busy Filling Orders For Coronation Display

The "crown jewels" of England are coming to America—in cargo lots.

In fact, if the United States should decide to enthrone a king any time within the next few months there will be enough glittering crowns on hand to outfit a whole royal family.

With King Edward VIII's coronation set for next May, a London firm is busily turning out duplicates of the famous British crown jewels.

Scores of orders have come from American cities for display in connection with next year's coronation ceremonies, while dozens of others have come from Australia, New Zealand, Canada and South Africa.

Except that the "gems" are glass and the "gold" is imitation, the crowns are identical with the historical jewels which are kept under heavy guard in the Tower of London.

Each set contains five crowns five swords, six sceptres, two orbs, the spurs and bracelets of St. George and other regal paraphernalia including the famed Order of the Garter.

Fuel Tanks In Wings

New Soviet Plane Makes Sudden Non-Stop Flight

An aeroplane which may revolutionize aircraft design has made a record flight from Moscow to Far East, an flight in Soviet Russia. The machine is known as the ANT-25. It has been perfected by Professor A. N. Tupolev

The machine is a monoplane with fuel tanks in the wings. The huge ballasts of light fuel take the place of the ballast to counter the weight of the fuel. Besides these ballasts a number of extra fuel tanks are carried in the fuselage.

Vilhjalmur Stefansson, Arctic explorer, was a common food in that part of the country, by pressing with a fork. Then it is cooked and is considered a delicacy.

Big Fish Catch

Wallace H. McMillan of Winnipeg holds the distinction of winning a tyre button in one fishing expedition at Courtenay. He is specially for the gold, silver and bronze awards at both campbell river and Comox bay. The gold button calls for a fish from 50 to 60 pounds, the silver from 40 to 50 and the bronze from 30 to 40

Income From Egg Production

Income from egg production in Saskatchewan rose from $5,900,000 in 1934 to $7,200,000 in 1935.

Find Precious Stones

Claim Made That Diamonds And Rubies Can Be Mined In Edmonton Area

Diamonds and rubies can be mined within Edmonton's city limits. That is the belief of Ferdinand Pomahac, a contractor who claims to have found rough crystals he believes stones.

Mr Pomahac, who has visited Diamond fields in South Africa, said the crystals would cut glass in the same manner as a diamond. He displayed a stone which he contends is a genuine ruby and so appraised by an Edmonton jeweler.

Location of the find is withheld by the "city prospector" who declares he has a valuable find. He intends to acquire rights to the property and develop the field.

Pomahac made a study of geology in Germany and is convinced he will produce diamonds and rubies in commercial quantity. Part of any financial benefits accruing from the venture will be used to care for sick children in Edmonton hospitals, he says.

Taking No Chances

Bookings Being Made On Sister Ship To The Queen Mary

"No. 552," sister-ship to the Queen Mary may be full up for the maiden voyage before her keel is laid in December.

Plans of her life mate belt would be ready for the builders in a few weeks.

Richard White, official head of the London Star About Service, writes that bookings are already being made, and substantial getting inquiries.

Some passengers ask to know if they can book a suite a year or two before they sail.

Queen Mary's sailing

The first bookings were made today, when a well-known actress and her husband had sustained the record passage by the bowl and they were all to prepare what had caused the Queen Mary's sailing

Little Helps For This Week

The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms. Deut. 33 27.

Within Thy encircling arms we lie,
O God, in Thy infinity;
Our souls in quiet shall abide,
Sheltered with love on every side.

"The Everlasting Arms." We think of that whenever rest is sweet. How the whole earth and the strength of it is at hand every tired creature to give it rest, holding us always. No thought of God is closer than that. No human tenderness or patience is greater than that which gathers in its arms a little child and holds it. No human arms prepared and used thus at a very early date. An Egyptian document — a papyrus — with the characters of the date 2500 B.C. is still in existence. Two thousand years later the emperors of Greece and Rome were used to sign their decrees with a fountain in purple ink. Since those days the secret of that ink has been lost, but we have many and today some of the finest inks in the world are manufactured in Canada

Strange Chin Custom

The strangest chin custom of modern times is still practiced in Lhasa, Tibet. The privilege of being master of the city for the first 23 days of the year is held by auction. The highest bidder assumes his mayoral duties, rules the city as he thinks fit, and keeps all the money he can raise through additional taxation and fancy fines.

Luxury For Pigs

Cold shower baths have been installed in what are believed to be the most luxurious pig sties in the world, at Kinu Palms, New South Wales. If the animals are kept cool in hot weather, it has been found that they fatten better

Sunlight is about 618,000 times as bright as the light of a full moon.

. . . Quick Relief for Stuffy Head

Assistance Needed

While it is a matter for congratulation that Churchill, the Hudson's Bay port, is enjoying a record shipping season this year it is passing strange that active steps to promote increased traffic for the route, for the establishment of which the west fought for over 20 years, should be left to "outsiders."

For better than half a century, farmers and business men of the prairie provinces fought against great odds to establish the Hudson Bay route by the construction of a railway line, and terminal facilities on the Bay to handle traffic, which they hoped would eventually result in better returns for agricultural products shipped out and reduced prices for merchandise shipped in

The first objective was achieved in 1932 when the S S Pennyworth steamed into Churchill Harbor with a cargo of commodities from overseas for Western Canadian consumption and left again with a full cargo of Western Canadian grain for European markets. Since that time there has been an annual increase in the number of inward and outward vessels making use of the route until this year, it is hoped have entered the harbor with a possibility that the number would be increased to 16 before the close of navigation.

While, however, these results indicate some progress in the development of traffic by the short and direct route between Western Canada and Europe, the development is not rapid enough to ensure the full benefits which prairie producers and consumers should be reaping from the operation of this great project. If the route is to be of maximum service and benefit to the west, the people of the west, for whose advantage these facilities were devised, must take active steps to promote the use of the service to its greatest possible extent and as speedily as conditions permit

Recently two notable and interested authorities testified almost on the same day that this is not being done: that the people of the prairies are not taking as much interest as they should in speeding up traffic and that, in effect they are apathetic

Said R. S. Dalgleish of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, chairman of the Board of the Dalgleish Shipping Line, which company has operated more boats in and out of Churchill since the inception of the route than any other organization, in an interview: "I do not think that Canada has done enough to develop Churchill and the Hudson Bay route," and added that instead of 14 ships entering Churchill Harbor this season there should have been sixty.

The other authority who expressed similar views was A. L. Lawes, vice-president of the Montreal Shipping Company, who, in an interview after a visit to Churchill, was critical of the apathy "in many places" concerning the development of the northern seaport

Coming from the sources they do, these comments indicate that these facilities are capable of providing much greater service to the people of the prairie provinces than they are now doing, provided the people most vitally interested in the development of the route take the necessary steps to ensure the maximum use of them

As is intimated by another authority, the greatest possible benefits in the way of reduced costs can only be secured by a big volume of business. This is axiomatic in practically all commercial undertakings

Mr. Lawes told the press that the French Louis Dreyfus and Co. line was shipping out five million bushels of wheat this season through the Bay channel and said that ten million bushels was a reasonable objective for 1937, but he gave a specific instance of loss of traffic as a result of failure to furnish commodities which could have been handled had they been available

He reported that the Montreal Shipping Company has ordered the steamship "Brandon" fitted out to handle livestock. "However," he added, "arrangements were not begun in time and no cattle were available for the dates on which the ship could come to port."

It is true that the On-to-the-Bay Association has done much to promote the development of trade via the Hudson Bay route since the railway line and terminal facilities were completed but more aggressive action is required to reduced carrying charges and insurance rates as well as extension of the navigation season, but these efforts must be aided and abetted to the greatest possible extent by governments, business concerns, farmer organizations and individuals, if the most is to be made of the new route.

The Hudson Bay route, like Topsy, must not be allowed to just grow haphazardly, but its development must be guided by constructive effort and alert salesmanship on the part of all citizens of the prairie provinces.

Canada's New Coinage

Reported That New Designs Will Appear On Different Denominations

When Canada's new coinage is issued, one of the coins may display the eyes of western Canadians. It may bear on the reverse side a grain elevator or a similar prairie scene.

Big changes are being planned in the new coins, which will bear the head of King Edward and which are expected to be issued in 1937.

The head of the king, of course, will be facing one side of the coin and will face to the left. But designs for the reverse side are still under consideration and suggestions are being received.

The idea is to abandon the traditional wreath of maple leaves and provide a new and different design for each one of the 1-, 5-, 10- and 25-cent coins.

As a concession to sectional claims and to emphasize the resources and interests in Canada, the designs under consideration are of a wide variety.

One coin will likely show a fishing schooner at sea, and another perhaps another a peak in the Rockies, a third a fish or game subject, and a fourth a grain elevator or some prairie topic.

There is some talk that the 50-cent piece may be an unpopular one —may be discontinued.

The suggested designs will follow but seen upon the recent $1 silver coin, which bears a cance paddled by an Indian and a voyageur.

Other Canadian types have been pictured on Canadian stamps—such as the Bluenose, the peak of the Rockies, a prairie scene of harvesting and others

Latest Surgical Discovery

Tests Will Show Susceptibility To Shock in Operations

A coroner at least of the always dangerous certain of unconsciousness that hides surgical and post-operative shock was lifted by a physician at the American Congress on Physical Therapy. He revealed for the first time that tests could be conducted which tended to prevent prospective death in cases other than emergencies.

Dr. C. Ward Crampton, chairman of the committee of preventive medicine of the New York County Medical Society, discovered that persons whose vasotone efficiency (condition of the blood vessels) was dangerously low nearly always experienced marked decrease in blood pressure when made to stand, and a simultaneous and extreme quickening of the pulse.

Dr. Crampton told the medical man that with charts he had worked out over a long period of years surgeons could tell with the simple tests whether a patient about to be operated upon would develop shock.

"When the readings are low, but immediate surgery is imperative, the surgeon must expect trouble, employ speed, spare trauma and select less severe operative procedure."

Solves Problem Of Growers

X-Ray Used To Determine Quality Of Vegetables

One of Minnesota's vegetable growers' problems—that of ascertaining the quality of their products—has been solved by a University of Minnesota plant physiologist.

R. B. Harvey, of the university farm, has perfected a method by which he can peer into the heart of potatoes and other agricultural products.

He is using the use of an X-ray and a physician's fluoroscope, Harvey can detect those vegetables with hollow hearts and thus rate accurately products by testing samples in large quantities.

Oil Made Good Light

Natives Of Hawaii Used Nuts From Kukui Tree

Hundreds of kukui oil, obtained from the nuts of the kukui, or candlenut, tree, are occasionally used in the manufacture of some kinds of paint in Hawaii, according to a native in Pulp mats. Oil is widely cultivated in Oahu, Hawaii and the Philippines pointed out Hawaiian farmers bring the nuts together on sticks and used them for lighting their houses Hence the name candlenut."

For The Chickens

A maiden demand for lipstick by prim elderly ladies and grim-visaged dames of toil at Ancaster, Ontario, puzzled a merchant so much that he finally inquired of an elderly farmer why he wanted the cosmetic. "To color the combs and wattles of chickens I am showing at county fairs," was the answer.

It is said that hair will stretch one-fourth of its own length.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The true should pour out 1½ pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may just decay in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the blood, and make you sick and the world looks punk.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are a gentle, yet effective aid to make bile flow freely. Get them at any drug store. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 146

Manager Was Nervous

When Miniature Oil Derrick Started Working In Hotel

The U.S. Federal Government set the dry-bed and always be digging for oil in the lobby of the Mayflower hotel in Washington.

The drill bit down toward pay dirt. All the experts of the Bureau of Mines stood around admiring, while a miniature model of a Texas oil well drilled a neat round hole in the middle of an imitation prairie.

Beneath the pitcher-pump mule mud and dirt. Beneath the mud and dirt was a can of oil. Beneath the can was an Oriental rug and beneath the rug was a white marble floor. That explains why the manager was a little apprehensive.

The Bureau of Mines said it was figuring, sort of, on a gusher for the benefit of foreign scientists attending the third world power conference, especially for those in whose native lands gasoline is found only in five-gallon cans. The hotel was asked if the bureau didn't think a gusher might be a little hard on the ceiling?

The bureau's man said how about a teensie-weensie, little gusher, then? It furthermore, the experts said, that what if that drill sliced through the bottom of the can, chewed the rug, bored into the floor and went to work on the machinery in the cellar? The bureau said not to worry, it would turn off the juice in plenty of time.

Also, for the edification of visiting engineers, the bureau installed a glass-modern model of a refinery. In no one end of which you drop a lump of coal and turn on the electricity. Out the other end it has some two-inch balls, oil of jasmine, headache tablets, saccharin, nitric acid, dye and a couple of hundred other products, including steering wheels for automobiles.

The model is over-simplified, the bureau explained, and it doesn't really work, but it does show the amazing things which brains and a ton lot of electricity can extract from a lump of anthracite.

Exhibits concerning science overflowed the hotel and spread all over town. Dr. C. G. Abbot's sun engine, for instance, is power from solar rays and mirrors, was at the Smithsonian Institution.

The government's elevator for salmon, being built into the Bonneville dam in the Pacific Northwest, was modeled at the National Museum. The government's silk stocking tester, which walks and bends its knees.

War Not Glorified

In A Cruel And Wasteful Thing, Says Lord Tweedsmuir

Dimbled returned soldiers know that war is "a cruel and wasteful thing," Baron Tweedsmuir, Canada's governor-general, told the Amputations Association of the Great War in annual convention at Winnipeg.

In a brief address, His Excellency said men who had lost a limb or eyesight "may be perfectly happy and comfortable physically, yet this remainder of the war they must always have with them."

"Such men know," he continued, "that war is not essentially a noble, or heroic, or beautiful thing, but that it is a cruel and wasteful thing. He it is they who say to themselves, 'Please God, it shall not come again.' Thus, the amputations men are in a position to inspire real public feeling about the war."

The governor-general was made a member of the association by Pulp-mats, an Indian who is native to Pulp-mats, and is widely cultivated in Assiniboia, Hawaii and the Philippines pointed out Hawaiian farmers bring the nuts together on sticks and used them for lighting their houses Hence the name candlenut."

Weird Simplify Matters

If Motor Licenses Exchange Is Made Give Wise Establishment

A resolution seeking the co-operation of the Automobile Association of Canada and Royal Automobile Club of Great Britain and the allied automobile clubs of the sister Dominions, in a campaign for the universal establishment of motor licenses exchange throughout the British Empire, was unanimously passed at the 23rd annual general meeting of the Canadian Automobile Association at the National Club in Toronto.

It was asserted that the governmental red tape and customs barriers to trans-frontier motor touring generally exceed those relating to travel between Canada and the United States.

Have More Patience

Really Artistic Pictures Are Usually Taken By Amateurs

Amateur photographers produce more artistic photographs than the professionals, says Alex J. Krupp, who was chairman of the committee in charge of the seventh international salon of photography held in Chicago.

"The reason," Krupp said, "is that after spending hours daily on commercial work, the professional has not the patience of an amateur and cannot prevent a certain amount of commercialism entering the picture."

After Ten-Year Blindness

Young Man Gets Real Thrill When Sight Comes Back

After ten years of total blindness, Ray K. Kendrick of Bondi, Australia, suddenly recovered his sight while shaving.

Kendrick was blinded in a soccer match in 1926 when he was 22 years old and had reconciled himself to the doctors' verdict that he would never see again.

"When I was shaving," he said, "I felt a strange sensation in my eyes. I thought I could see my face in the mirror, but imagination has played some strange tricks on me in the last few years. I rushed out of my room and saw the sky—blue, with white clouds.

"Then I went back to finish my shaving. I dressed by touch in the way I have learned, and then went out into the street. It was all vague, but what I felt could not be described. Buildings I remember having passed across of times. I could see them—and women dressed very differently from ten years ago. I kept nothing things and reading advancements — anything. Then I ran back to the hotel, overjoyed, laughing and crying and kissing everyone. I couldn't help it. It was difficult to focus at first, but I am getting used to it once again. When I want anything, my first impulse is to reach out to touch it rather than look."

Departmental Changes

Reorganization Of Several Federal Departments Announced

Announcement of the reorganization of several departments of government into department of mines and natural resources confirmed forecasts that the deputy minister would be Dr. Charles Camsell, now deputy minister of mines. The department will be divided into five units with a director in immediate charge of each. The directors will be:

Mines and geology: John McLeish, now director of mines and geology branch.

Lands, parks and forests: R. A. Gibson, now assistant deputy minister of interior.

Surveys and engineering: J. M. Wardle, now deputy minister of interior.

Indian affairs: Dr. H. W. McGill, now deputy minister of Indian affairs.

Immigration: F. C. Blair, now assistant deputy minister of immigration.

The salary of the deputy minister will be $10,000 a year, and the directors each $7,500. The reorganization takes effect on June 1, when the act authorizing it will be proclaimed. The department will be under Hon. T. A. Crerar.

MELBERTA MINUTES

Council of M.D. Melberta No. 493 met in the municipal office, Manville, Monday, Sept. 14th, 1936. All the councillors present with Reeve Allanach in the chair.

Minutes of preceding meeting were read and on motion were approved

Correspondence was received as follows Several borrowers of seed grain, writing in to see if the Council would accept part payment letting the balance stand over to next year. This was not allowed The usual communication from the University Hospital asking for municipal accounts. There was nothing done. Also hospital bills for P. Paradeu and M. Symon E. Sy 1934 The Council suggested the per yard Dept Municipal Affairs, calling the attention of the council to damage done to Rural Mutual Telephone Line in some municipalities through grading operations and that the M.D's are responsible for such damages. Advertiser of Tax Recovery, in which he states he had received a complaint from J.B Lesch regarding the sale in the Council of the S.W. 21 50 4 1 to E.P Thompson. He wished to have full particulars of the matter This letter was not followed up by a copy of letter sent to Leahy, in which the Council are holding up approval of the sale pending Leahy's better understanding arrangements to redeem. In the meantime, however, Thompson had not put up the money within the time limit and that in itself held up the sale No notices of admission of patients to the Mannville and Vermilion hospitals.

A petition for a vote on the proposed Stock By-Law in Div 5 and 6 was received. As the time was short up for the open season, the Council deemed it advisable to hold over this vote as it is possible other divisions might petition for closed areas before spring.

The sec. was instructed to mail all the fields conferred on the Council by the Seed Grain Act in the collection of seed grain accounts

A. H Darley appeared before the Council asking for some help in the way of clothes for his family as he was moving back to England and Ireland enough money to buy the boat and clothes This was refused

The Tax Sale was held at 2 o'clock p.m. No parcels were offered. L. Mc Cullum asked for a survey between Secs 25 & 32 50 4 W 4 W 2 which was appointed Fred Reese to do the ensuing six months

A delegation of four or five ratepayers from Div three waited on the Council about having the municipal arrears of taxes worked out This is a new resolution contained in Chapter 3 of the Statutes of 1936 Councillor only division be given the privilege of working municipal arrears so long as taxes about to be working steadily and hard at some important farm task

Provost Wins High School Track Meet

Vermilion High School Tries Out New Athletes

Provost walked off with the high school cup as well as three of the individual trophies at the high school track meet at Lloydminster last Friday. The Provost coach had a ten ler boy and a senior girl who took provincial records in their classes and these outstanding athletes proved to much for the other competitors

The Provost victory came after several tries by athletes from that town and made a break in the cup history as it had previously been won only by Vermilion and Lloydminster

While the local track team did not fare so well they were breaking in an almost entirely new lot of athletes, most of them in the junior grades. This was done with an eye to the future and hopes are held out that in a year or two Vermilion will be back in the foreground and will commence winning the meet championship again.

No individual cups were captured by the local students but Miss Eleanor Dunsmore was runner-up for the junior girls trophy.

INDIVIDUAL CUP WINNERS

Country Elevators AND Grain Marketing

Elevator companies, including the Pools, are members of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and use it in exactly the same manner and for exactly the same reason. They use it because the futures market is the best method that has so far evolved to protect the farmer and to ensure low handling charges. It is not used by either the Pools or the other elevator companies for the purposes of profit.

The Pooling method, which is the only other method which has been tried to date in Canada, cost the west many millions of dollars. It is no longer seriously advocated, even by those who invented it. If in the future any organization, commission or government can evolve a system of marketing Canada's crop which will consistently return a higher net price per bushel at a cent more than he obtains through the present methods, the line elevator companies will be the first to welcome and adopt such a system. At the present time all elevator companies (including the Pools' market grain in exactly the same way and there is the best and cheapest way which has yet been devised

Fair competition is the farmers' safeguard

Propaganda by the Pools, through the Western Producer, country newspapers and field meetings, attacking the elevator companies because of marketing methods which the Pools themselves adopt, is untrue and hypocritical and merely designed to blacken the competition which is the farmers' best protection

Nice Clean Coal

Can Be Handled Without Smudging Hands Or Clothes

Coal cobes—"you can feed the furnace with them in your dinner clothes"—were put on the fuel market in Chicago.

The cubes were so clean, salesmen boasted at the American coal week exposition that

Snow white trucks delivered them.

White liveried drivers carried them into the house

Husbands tossed them into the furnace without smudging their clothes, or even their hands.

They were piled up beside the fireplace in the living room, and used instead of logs.

The secret of it all was that the cubes were wrapped in heavy paper

Made of fine coal known to coal men as "percolags" or "slack" mixed with water and glucose binder, the cubes were pressed into shape just as sugar cubes are

Each package held six 3½-inch cubes and weighed 10 pounds By the ton, the cubed coal cost slightly less than coke or anthracite, slightly more than other kinds of bituminous coal

More Demand For Hay

We have noticed several references in the past few days to the poor hay crop in many rural areas of Great Britain due to an excess of rainfall. Canadian exports of hay to the United Kingdom last year totalled 20,231 tons, being the largest quantity sent during the past six years. Indications are that these figures will be surpassed in the current year at more attractive prices to the farmer.

Raw Asbestos Found

Deposits Discovered Near New Gold Fields in Ontario

Deposits of raw asbestos have been found north and south of the gold fields recently discovered 11 miles north of Arden, Ont., it was learned

This tiny village of 350 population continued to attract mining men and prospectors from widely separated sections of Canada, and the United States as all reports tended to confirm the optimistic expressions of the local residents as to the richness of the new gold fields. The gold vein has been traced east and west straight through the bush country, and excitement about three and one-half miles to the north, according to reports.

Staking of claims continued over a wide area adjoining the actual vein, first discovered last June by T. J Alexander and Marvin Newton, local men. They have sold their claims to Hollinger interests. They reportedly received $75,000. Hollinger engineers also have secured much additional property in the district. Representatives of all other leading Canadian mining companies are on the ground staking up options and buying outright from prospectors willing to sell

Bald Headed

Bald headed men may be interested to know that the common fly has color preferences. It distinguishes red, cannot endure prussian blue, and prefers orange and white. Primrose paint should be fashionable during the fly season.

Leopard

The leopard is practically the only foe the gorilla fears. The latter sleeps at the foot of a tree in guard his family against this solitary enemy.

BRIDE-ELECT FETED

Miss Edith Williamson a bride of one of this month was the guest of honor at a shower held at the Rectory of St. Saviour's on Thursday at which a large number of guests spent a most enjoyable evening.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Germans involved in automobile accidents hereafter will be submitted to a special board test previous to being or not allowed the automatic, if the driver is accounted

Extensive drives and equipment costing $6,750,000 will be made this fall in connection with the United Kingdom's government to explore harvests.

During July 65 persons were killed in highway accidents in Ontario the Ontario highways department reported. The figure was the highest in any July since 1929

Provincial relief inspectors checking a plan from Riverside, Essex county, for more provincial help "found 22 resident projects driving their own cars. Hon. David Croll, minister of public welfare, said

Western Canada's wheat crop this year is one of the highest in quality it has ever had in a report of James D Fraser, chief grain inspector, to the annual meeting of the grain standards board here

A decline of $45,000,000 in total cash income of United States farmers from August to August, with cash income usually increases was reported by the agriculture department

Declaring baby shows cause jealousy and unhappiness the Mothers and Infants Association at Croydon, England, declined to act on a reception committee at a national baby show in Romford

Bridge officials in United States cities from coast to coast transmitted law enforcement agencies had made close to 1,000 arrests and seized several hundred illicit stills in a drive against narcotic and liquor law violators

Land Salvaged in India

Forty Million Acres Reclaimed By British In Fifty Years

British India leads the world in territory that has been reclaimed or irrigated during the last fifty years, according to the latest report of the Central Irrigation Board of India just published at India Office, London. The total of desert land irrigated and swamp and marsh reclaimed now borders on 40,000,000 acres, 31,000,000 of which is are in British India.

The second country for the amount of land reclaimed in ten years is Italy, with just under 6,000,000 acres. In India the land reclaimed also amounts to 7,000,000 acres, the balance laid down to cultivation has been irrigated

When the present projects in India shall be completed 50,000,000 acres of land will have been irrigated, today what has been done furnishes work for just that number of people who own or work crops which give forth $375 worth of produce per year—palls rice and beet—but the quantity of water used daily is about 20,000,000 gallons extracted from over 5,000 miles of canals and distributed by over 90 great dams and hundreds of smaller ones.

Clear Of Debt

British Columbia Town Celebrates By Burning Paid Off Bonds

A little pile of ashes was all that remained of Ladysmith's $94,250 bonded debt When real estate there closed six years ago, the town appeared doomed. Citizens, facing ruin, met to discuss ways and the establishment of a new industry. Mr. Hedges, chairman of the meeting, was a small farmer, and suggested the site where the town hall was erected as if to symbolize the passing of the old order.

A town committee bought the land, leased it to industry, and the city has paid off the debt. Recently the council ordered the mortgage to be burned in a huge bonfire.

Closed Season For Squirrels

All shooting or trapping of red squirrels in Ontario is prohibited by law, but the open season for grey squirrels is now in force. There is a closing season for all squirrels in Algonquin park, Ontario, and in the game preserves adjoining the park. Algonquin comprises 1,000,000 acres, and is the largest game preserve in Ontario. Large numbers of moose, deer and bear are found in the park, and the open season for these animals does not apply to it.

Complains Long Trip

Marchioness Of Reading Visited United States And Canada

The Marchioness of Reading has returned to England after completing a 10,000-mile transcontinental motor tour, she said.

Traveling with only one companion and a chauffeur in order to study the people of Canada and the United States at first hand, Lady Reading said she was impressed by their vitality and friendliness, especially the young.

"One of the things that particularly struck me in every city and small town I have visited," she said, "has been the talent and super wealth that lies in the youth of the country. Their virility, enterprise and determination, their energetic attack of a job and their large-viewed vision of the future are very stimulating and thrilling to watch."

Lady Reading whose husband died last December, arrived at New York in May. After visiting friends, attending the two political conventions and being a guest of President and Mrs D Fraser, chief grain inspector, to the annual meeting of the grain standards board here

Made Himself Popular

Berlin's Chief Officer Stopped Tooting Of Horns

For once the chief of police in Berlin is popular. His plan of making noisy automobile drivers has brought peace. He ruled that anyone tooting his horn too loud or too frequently must have his car painted with a large yellow spot. After a week he received the decoration from others became quiet, and peace reigned in the city which not long ago was called one of the noisiest in Europe.

Commodore Gooderham, of Toronto, urges car drivers to take up sailing to learn courtesy, but that's just the trouble. Too many motorists already know how to sail along the highways too fast

Crochet an Afghan Square by Square

PATTERN 5560

A soft warm afghan practically a necessity when one lies down for a nap—and here's one that uses up bits of leftover wool in a most delightful way. Use as many colors as you like—the more the merrier! There's a stunning effect obtained. Crochet the blocks in the manner of Illustration—then and use up scraps of wool. Make a pillow to match, if you like. Pattern 5560 will tell directions for making the afghan as shown; illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements and color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern, send 20 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to Household Arts Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave., E. Winnipeg.

Trivision Principle Shows Depth And Cost Is Low

A picture of an old man in his shirt sleeves glittered in natural color on the desk of Douglas F. Winnek, 29-year-old Madison, Wis. photographic engineer. The picture seemed to be a frame through which one was looking at a live human being.

Suddenly Winnek picked it up, and the man in the picture seemed to move. An observer could see around the man and look at the scenery in the background. The likeness was round and full and the 3-by-10 photograph had actual depth. Winnek laughed and explained:

This is the first 'trivision' photograph having three dimensions ever made."

Winnek demonstrated a series of trivision" photographs, saying he expects the principle to revolutionize motion pictures, photography, Roentgenology, television and graphic printing.

The technique employed use of cellulose acetate plates embossed with light ridges to the back—will enable each of these fields to adopt pictures showing depth just as realistically as the actual live scene. Winnek said the new process is simply a method of presenting two pictures to the eye.

This is accomplished through giving the negative of the film. These grooves are so minute as to be invisible, and the secret of the entire process. Each groove serves as a tiny lens which breaks the single image into two parts. The completed negative becomes then a mass of tiny two-section pictures.

The negative is developed on cellulose acetate plates, also grooved. These grooves retain the panoramic pictures When seen from any angle the apparently smooth stereoscopic or print, resolves itself into a separate picture for each eye, and presents a clear, soft, rounded view.

Winnek displayed a picture of fruit in a display window The scene was in full natural color Each piece of fruit was outlined in depth and a view from a different angle rapidly and another view resulted II. The picture was ordinary size, 8 by 10 inches.

Protege Of The Queen

Young Orphan Boy Will Receive A Scholarship Sponsored

Queen Mary presented for admission to the Royal Infant Orphanage, Wanstead, a two-and-a-half-year-old orphan boy who will be educated there and receive a secondary education until he is 16. He is Brian Wilfred Frank Roberts, whose father, a chief steward on the Orient liner boat, the Otranto, died last year. His mother died at the age of 30.

An official of the orphanage explained Queen Mary had the right of nomination to the institution of two children, so that there is always a protege of hers at the orphanage.

"You my Jake takes everything literally."

"Yes, he was invited to a house-warming party and he took along some kindling and a box of matches."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour one to two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. Then gases pile up, your stomach is sour, you belch and a dull, sluggish feeling makes you mope around. Nothing you eat seems to digest right, and you feel as though the whole world were against you.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well as the bowels. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does just that. Its action is gentle, yet thorough. Harmless, too, as it is made from herbs. They do the work Nature intended fruit to do—relieve constipation. Try Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Syrup Pepsin for a change! Thoroughly refuse anything else. Sold

BECOMING A CHRISTIAN

Golden text: Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved. Acts 16:31.

Lesson: Acts 16:16-40; Philippians 3:7-14.

Devotional reading: II. Corinthians 1:3-10.

Explanations And Comments

The Second Convert to Christianity is Philippi, Acts 16:16-18. At Philippi Paul was greatly disturbed by a fortune-telling maid who kept following him and Silas and crying out, "These men are servants of the Most High God, who proclaim unto you the way of salvation."

The girl's re-iterated chant drew a crowd of curiously seekers. Paul turned to her one day and in the name of Jesus Christ bade the spirit leave her, and she became wholly normal. Nothing further is said about this girl whose story arouses our sympathy.

"The owners of the slave girl with the abnormal mind had a very definite sense of commercial value. They did not have much sense of human value. When the insane girl was cured they were furiously angry. They got from her a new master's thought to the fact that she was saved in a normal life." They did not think of the fact that while they could commercialize her insanity, her sanity had no commercial value at all. So they began to stir up a mob against Paul and Silas" (Lyon II. Hough).

The crowd clamored for the punishment of the two Jews, and the magistrates, without investigating, had investigate the charges, ordered Paul and Silas stripped and beaten.

Paul and Silas were then handed over to a jailer who put them in the inner prison, which may have been underground, and fastened their feet in the stocks.

The Triumphant Release, Acts 16:25, 26. Their backs were lacerated by the blows received, and they were held in an uncomfortable cramped position, but, as Tertullian says, "their hope in the stocks fastened them not whose souls were in heaven." At midnight Paul and Silas were praying and singing hymns, and the other prisoners were listening to them.

At midnight their bonds were burst asunder and the doors of the prison were flung wide open by an earthquake which shook the old Roman jail to its foundation. The terrified jailer, who thought his prisoners had escaped, drew his sword and was making ready for him to do but kill himself, was reassured by the calm words of Paul "Do thyself no harm for we are all here." And he called for lights and sprang in, and, trembling for fear, fell down before Paul and Silas, and brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house. And they spake the word of the Lord unto him, with all that were in his house. And he took them the same hour of the night, and washed their stripes, and was baptized

Paul's Good, and How He Won It, Philippians 3:10-14. "I count all things to be loss, that I may gain Christ, so that I may know him and the power of his resurrection," cries Paul.

Carrying War Orders

Army-Age Nazis Know Where To Report If Needed

Millions of Germans between the ages of 35 and 45 are carrying in their pockets an order telling them exactly when and where they must report in the event of war.

This "big-game hunt" in order to take part in war, as it is headed is causing admitted anxiety, especially among the older men who themselves experienced the horrors of the Great War.

Outwardly they display enthusiasm, but in private, confidential conversations their beliefs are often quite different.

With German exactness the order specifies even the barracks in which the recipient is to report, what he is to bring and how he is to be clothing, what he is to do in case he meanwhile changes his residence, etc.

The order in a blue sheet of paper eight by five inches. Written crosswise on the back are the words: "This order serves in lieu of a ticket on the railways to the point where the recipient must report."

Regulations accompanying the order state that failure to live up to the letter of the kriegsbevorerung will be punished by martial law

"The person thus summoned is subject to martial law from the first day of its becoming effective"

Practice Has Been Stopped

Philippine Jail Prisoners Not Allowed To Test At Hanoi

Prisoners in the provincial jails of the Philippine islands may no longer return to their homes, unescorted, to visit their sweet and to sleep.

Elpidio Quirino, secretary of the interior, has returned from a tour of the provinces convinced that this "illegal and bad practice" must be discontinued forthwith

Quirino's order for releasing the prisoners to take their meals at home was that the government thus avoided the cost of feeding them.

In the past, minor offenders in many prisons were permitted to go home from time to time a day for their meals. Many of them were released every night so that they could sleep at home Few tried to escape

A Good Advertisement

Smith noticed a shilling on the floor of a big store. After glancing cautiously around to see that no one was looking he took out his handkerchief and dipped it on top of the coin. He then picked up the handkerchief but the coin stuck firmly to the floor. He stood up hastily as he heard a shop assistant approached him.

Henceforth, in Montreal anyone who blows an auto horn between midnight and four a.m. will be liable to a fine of $40 and costs or one month in jail. This will be apt to take the enthusiasm out of the tooters.

As their eyes met she had a presentiment that she and this haughty representative of the aristocracy or old New York were fated to clash more than once. Thinly veiled antagonism clashed between them, all that was left to be settled was the time and the battle ground. Nothing further was said about this girl whose story arouses our sympathy.

IN BED FOR WEEKS WITH BACKACHE

Quick Relief With Kruschen

It was advice from her mother that led this woman to take Kruschen Salts for her backache, and before she had finished the first bottle she was feeling better. This is the letter she writes:

"About this time last year I had severe pains in my back and was practically laid up for three weeks. I could not even rise in bed. I tried several well-known remedies but to no avail. Then I wrote to my mother telling her of my trouble. She wrote to me by return, and told me to try Kruschen Salts. I immediately bought a bottle and I can truthfully say before I had taken the fifth dose I could get up. I kept on taking them and in less than two weeks I was about again. I am never without Kruschen now."—(Mrs) A.G.

Under the kidneys function properly, certain acid wastes, instead of being expelled, are allowed to pollute the blood-stream and produce troublesome symptoms: backache, rheumatism, and sometimes Bright's disease. Salts is an excellent diuretic or kidney flushing agent, helps by assisting the kidneys to excrete acid impurities.

eyes of a good many New Yorkers who still cling to such outmoded ideas of chivalry, as far as the honor and chastity of women are concerned, he is probably the most dangerous man in New York!"

Starr felt a little tingle of excitement when the man whom Michael had so sketchily characterised spoke to her. It was a pleasant surprise that she answered his greeting. And then her reply was in keeping with the lady she was supposed to be.

She drawled, with a slow smile, as her long eyes lifted to him lazily:

"Perhaps I don't believe in meeting up the best for the last."

Lance suggested: "Or perhaps he is not unaware of Romeo's presence," and conventionally begun is always all the more thrilling."

Starr laughed, and Lanced hurried on, his black eyes burning down at her: "Now that we have met, am I not going to have the opportunity of being able to tell and almost yourself—"

Starr's face suffered demurely, then she lifted them for the scandalized fraction of a second to my:

"There's nothing left to tell about me that you haven't already learned, I know, . . . I might begin at the beginning, though, and tell you I'm an Irish—But Mike's no clever."

"Adorable" whispered Lance, his voice husky. "Will you dance with me?"

Starr held up her arms and they glided into a dance He was pleasantly aware that all the men in the room and when the music died from a waltz into the haunting throb of a fox trot, and then into the still more lilting music holding in its depths the suggestion of the emotional pleasing that was to follow, they were the cynosure and palms inside rosy waxlike eyes and sensitive mouths with clear-eyed sensitive mouths with clear-eyed sensitive mouths with clear-eyed

In an interview granted to the Standard on Monday last Hon. Ross Minister of Lands and Mines has announced [illegible] a reduction in the interest rate from farm purchasers [illegible] Mr. Ross made it clear that the reduction on the under mentioned contracts from six (6%) per cent to four (4%) per cent and [illegible] on arrears from (7%) per cent to four (4%) per cent.

Mr. Ross stated that the most outstanding part of the proclamation dealt with the assistance that will be given to purchasers who bought at the peak of prices and who find [illegible]

[illegible] to comply with the terms of their contract [illegible] will have the right [illegible] application to the Registrar of Land Titles [illegible] arrangement for a compromise and the latter stipulated that the deposit [illegible] within such contract but [illegible] by the purchaser should be returned to the settler to take advantage of the legislation.

Those who have been cancelled since September 30th 1935 may be reinstated if the land is available, and purchasers will have the same privilege to bring their taxes [illegible] Beg at or for a compromise or adjustment on the terms of the new [illegible]

The minister pointed out that this action is consistent with the stand taken by the government at the recent session in dealing with the [illegible] and settlement of mutual [illegible] These settlers wishing to obtain advantage of these concessions would, he stated be well advised to [illegible] early as [illegible] that they secure the full benefit now offered by these amendments.

ELTHAM EDITION

Mrs. [illegible] announced the [illegible] that autumn progress [illegible] Quite a few new hats have been drawn to our attention. What a pity fashion designers [illegible] the hole a real autumn shade in their latest colors! We could find it in our hearts to buy a different hat for each day of true fall if this could be done.

The bowlite gas away to a big start in dances on Friday Sept 25th, [illegible] Dance [illegible] from Kitscoty report a very good time. Another one on Friday, Oct. 2, at Sallows with a fine one [illegible]

Eltham Junior [illegible] have an [illegible] they will open proceedings [illegible] with a dance in the [illegible] Hall. [illegible] proceeds for those [illegible] to the Christmas Tree fund and your help will be appreciated [illegible] Eltham on the 16th [illegible]

OBITARY

EVAN M. WEBB

The interment of Evan H Webb Priest at the Church of England in Canada, erstwhile Vicar of Mannville and in later years Priest in Charge of St Alban Chalky, took place at St. Albans church on Wednesday afternoon October 7th. The service was read by the Rev. F.C. Lindsay Vicar of Mannville assisted by the Rev. Canon Levenadge, after the Committal prayers the Mannville Lodge A F and A M carried out the approprate rites of Masonry under the direction of the deceased Clergyman was a member.

A large gathering of the friends of the deceased and his family were present and reverently took part in the service and the floral tributes were many and beautiful.

Mr. Webb was one of the pioneer priests in the Mannville district having served here on three occasions and had endeared himself to his people by his kindliness and unselfish ever-ready help. He came to Canada a month or two before the outbreak of the great war and

Reeve for 14 Years Gilbert Shane Resigns

ON COUNCIL SINCE 1921

A meeting of the Council of M.D. Grizzly Bear was held in the municipal office Wildmere, on Saturday, Oct. 3rd, 1936. All Councillors present with Reeve Shane in the chair at 10.45 a.m. Minutes of the previous meeting, and financial statement for September were read, and on motion approved. Jos. Davidson made enquiries as to any unsold houses in the district he could move his family into. G.W. Freeman with respect to seed grain seizure and road work he should have had in '32. Mr. Cecil Gannon also visited on the council with respect to taxes. Report of investigation by Cr Whitney of W.H. Evans case was accepted and Evans recommended for relief. It was agreed that Nov 1st be set as roll and tax payment and seed grain assistance. Sec. to notify all ratepayers not already paid up to that effect. Applications for old age pensions were received from Mrs. C. Nicholls and Mr T. Cairns. Council recommended that per month in each case. Agreed that all delegates be present at the Annual Municipal Convention to be held at Calgary this year. Cr. Roy Freeman and F.J. Nash appointed. Agreed to lease the N.W. 32-49-6 to Louis Geigle for one third share of crop, with grain to buy, and in the case of sale to another party, the M.D. to pay him $2.00 an acre for summerfallow. Mr. Otto Lindlord waited on Council with respect to Edward Green, who has been an inmate of the Rodney School Home, and it was agreed that the expense or any long sickness or major operation be borne by the M.D. while the boy is under 21 with him. The following correspondence was received:- Woods, Field Crain and Hyndman re University hospital re Dempsey Hrebenuk; Hon. W.A. Fallow, Min. public works advising that the govt. has been obliged to cut down the relief and like programs but that if a further issue of Prosperity Bonds is decided upon later, Alberta would receive the same consideration as others. From Vermilion Hospital board that they have no authority to make arrangements for certain cases in other hospitals, for treatment of ratepayers who require the service of a such special kind.

Councillor G. B. Shane tendered his resignation as Reeve, same not to be accepted until a new appointment has been made. Mr. Shane has been a member of the Council since 1921 and was appointed Reeve in 1923 which post he has capably held since. Members of the Council expressed regret on his near departure for Ontario, and wished him every success for the future.

Road work sheets amounting to $461.85 were passed. Meeting adjourned 5.15 p.m.

News from Islay

The four town school track meet between Islay, Kitscoty, Dewberry and Marwayne held on Kitscoty Sat. Oct. 3 was favored with ideal weather for the event and some good competition was witnessed.

In total points Kitscoty was first, Marwayne second, Islay third and Dewberry fourth Kitscoty was awarded the Island Aggregate cup and carried off two of the individual cups, Marwayne carried off the other two individual cups. These cups will be on display in Islay at a future date and we hope high hopes of some of them residing here in 1937.

Islay's athletes had not the expert care or training of their rivals and under the circumstances put up a very creditable showing. Ribbons were awarded as follows.— 2nd in 100 and 220 yards to Laurence Gould, 1st in 220, 2nd in running broad jump and 2nd in high jump, Harold McClelland, and Bob Baxter took 3rd in the two yards and 2nd in hop, step and jump. Girls were successful in the following events Thelma Mc Neilly 2nd in 100 and 220, Mary Hutchinson 3rd in 220 and the All together a creditable showing and one that will certainly be improved upon.

ROYAL MONTREAL REGIMENT TO ERECT MEMORIAL TABLET

A committee of past commanding officers and others of the Royal Montreal Regiment, have undertaken the erection of a memorial tablet, to the officers and men of the regiment who gave their lives in his service during the Great War.

The tablet will be of Bronze and will have a receptacle in its base for a Book of Memory in which will be inscribed on parchment the names of all those to whom the tablet is dedicated. Embodied in the design will be the crests of the 14th Battalion, the Royal Montreal Regiment, the 23rd Reserve Battalion and the 24th Westmount Rifles.

The tablet will be erected within the regiment's armoury, which was also erected and dedicated as a memorial to those who made the supreme sacrifice. The unveiling of the memorial tablet will take place on Sunday, November 8th. this year, follow ing a reunion of the regiment on November 7th.

In order that ex members of the Royal Montreal Regiment, now scattered throughout Canada, may have an opportunity to participate in the erection of the memorial to their fallen comrades, a subscription list is now open. Contributions should be sent to the Honorary Treasurer, Capt. W.A. Foster, P.O. Box 252, Station B. Montreal

THERE ARE DIFFERENCES

Is there any difference between Pool elevators and line elevators, you ask? The answer is to grasp that both are the same, but there are several essential differences

1. Alberta Pool Elevators are the property of 43,000 Alberta grain producers. They are built for service and not for profit. This is not the case with line elevator companies

2. The finances and operations of Pool elevators are on open book. Each year they are scrutinized by recently delegates who are representatives of the producers. The detailed operations of the whole system and of each and every Pool elevator are thus obtainable from elected delegates. Is there any line elevator company who will provide customers with such information?

3. The Pools own the terminal exchange. But this does not imply an idolatrous attitude towards that organization The Pools believe that the demonstrated weaknesses of the speculative system during the depression had a serious reflection on the cottage of agriculture and that a national wheat board would have offered greater protection. The line elevator companies are not in favour of a national wheat board and never met John I. McFarland who conducted exhaustive inquiries on this subject for two years, 1931-32. Said "Theoretically the open futures system is an ideal system for the handling of wheat, if it works, but when it fails to function as it has failed because of the control exercised over supply and demand of speculators to carry the hedges then my sympathy leans distinctly towards the producer and his protection"

4. The Pools believe the Canadian wheat producers should be given assistance and protection to as great a degree at least as other interests in Canada. The contention that agriculture is Canada's most important industry and cannot be neglected The grain trade on the other hand, continually campaigned for marketing Canada's wheat at "world prices."

5. The grain trade say that the Pool's operations cost millions. That is a pure fabrication. Under the McFarland stabilization operations Canadian farmers produced, and marketed the bumper crops of wheat crops totalling more than one billion bushels, and Canadian prairie wages maintained at a substantially higher level than those of competing countries. For months the Canadian premiums ran as high as 20c a bushel over prices of competitive wheat.

6. The Pools believe that agriculture needs an aggressive co-operative organization presenting its interests and reflecting the expressed wishes of producers and not subservient to vested interest. The line elevator companies ARE vested interests.

7. The line elevator companies resist being designated as a "family compact" but the very advertisement denying this relation ship was a proof after and beyond any shadow of disagreement.

Farewell To Mr. and Mrs. A. Hartley

A jolly crowd assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Bruce on Saturday night Sept. 26 to bid farewell to Mr and Mrs. A.H. Hartley, who left this district en route to their old home in Yorkshire England on Sunday. Mr. and Mrs Hartley came to Canada under the H. B. Co settlement scheme and were placed on a farm in the Chatsworth district in 1929. Here he tried his best to make a living but like many settlers he could not eke out an existence and fortunately was offered something better in his old home town Mr Hartley was an ardent worker for the A.S.A. and will be greatly missed by that body. Among those present were Mr and Mrs Wm. Boyd, Mr. and Mrs W. Hawkes, Mr. and Mrs. G. Martin Mr. and Mrs. W. Twyning, Mr. Ted Rasbrey, George Neatman, Miss Vera Neatman, Miss Connie Hawkes R. Payne. In the absence of the president of the A.S.A. Mr Payne, Mr George Martin was called upon to make a presentation on behalf of the A.S.A., and a few friends. The speaker paid tribute to the work of Mr. Hartley in connection with the Association, and the departing citizens have been presented with a fountain pen and pencil set. Mrs. Hartley was given a burnt leather cushion and set and book cover. Mr. Hartley was also the recipient of a smoking set, the gift of his closest friend, George Neatman, who also presented Mrs Hartley with a suitable gift. The party broke up with the break of day, after singing "Auld Lang Syne" and the best of wishes of all friends for a pleasant journey

Education And The Teacher

Few people look upon periods of depression such as Western Canada has experienced in the past few years along with most of the other countries of the world as carrying degrees with complacency. On the contrary here as elsewhere, such experiences are usually regarded by the great majority as periods of unalleviated evil with dissatisfaction and unrest their inevitable concomitants.

It is not many years since conditions in surrounding everything with a hazed gloom. Everything a wrong at home and abroad. Words and deeds are subjected to criticism in an anxious search for microscopic flaws and motives are probed with deep underlying suspicion. Altruism and faith in fellow mankind almost appear to have gone into hibernation and the whole stream of life seems to be ruffled with turbidity. Criticism is the order of the day.

Criticism of the right type and with the proper motive behind it has, of course, its place in the scheme of things. In fact, without it, there could be little if any progress, but if it is to fill its appointed role in life, it must have behind it a sincere desire to promote betterment and must be dictated by reason rather than swayed by blind passion.

The educational systems and educational methods in operation in the prairie provinces are among the many things which have had to run the gamut of the critical vogue of the period. The criticism which has, in recent years, been voiced freely at conventions, school board sessions, public meetings and during election campaigns in the home and on the street comes not only from parents of children attending educational institutions and the general public but also from educational authorities, teachers and others trained in the craft of pedagogy.

Few bears on the one hand, that the educational system is too expensive and too extravagant. On the other hand, governments and trustees are accused of parsimony. One day the people are told that, in effect, the educational system and set-up is lagging behind the times and the following day, that it is too far advanced for the requirements of present day social conditions and requirements.

As to methods, curricula, equipment and text books, criticisms are legion and varied, as much so, in fact, that it won't take a ponderous tome to even list them.

While it may be very difficult, and perhaps impossible to crystalize all these opinions and criticisms into some co-ordinate form which might enable them to be attacked and dealt with on a scientific basis, the existence of so much discussion on such an important topic demonstrates, at least, that the depression is having the beneficial effect of arousing a keener interest in a topic of vital interest to the future welfare of the country, because it cannot be denied that the trend of education of the youth of today will largely determine the destiny of the nation tomorrow.

Because of this it is highly important that there should be some utilization of majority opinion on educational systems, methods and trends.

There are one or two things which should not be lost sight of in this welter of discussion which often, unfortunately, ranges around comparatively trivial details. That is, the main purposes of educational systems, which might briefly be enunciated as the intention of developing a desirable type of citizen and of developing a citizen capable of fitting himself or herself into the life of the community.

The means the development of a race of people with character and ability to think and act for themselves. If this is borne in mind as the chief objective of education, the great importance of the character and ability of the teacher becomes immediately apparent, a matter of even greater importance than the method the text book or the curriculum, of even greater importance than the type of building in which instruction is carried on or the equipment that is used in imparting information.

The statement is not made with any intention of conveying an impression that the school's of the west are not staffed with teachers of character and capacity. On the contrary, the standard of the teaching profession has improved very materially and rapidly for so young a country as the Canadian west and teachers of the present day generally represent a high standard.

But it should be pointed out that if more emphasis is laid on the character and ability of the teacher as an essential of the first importance, the controversial issues, many other phases of the educational system would assume their rightful comparative values and would be relegated to the rear as questions of more or less minor consequence.

Replicas Of Crown Jewels

Collection Represents Forty Years' Hobby Of One Man

There will shortly be on view in London a collection of about 2,000 full-scale replicas of Crown jewels, regalia, insignia, and other emblems of royal ceremonial which have cost their owner nearly £30,000

The collection covers most of the past and present monarchies of Europe and represents the 40 years' hobby of one man and includes gallery work by jewellers, stone-cutters, polishers, and other highly skilled craftsmen. Naturally the British Crown jewels hold pride of place. They go back to the crown of Alfred the Great (circa 871) and embrace the crowns, sceptres, and orbs of 30 Kings and Queens since that time. Every example is as near a perfect reflection of the original as is possible except, of course, the diamonds, rubies, pearls, and other precious stones, which are represented by brilliants and synthetic stones.

Each is an absolute copy for size, shape, colouring and design, and the polish and so meticulous has been the effort to achieve historical accuracy that the owner of this collection has literally spent months in the Tower and the London museums making sketches and taking photographs and measurements.

In olden days each King and Queen had a new set of Coronation jewels. Most of these were destroyed in the Commonwealth days, and in more modern times Governments have been content to borrow being altered to suit successive monarchs

Search For Gold In England

King Of Dowsers Arrives In London

Armed with a small silver divining rod, and clad in a picturesque uniform of blue, Dr. Emerson Greg, "King of Dowsers" arrived in London from Vienna at search for gold and oil in England

Interested parties, he says, have invited him to take part in the hunt for oil in the south of England, and he will undertake a lecture tour, his engagements including an address to the Royal Geographical Society.

Drawing his rod from an inside pocket of his coat, Dr. Herzog gave a demonstration. He stood over a cup of water the rod pointed its sprung tip downward.

The rod is not his only apparatus. He has with him 27 different types of dowsing machines for divining the presence of different mineral deposits.

Dr. Herzog, 76, has 49 years' experience of dowsing. He claims the discovery of important deposits of copper, gold, beryllium and platinum in Austria and himself owns gold, silver and lead mines revealed by his own rod.

Dr. Herzog came over to England by air and says that while the aeroplane was travelling between the coast and Croydon he recorded oil and gold deposits.

SAND TARTS

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1¾ cups flour
2 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder
White of one egg
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
Blanched almonds

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and well beaten egg, then flour which has been sifted with baking powder, "chill" dough. Put half the mixture on floured board and roll one-eighth inch thick; cut with doughnut cutter; brush over with white of egg and sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon which have been mixed together; split almonds and arrange on top, three halves at equal distance Place on buttered sheet, bake in 10 minutes in a slow oven When baked the tarts should be a very delicate brown.

Disliked Travel By Air

Racing Greyhound Leaped 2,000 Feet To Its Death

After biting its way through the fabric of an aeroplane during a trip from Brisbane to Sydney a racing greyhound leaped 2 000 feet to its death The dog had been placed in a wicker crate in the baggage compartment at the rear of the passenger cabin, and apparently became excited at air travel It escaped from the crate and then started the task of tearing its way through the fabric. It eventually succeeded for when the air liner arrived at the Sydney airport, the greyhound was missing and the fabric was torn.

Japan Buys Canadian Ship

Merchant Marine Freighter Has Been Used Five Times

Apparently under permanent ownership at last, the former Canadian government merchant marine freighter, Canadian Leader, sailed from Halifax with a Japanese crew for the West Indies to pick up a cargo of scrap iron consigned to Japan

Since her sale along with nine other government steamships last winter to the Montreal-Australia-New Zealand line, the Canadian Leader has had a checkered career. She was sold by the Ansaz line to the British Tower Steamship Company, resold to Rethymnis and Kulukundis, Greek shipping company, and finally bought by Japanese interests at a price reported to be $82,500. It was also reported Japanese interests had bought the Canadian Victor, now in England, and the Canadian Britain at Montreal.

Reviving Their Manners

Japs Studying Proper Greeting For Next Olympic Visitors

Foreigners who attend the Olympic games at Tokyo in 1940 will be spared the embarrassment of having their Japanese salutation, "How old are you?"

Police are passing the word around that the henceforth proper greeting from the Japanese viewpoint—is distasteful to foreigners, especially women.

Although the Olympiad is three and a half years ahead, Japanese are already getting ready. Study of English has been given a great impetus among store clerks, policemen and businessmen. Early concern for the morals of Japanese girls is being dissipated.

For Coronation Day

State Coach Of Speaker Of The House Being Reconditioned

The state coach of the speaker of the House of Commons is being furbished up for the coronation.

Its last appearance was at King George's jubilee, when the speaker rode in it to St. Paul's. At King George's coronation in 1911 it merely conveyed the speaker from the House of Commons to the abbey, a distance of less than 200 yards.

Oddly enough while the coach, with harness and stablings, is provided by the state, the speaker has to arrange himself for horses. For nearly a century Whitebread's brewery has had this privilege, which dates from the time when Mr. Speaker Shaw-Lefevre married a Whitebread. The coach weighs nearly 3½ tons, and having no brakes cannot go down hill.

How Their Patriotism

Thousands Of Families Change Swedish Names To Finnish To Show Their Patriotism

Thirty thousand families have officially changed their Swedish surnames to more Finnish-sounding ones. This wave of patriotism followed the example of 25,000 families who did the same at the recent Kalevala (national epic) centenary celebrations. Considerable confusion has resulted from this sudden change, states a message from Helsingfors. Postmen, particularly, are finding it a problem to deliver letters to the right persons, correspondents have to think twice when they address business and personal friends.

A Brand New Industry

Calling Elk For Photographers In Job Of Banff Guide

Banff has a brand new industry which was invented by Lee Saunders, of Bowden, north of Calgary, who is a trail guide there in the summer. On long pony trail trips he amused guests at the Banff Springs Hotel by imitating the peculiar mating call of the elk. It was not long until he found bull elk answering him, and finally approaching near to investigate. He is now busily calling elk from the woods for enthusiastic photographers.

BRITAIN WILL NOT DISCUSS THE MANDATE ISSUE

Margate, Kent.—The Conservative party opened its annual conference at this seaside resort, heard a strong speech on defence questions by Sir Samuel Hoare, administered a rebuff to the government on the mandates question, and urged an imperial tariff conference on all agricultural produce.

The conference showed itself entirely out of sympathy with the government's refusal to pledge itself definitely not to discuss the question of the possible transfer of British mandated territories, and defeated an amendment which expressed the official attitude.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, attempted unsuccessfully to rally the delegates to the official view, after declaring in his speech to the conference that the British government itself had no intention of raising the question.

Duncan Sanys, son-in-law of Winston Churchill, introduced the mandates resolution, which was carried amid cheers. It read: "This government "in order to dispel grave anxieties within the Empire and dangerous unrest abroad, give assurance that the declaration made by the then foreign secretary, Sir John Simon, in the German chancellor in Berlin in March, 1935, that the cession of British mandated territory was not a discussable question, still remain the unaltered attitude of His Majesty's government."

Sir Samuel Hoare reviewed Prime Minister Baldwin's statement in the House of Commons last April, in which Mr. Baldwin made the legal position of mandates clear. He showed then that no provision was made for the transfer of mandates and assured the house that the government had no intention of raising the matter. Sir Samuel added he hoped that in the present disturbed international situation he would not be expected to elaborate or add to these statements.

The amendment which the conference rejected asked that the delegates accept this declaration as well as the previous ministerial statement that the government would not enter into any commitments without first consulting the Dominions and also the House of Commons. Sanays' original motion was carried by acclamation.

Sir Samuel's speech on defence questions was followed by the conference's unanimous approval of a resolution commending the government's defence policy. In his speech Sir Samuel said the situation had become "decidedly worse" during the past six months, that the "supposed weakness" of the British Empire had become a disturbing factor in international politics, that Germany was spending $4,000,000,000 annually in military expenditure, and that the proportion of the Japanese total budget devoted to the army and navy had reached the striking figure of 68 per cent.

Returns From Northland

Steamship Nascopie Brings News From Arctic Regions

Halifax The ice-reserved steamship Nascopie came back from the Canadian northland, bringing the year's catch of furs from the Arctic regions. Almost complete absence of crime was noted by Inspector Keith Ronson of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who carried out inspections in all the farnorth posts.

"The Eskimos are getting along fine," reported Major D. L. McKeand M.C., officer in charge of the expedition, but he added they had their own "depression," due to a scarcity of caribou their chief supply of clothing. Also seals and walrus, their main food source were difficult to find. Major McKeand said Health of the natives was improving.

Captain R. T. Gray of the R.C.M.P. also long years in the western Arctic, spent at Port Harrison, returned on the Nascopie being relieved by Constable J. Cain. Constable Arthur Mapes, his predecessor, resigned. At Port Harrison Constable W. G. Dunn is replaced Constable L. H. Yeomans and Constable R. N. Market For Livestock

Plans Made For Inspection Of Cattle Before Shipping To England

Saskatoon.—Plans developed in cooperation with the British ministry of agriculture to avoid rejection of Canadian cattle at British ports by inspection in Canada and methods adopted to secure a steady supply for that market were outlined by Hon. J. G. Gardiner, federal minister of agriculture here. The gathering was sponsored by the Saskatoon board of trade for those attending the Saskatoon feeder, show and sale.

Calling attention to the fact that discussion of agricultural po'icies in Canada had tended to centre on wheat, Mr. Gardiner pointed out that livestock and livestock products produced more farm cash income than did wheat and that the livestock men might therefore consider themselves the most important section of Canadian agriculture.

In the House of Commons he had suggested the need of a national marketing policy for farm products and proposed that $800,000 should be spent in making a start in that direction. No member of any party had opposed the proposal to set up a marketing organization.

Mr. Gardiner discussed the great variation in the export surplus of Canadian cattle and the way Canada had sold them alternately in the United States and Great Britain. When one tallied in Great Britain at the expense of supply of beef, the question of steadiness of supply was brought up.

They (cattle) referred to drouth as one reason of irregular supply. In Saskatchewan for example, there were none left in the big grain belt and some 600,000 head on the prairies of the south and west of the province. In difficult years the prairies were unable to maintain that number of cattle. Such years would be likely to come in time.

Farmers in Canada depended for their existence on a continuous market and should be thinking of the problems of the consumer as well as those of the producers of food. He hoped that Great Britain, the United States and Canada could meet any war threat.

Striving To Enforce Peace

Government Using Every Means To Restore Order In Palestine

Jerusalem. The Holy Land awaits proclamation of martial law, authorized by the British cabinet, as a last resort of the Palestine government to end disorders. Two divisions of Great Britain's troops, supported by squadrons of aeroplanes, are striving to enforce peace on Arabs sworn to an undying feud against the Jews, who, they say, are stealing the country from them.

The Arab protest against Jewish immigration and the sale of land to Jews took the form of a general strike, which, it is estimated, has now lasted 24 weeks and resulting disorders, it is estimated, have taken 428 lives The dead are believed to number 27 British soldiers and police, 204 Arabs and 37 Jews. About 1,200 persons have been wounded since the strike began April 19, it is said, and property damage is estimated at $14,000,000.

The authorities charged with pacifying the country, appointed by Britain by the League of Nations after the Great War, face a delicate task. Across the border in Transjordania the most warlike people on earth, the Bedouins, who drove the Turks from the Holy Land in the war, fidget uneasily. It is said that only a judicious distribution of largesse among the chieftains has kept them quiet thus far

The uprising started spontaneously in Jaffa in April, and Arabs claim that slurring remarks from the sidewalks as the cortege passed started a fight. Before the day was over 10 Jews and two Arabs had been killed

Need Skilled Mechanics For Munition Plants In Britain

Montreal. Shortage of skilled mechanics for munition and armament manufacture is being felt in England, according to Major General W. H. Bing, former commanding officer of military district number four who returned to Canada on the Montcalm

General King, who plans to join a company of his soldier sons in the United air force, visited munitions plant and was told the staff of 2,500 would be doubled if more skilled mechanics were available Two years ago he said the same plant had a staff of 50 men manufacturing truck bodies

Similar conditions exist in other branches of armament manufacture, he said.

New Altitude Record

British Pilot Takes His 'Plane 40,987 Feet Above Earth

Farnborough, England.—The Royal Air Force announced Squadron Leader F. R. D. Swain had established a world altitude record of 40,987 feet.

The announcement said Swain flew an experimental 'plane at Bristol, exceeding a record of 40,696 feet set in August. His ship was powered with a special Pegasus motor.

Swain is a member of the experimental section of the R.A.F. establishment at Farnborough. The former record holder was M. J. Detr, of France.

Swain was unaware he had established a new record when he descended from the stratosphere, beside an altimeter, the 'plane carried two sealed "barothermographs" which are so complicated they had to be sent to the national physical laboratory to be read.

The 'plane was a specially sealed suit blown up to maintain ordinary air pressure in the rarefied he gists where he encountered winds of hurricane force.

Major Farm Problem

Dr. W. H. Hendricks Says Low Purchasing Power Is Chief Cause Of Farm Woes In U.S.

Salt Lake City. - Encephalomyelitis—an equine disease almost unknown before 1930—has killed at least 30,000 United States horses, worth more than $2,225,000 agricultural authorities estimate.

Dr. W. H. Hendricks, who as chief veterinarian in one of the most heavily affected states (Utah) has made a first-hand study of the disease, described it as "major American farm problem."

So little is known of the baffling disease, sometimes inaccurately called brain fever or sleeping sickness, that efforts to fight it have been largely futile, he added.

SPAIN CHARGES VIOLATIONS OF NEUTRALITY PACT

Geneva. — The Spanish delegation to the League of Nations published documents charging Italy, Germany and Portugal with furnishing arms to the Spanish insurgents in violation of the European non-intervention pact.

The documents contained letters from Madrid to France, Italy, Germany and Portugal demanding that the "hands off" policy as a blockade against the "legitimate Spanish government."

A note, the documents said, was sent by the Madrid government to the non-intervention committee of the League of Nations, which drove the Turks from the Holy Land, the war was fought unsuccessfully by the chieftains has kept them quiet thus far

Alberta's Resources

Province On Threshold Of A New Era Of Prosperity

Edmonton. Alberta is on the threshold of a new era of prosperity based on production of bituminous sands, gypsum, and salt deposits in the north as well a oil, Hon. Charles Cockroft, provincial treasurer, said here at the opening of the three-day western annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Mr. Cockroft welcomed delegates on behalf of Hon. C. C. Ross, minister of lands and mines, who was unable to attend, and pointed out that with continuance of persistence and optimism of Albertans in development of natural resources in the face of difficulties, Alberta's mining industry may exceed returns of agriculture.

Intensive development of natural resources within the province, together with government resettlement of agricultural drouth areas and industrial advance, "with no ig to plan the time when our difficulties will be over," Mr. Cockroft said

Proposal to establish a large chain coal and timber plant on the south shore of Lesser Slave lake where there are large stands of birch may also be a source of increased prosperity, the provincial treasurer stated

Next annual meeting of the institute will be held in Montreal next March, it was announced by secretary E. J. Carlyle of Montreal, who forecast "the largest meeting in the history of the institute."

Story Of Success

Canadian Becomes President Of Large American Industry

New York The $45,000 000 American Can Company had a new president today, and America another success story as Gordon Hen bert A Baker took a United States citizen, became its chief operating officer

Baker started as well as business man rose through the labor bureau and sales division of the can making concern with which he has been connected since graduation from the University of Toronto in 1909

He was born at Harmony, Ont a suburb of Oshawa. His others would not say in what year, and Baker would not comment on his elevation. He left Canada in his middle 20's.

But the outlines of a romantic career were apparent in the record Four years after he began his business life with American Can Company he became his chief chemist. Eight years later he was manager of the company's central sales division, stationed at Chicago. From there he jumped into the vice-presidency in charge of sales.

He completed his rise when he succeeded C. E. Green, resigned.

Coastal Defence

Air Base In Northern British Columbia Is Projected

Vancouver. During the past nine months the federal government has given careful consideration to Canada's coastal defence, particularly on the Pacific coast, Hon. Ian Mackenzie, national minister of defence said on his arrival here.

The minister said the government was considering the establishment of a northern coastal air base in British Columbia with the possibility of an intermediate base between the Queen Charlotte islands and Vancouver.

Mr. Mackenzie said $375,000 would be spent on the Jericho air station in the immediate future and the contract had been let for the first of this work.

"We borrowed the money in good faith and now are faced with necessity of footing the bill," Mr. Crerar said. "Yet Canada has greater potential wealth than probably any country in the world. It makes us wonder if we are still the careful people we were.

"I think we can foot the bill if we are careful and prudent."

To Receive Degree

Victoria University To Bestow Degree Of Doctor Of Divinity On Baron Tweedsmuir

Toronto. Believed to be the first time in Canada the conferment of the doctor of divinity degree on a layman that honor will be received by Baron Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, from Victoria University, October 10, at the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the institution's royal charter

Lord Tweedsmuir's tenure of the post of lord high commissioner to the church of Scotland in 1933 and 1934 as well as His Excellency's well known intellectual achievements, were the "honors causa" on which the university authorities based their request that he accept the degree usually reserved for theologians.

Others who will receive the D.D. degree from Victoria, Oct. 10 at the same time as Baron Tweedsmuir, the university of Toronto with which Victoria is affiliated are Rt. Rev Peter Bryce, Toronto moderator of the United Church of Canada, Rt. H. R. PARKER, B.A. GUEST OF HONOR AT CONVENTION BANQUET

Upwards of 175 teachers and their friends attended the banquet at the Elks hall Thursday evening. This is an annual event and with the dance following marks the social "half hour" of the convention. At the head table were Mr. A. C. Major, president of the association, who presided over the gathering, Mayor and Mrs. C. W. Robinson, Inspector and Mrs. MacLeod, H. R. Parker, former inspector, R. W. Hedley and W. D. Mclougall of Edmonton. Mayor C. W. Robinson extended the visiting teachers a cordial welcome on behalf of the citizens of Vermilion and incidentally revealed that he himself at one time wielded the rod and was therefore within sympathetic range of the high achievements of the professionals. He invited them to come back next year and from the applause it would appear as if his invitation had been accepted instanter. J. W. G. Morrison, K.C., was called upon as representative of the Board of Trade. Mr. Morrison outlined the aims and purposes of that institution, one of which was the fostering of a neighborly spirit between town and district. Teachers should develop that spirit of neighborliness in the communities in which they lived so that it might be said of them in after years it was a good thing for the community that they had been there. Inspector MacLeod received his appreciation for the fine reception accorded to him as a new man on the field and felt that as they became better acquainted there would be the utmost harmony between him and the field men. The most interesting feature of the evening's program was the presentation to retiring Inspector H.R. Parker of a golf bag club bar and dressing case from the teachers of the inspectorate. The presentation was made by President Majury who conveyed to the recipient the well wishes and heartfelt appreciation of the teachers of the district for all that Mr. Parker had done for them during his long period as inspector. Mr. Parker responded very feelingly to the presentation, thanked the teachers for their manifest interest in his welfare and assured them he would have their future success in mind. He wished them all well and the best of luck in their chosen profession. The banquet closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. Parker was also the recipient of a fine chesterfield chair from the other school inspectors of Alberta.

INFORMATION WANTED RE: MISSING SON

Mother Wants William Blake

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of William Francis Blake should immediately communicate with the Standard Vermilion, or direct to Mrs. E. M. Blake, 214 Queen St. West Norwood, S.E. 27, London England. William Blake was here a few years ago and received treatment through the local office. Any information would be greatly appreciated as his mother is very anxious to locate him.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT FIRST UNITED CHURCH

A well-known figure in the religious life of Edmonton, Rev. H. A. McLeod M.A., B.D., of Robertson church will visit Vermilion in the capacity of Guest Preacher at the Anniversary services of First United church. A gifted preacher, a man of fine Christian character and spirit, Mr. McLeod has a fresh appeal, vitality, the quickening of our moral and spiritual life. In the morning he will discourse with a sermon on "The Resources of Power" and in the evening he will unveil for us "The Precious Word." As a preparation for the churches mission on "The Evangelization of Canadian Life" we are upon all our people the importance of attending both diets of worship. A cordial invitation is also extended to all others who are free to hear these messages. Special music will be rendered by the choir.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN BIBLE SOCIETY TO MAKE ANNUAL CANVAS

The annual canvas on behalf of the British and Foreign Bible Society will be made during the last week of October and the first week in November. When the canvasser appeals to you for support on this worthy object — the Bible is still published in greater numbers each year and in more languages than any other book and there is still a greater demand for it than ever — your support is greatly required.

TALENTED CHILDREN SINGERS IN VERMILION SATURDAY AND SUNDAY

Will Appear in Several Programs

Don't forget the musical treat that is awaiting the people of Vermilion on October 17 and 18 when the Salvation Army Juvenile party from Edmonton will be visiting here. This group is composed of all trained children's voices and will provide a real feast for music lovers. They will give a short sample program on the street Saturday evening at 8 p.m. o'clock. On Sunday morning they will be at the Presbyterian church at 11 o'clock and in the evening will be at the Salvation Army hall at 7.30.

The young singers will be accompanied by their leader, Mr. W. Eade who is an accomplished pianist, and also by a special speaker in the person of Major Junker.

All who enjoy really good singing are cordially invited and should make it a point to hear these talented young artists.

Large Attendance at Convention Last Thursday and Friday

The 11th annual convention of the Vermilion Inspectorate was held last Thursday and Friday with the largest attendance on record. There were 175 registered. A great interest was taken in all the proceedings with the result that it was possibly the most successful convention ever held here. The new curriculum was the main topic throughout the sessions.

At the business meeting on Friday afternoon the following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres — H. R. Parker, B.A.
Pres. — G.K. Brady, Mannville.
Vice-Pres — Roy Fraser, Kitscoty
Sec.-Treas — Jos. Perl, Vermilion
Auditor — Iturls Lipsey, Vermil
Exec. — Mr. Grant, Mr. Macumber, Miss Masters, Mr. Montetroff, Miss Dodd, Mr. Plater.

Following the invocation on Thursday morning by Canon Laverseddge Inspector MacLeod gave the convention some idea of what he expected to find in the schools in his inspectorate. The address was interesting and extremely helpful. Mr. Grant of Camrose U.F.A. representative arose and in a few words outlined activities of the teachers and of the value he can be to the community.

In the afternoon Mr. MacDougall of the Edmonton public school gave a very helpful address on "Social Studies" and Miss Helen Hanning of Mannville, a pioneer in Enterprise work discussed in some detail her experiences of last year. She offered many helpful and constructive ideas which should prove of great value especially to the rural teacher.

The banquet in the evening was attended by 160 people a feature of the program being the presentation of a club bar and dressing case to the retired inspector Mr. H. R. Parker, B.A. in recognition of his valuable services for over 25 years. Mayor C. W. Robinson spoke in behalf of the town and J. W. G. Morrison for the Board of Trade.

On Friday R.W. Hedley of the Edmonton Normal school gave some valuable hints and suggestions on how courses in agriculture in the plantation in modern times — particularly in this school.

Miss F. Carrick of Vermilion school teacher presented a humorous reading on a Dog Story a Kitscoty Enterprise. The pianist for the convention was Miss Richer of the Normal school Edmonton described in some detail the work carried on in that institution last year and offered valuable suggestions on its application to teacher.

The session came to a close with Mr. Hedley speaking on "Enterprise" the business session.
